LOGGERS ENCROACHING ON THEIR ANCESTRAL LANDS, SAYING THAT THE NATIVES HAD FILED THEIR CASE 25 YEARS TOO LATE.

THE JUDGE RULED THAT THE TRIBAL MEMBERS SHOULD HAVE CONTESTED STATE LEGISLATION WHICH QUASHED THEIR NATIVE RIGHTS WITHIN THREE YEARS AFTER 1958, WHEN THE EXTINGUISHMENT OF NATIVES CUSTOMARY RIGHTS ACT WAS PASSED.

THE NATIVES HAVE APPEALED THE DECISION TO THE SUPREME COURT. DURING THE PAST SEVERAL YEARS TRIBAL MEMBERS HAVE BEEN FIGHTING A LOSING BATTLE AGAINST TIMBER COMPANIES, WHICH THEY CLAIM HAVE RUINED THEIR LIVELIHOOD BY FLOODING RIVERS, SCARING AWAY GAME AND DESTROYING MEDICINAL PLANTS THROUGH INDISCRIMINATE LOGGING.

THE ENVIRONMENTAL GROUP APPEALED TO THE SARAWAK POLICE TO RELEASE THE TRIBESMEN AND ASKED THE GOVERNMENT TO RECOGNIZE NATIVE RIGHTS OVER ANCESTRAL LANDS.

THE OFFICIALS SAID THE DECISION WAS BASED ON THE MINISTRY'S JUDGMENT THAT THE CURRENT SLUGGISH PRICE OF NIPPON TELEGRAPH AND TELEPPHONE CORP. (NTT) STOCKS IS DUE PARTLY TO A BAN ON FOREIGNERS HOLDING SHARES IN THE TELECOMMUNICATIONS GIANT.

FALLS CHURCH, VA (AUG. 3) MCS-- A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

IN THE NEWS:

The LABOR DEPARTMENT reports this morning that unemployment soared 0.3% to 5.5% in July. That's the highest U.S. jobless rate in two years. Non-farm jobs fell 219,000, or 57,000 not counting Census layoffs. The consensus expectation had been for a 0.1 percentage point increase to 5.3%. Non-farm payrolls were expected to have increased 5,300, or 130,000 if the impact of Census worker layoffs was excluded. Bond prices are rising on the unemployment news and the dollar is easing. ... The Nikkei closes down 729.42. ... By midday, the FT 100 was up 1.6.

The COMMERCE DEPARTMENT reported yesterday that factory orders fell 1.5% from May to June. ... ALLIANZ AG of West Germany, Europe's largest insurance company, says it will acquire FIREMAN'S FUND INSURANCE for $3.3 billion. ... BEAR, STEARNS CO. says fourth-quarter earnings tumbled 30% from the same quarter last year. ... DELTA AIR LINES and the AIR LINE PILOTS ASSOCIATION agree on a three-year contract. ... A federal judge rules that striking EASTERN AIRLINES pilots have the right to replace trainees hired during the carrier's rebuilding. ... R.H. MACY & CO. says it has sold a 1% stake in the company for a price that values its overall equity at $1.5 billion -- about four times what investors paid when the company went private four years ago.

WHAT'S AHEAD:

UNITED TECHNOLOGIES' PRATT & WHITNEY unit says it will cut about 4,000 jobs over the next three years. ... U.S. TRADE REPRESENTATIVE CARLA HILLS says there is only a "50.1%" chance that ongoing trade talks will end with an agreement that expands global free-trade rules.

FROM THE BEARS:

"What we've been seeing is some technical deterioration within the marketplace," says KENNETH SPENCE of SALOMON BROTHERS. He is worried by the market's lack of breadth, as evidenced by the 8-point decline in the NASDAQ index. "We're still expecting the market is going to trade lower, probably down to the 200-day moving average on the Dow," says Spence. He says short-term interest rates may decline, but long-term rates will remain steady. Spence predicts a 10% correction over the next six to eight weeks, but says the market has good support around 2700-2750. (FNN "Marketwrap", 8/2)

"The market had been showing signs of a correction, so Thursday's losses were compounded by Iraq," says WALTER LOICK, president of LBS CAPITAL MANAGEMENT. "We probably still have more of a move to the downside. But if the Dow falls below 2820 [support level] it could go a lot farther south." ("USA Today", 8/3)

SURESH BHIRUD of OPPENHEIMER & CO., says a likely rise in oil prices will hit stocks as "a prolonged, painful Chinese torture" in which share prices go down gradually rather than plunging and then rebounding quickly. "The risk here is that the price of oil can go up much higher than people are willing to believe," he says. (WSJ, 8/3)

STOCK MARKET:

Uncertainty will set the market back again today, according to PAINEWEBBER's investment strategist MARY FARRELL, who says nervousness could be heightened because of events which might happen in the Mideast over the weekend. But Farrell isn't completely pessimistic. "As difficult as this situation is, it is contained to a great extent. And still you're looking at the opening of Eastern Europe, explosive growth in the Pacific Basin, U.S. consumer products companies selling abroad and also industrial companies benefiting from Eastern Europe." (CNBC "World Business", 8/3)

"We were in a nervous market before and now we've had something [the Mideast flare-up] that obviously caught a lot of people by surprise," says THOMAS CALLAHAN of YAMAICHI INTERNATIONAL. (WSJ, 8/3)

"It does appear that oil prices are going to be higher," says MITCHELL MEISLER of SHEARSON LEHMAN HUTTON. "Obviously, we've set the stage for some pretty choppy markets." ("The Washington Post", 8/3)

Yesterday's slide is "a continuation of the trend we've been seeing here since the market peaked at the 3000 level several weeks ago," says EUGENE PERONI JR., director of technical research at JANNEY MONTGOMERY SCOTT. He says the market is "digesting" the gains it has seen since April. He thinks the market will trend slightly lower, but he does not see "any severe breakdown." (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 8/2)

SHEARSON LEHMAN's ELIOT FRIED says yesterday's market decline was "just a total reaction to Iraq" -- an overreaction, at that. GREG DRAHUSCHAK of BUTCHER & SINGER says the Mideast problems are not through affecting the market. "It's certainly not Armageddon, but I suspect a second shoe will drop on this thing," says Drahuschak. ("USA Today", 8/3)

"I was very encouraged by the market action today," says JOSEPH BATTIPAGLIA of GRUNTAL & CO. "It responded as you would expect, but not as dramatically as some thought it might." He says the market has been overvalued, and needed a correction. (CNBC "Market Wrap- Up", 8/2)

"It's been a whirlwind for most of the day," says RON DORAN, director of institutional trading at C.L. KING & ASSOCIATES. Iraq's invasion of Kuwait triggered a surge in oil prices, reviving fears of inflation and sparking sharp drops in U.S. share prices in the heaviest trading of the year. Doran continued, "People were trying to understand the net effects and ramifications of the Middle Eastern problem." (Reuters, 8/2)

"They can talk about Iraq and Kuwait, but it merely masks the problems at hand -- the threat of a recession, high interest rates, inflation and the federal budget deficit," says THOMAS WALSH of NIKKO SECURITIES. "Once the situation in Kuwait clears, you still have those basic underlying economic problems." ("USA Today", 8/3)

STOCK TIPS:

Serious technical deterioration took place while all eyes were on Dow 3000 says STAN WEINSTEIN in the "Professional Tape Reader." "The overwhelming majority of stocks have seen their highs for this cycle," says Weinstein who advises investors to pay closer attention to market sectors and individual stocks rather than the Dow. His favorite sectors: aluminum, drugs and oil-well equipment. Avoid: airlines, broadcasting and toys. (CNBC "World Business", 8/3)

GM and FORD are the favorite stocks of JACK KIRNAN, auto analyst for KIDDER PEABODY. "We think there's a lot of diversity in those companies, balance sheet strength and cash flow strength that will reward investors on a longer term time frame." EATON is a good play on the re-industrialization of America, says Kirnan. He thinks SNAP- ON TOOLS will benefit from the aging of the U.S. auto fleet as well as from the emerging European auto aftermarket. (CNN "Business Day", 8/3)

"The move in oil stocks ... creates a profit-taking opportunity," says GEORGE GASPAR of ROBERT W. BAIRD & CO. He sees crude prices dropping back to $21 a barrel later this summer, then slowly moving as high as $25 a barrel by fall or winter. MICHAEL MAYER of WERTHEIM SCHRODER sees ATLANTIC RICHFIELD and TEXACO as good buys in the oils. Gaspar likes MARATHON, and WILLIAM BROWN of KIDDER PEABODY considers ROYAL DUTCH/SHELL the industry leader. ("USA Today", 8/3)

A number of analysts are recommending food stocks to investors. "The financial characteristics of most of these companies are significantly better than the financial characteristics of most of the market in general " says ROGER SPENCER of PAINE WEBBER. But RONALD MORROW of SMITH BARNEY says "you have to be real, real persnickety" about which stocks to buy. "We still see a lot of opportunities to make money in the group, but you don't necessarily buy them all," says JOHN McMILLIN of PRUDENTIAL-BACHE. GENERAL MILLS is a near universal favorite. Others widely recommended include GERBER, CONAGRA INC. and RALSTON PURINA. (NYT, 8/3)

MAL LOWENTHAL of SHEARSON LEHMAN HUTTON says the best way for investors to play it safe in the current environment is to stay out of the stock market and buy either government bonds or corporate bonds with at least a double-A rating. For those interested in stocks, however, his favorite buys are GLAXO HOLDINGS and SAMNA CORP. His top short sales are McDONNELL DOUGLAS, L.A. GEAR, BAYBANKS, MNC FINANCIAL and C.R. BARD. ("USA Today", 8/3)

KENNETH SPENCE of SALOMON BROTHERS says he would not make investments right now, "but I would watch very closely things like the consumer non-cyclical stocks, such as GILLETTE and PHILIP MORRIS. (FNN "Marketwrap", 8/2)

"I question the quality of the earnings of SIERRA ON-LINE INC.," says SETH FEINSTEIN of NEWHARD COOK/ADVEST. He says the company has capitalized much of its R&D costs, and will have to begin paying for them in the second half. "I like the company long-term, but it's going to be tough for them and the industry this year," says Feinstein, who has lowered his earnings estimates from $1.65 to $1.50. ("Investor's Daily", 8/3)

GRUNTAL & CO. recommends stock in FURON CO., a maker of tubing, seals, ducts and other specialized products sold to auto, aircraft and other industrial companies. The brokerage says earnings should grow 12% to 14% annually over the next few years. It notes the company's products are sold to a wide range of industries, which

FALLS CHURCH, VA (AUG. 3) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

"Sentiment is still bearish on the dollar," says CHRISTIANCE MANDELL of SECURITY PACIFIC MERCHANT BANK. "People still basically want to be short dollars and were anxious to get rid of them quickly even after they bought them" following the invasion. ("Investor's Daily", 8/3)

BASSAM SNAIJE of BSI explains the overnight rally in the dollar as "a panic reaction, a run for 'quality' and power, supposedly." He says gold is a better safe haven than the greenback. "The dollar is in trouble, the United States economy is in trouble, and that will be reflected in the prices as soon as the political and military crises" are resolved, according to Snaije. He predicts new lows for the dollar and a decline in interest rates. (FNN "Marketwrap", 8/2)

"You bought the dollar on the invasion [of Kuwait], but when it appeared that what was going to happen next was not electric, you sold the dollar," says RICHARD WITTEN of GOLDMAN SACHS & CO. (NYT, 8/3)

The dollar came off it's highs yesterday after the market began thinking Iraq would shortly withdraw from Kuwait, says TOM BENFER of the BANK OF MONTREAL. "But now we're not so sure that's going to happen ... As long as those tensions are there, I'm not so sure how low the dollar will go."

(FNN "World Business Update", 8/2)

Analysts say the underlying market sentiment remained against the dollar because of growing signs of a weakening U.S. economy that could lead to lower interest rates. "Today's recovery in currency futures was an illustration of how rooted the bearishness against the dollar has gotten," says MARC CHANDLER, a futures analyst at MMS INTERNATIONAL. (Reuters, 8/2)

"You have a situation where people flock to the dollar and flock to gold simply because they're stable in times of uncertainty," says PETER REDLING of GEORGETOWN FUTURES. THOMAS WALSH, vice president of equity trading for NIKKO SECURITIES, agrees, noting the energy sector also is firming in response to events in the Middle East. "The only positive that comes out of this, if it a positive, in respect to the stock market, is that all of these energy issues are very, very strong." (CNBC "Business View", 8/2)

Rising oil prices will delay Fed easing, says DAVID JONES, chief economist at AUBREY G. LANSTON, who sees the Fed caught between a slowing economy and the threat of inflation accelerated by oil price hikes. "I think they have to ease ... but rates are not going to come down as fast as they should to help keep this economy out of recession." Jones believes there's a better than even chance the U.S. will slip into a recession early in 1991. (CNN "Business Morning", 8/3)

"It is unlikely that the Fed is about to lower interest rates, even if the current economic situation increases the chances for a recession," says ROBERT BRUSCA of NIKKO SECURITIES.. "This is what bothered many bond investors [yesterday]." (NYT, 8/3)

"The Iraqi move has clearly confused the developing outlook regarding interest rates," says ERIC MILLER of DONALDSON, LUFKIN & JENRETTE. "It adds an extra dampener to the economy because higher [oil prices] will swell the inflation rate and cut into disposable income." Miller believes that may hurt American corporations' profits as well. ("Investor's Daily", 8/3)

"Interestingly enough," the Iraqi invasion does not rule out the possibility of a further Fed easing, according to JOSEPH BATTIPAGLIA of GRUNTAL & CO. "The Fed could do little to control oil prices," explains Battipaglia. "What they could do, of course, is push us into a dramatic recession so demand falls, but I don't think they want that." He says FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD CHAIRMAN ALAN GREENSPAN may ease because of political pressure. (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 8/2)

"The big questions in the bond market when we went home Wednesday were how much higher prices would go and whether the delay over the federal budget was preventing the Fed from slashing interest rates," says JONAHAN GREENSPAN, chief trader at AEGIS CAPITAL MANAGEMENT CORP. "We woke up to a cold inflation shower, with Treasury bond prices already crumbling overseas on news of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait." (NYT, 8/3)

"Fundamentally, [the Kuwait invasion] is not good for bonds, it's not good for corporate earnings and therefore, it's not good for stocks," says STEVEN EINHORN of GOLDMAN, SACHS. (WSJ, 8/3)

THE ECONOMY:

"We've been expecting something of a slowdown [in the economy] and then a rebound," says MICHAEL BOSKIN, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers. "Because of the backup in interest rates and some other factors we now expect that slowdown to stretch out a little longer and the rebound to be a little more gradual and occur a little later." Boskin predicts real GNP growth of 2,2% this year and 2.9% in 1991 and unemployment of 5.4% this year and 5.6% in 1991. (FNN "Marketwrap", 8/2)

Higher oil prices would be "distasteful," but not crippling, according to SUNG WON SOHN, chief economist at NORWEST BANK. "From an economic point of view, in comparison to 1973 or 1979, this a mouse compared to an elephant." ("Investor's Daily", 8/3)

"We're in a precarious position, on the edge of a recession," says THOMAS RUNIEWICZ, an economist with the WEFA GROUP in Bala-Cynwyd, Pa. "With the problems in the Middle East and the threat of higher oil prices, that may be just enough to push us over." (NYT, 8/3)

"This is an economy walking on a precipice," says ROBERT DEDRICK, chief economist at NORTHERN TRUST CO. "The last thing it needs is a stiff wind that could push it over. A big jump in oil prices could be that stiff wind." ("Investor's Daily", 8/3)

"The economy was teetering on a cliff anyway," says New York investor MICHAEL HARKINS. "This [the Kuwait invasion] could push it over." JOHN CONNOLLY of DEAN WITTER recommended yesterday that clients more 20% of their investment portfolios into cash. "This not a passing," he says. "This not something that is going to go away this afternoon. It is a basic change in oil politics in the Middle East." (WSJ, 8/3)

"If Iraq really wants the price to stay high and cuts Kuwait's production, will the Saudis make up that shortfall?" asks PETER CANELO of BEAR, STEARNS & CO. "We believe the Saudis will increase production to achieve stability." (NYT, 8/3)

"Not since the Iranian revolution of 1979 have we seen a geopolitical event that threatens world oil production and prices as much as this,"

says PETER GIGNOUX of LEHMAN BROTHERS in London. "If not recession, this certainly carries the theat of stagflation where oil prices rise and exacerbates inflation and at the same time reduces the economic growth rate," says NORMAN ROBERTSON of MELLON BANK CORP. "It's a very vicious brew here." (WSJ, 8/3)

"I think you have to take higher oil prices as a given," explains ROBERT BRUSCA, chief economist of NIKKO SECURITIES, "because you've got this hostility that's underpining the oil prices -- you have Iraq in charge of it own production as well as that of Kuwait's and most likely affecting the production of these other countries too." HENRY SCHULER, of the CENTER FOR STRATEGIC & INTERNATIONAL STUDIES puts a number on the expected oil price increase, "We can expect to see [oil] prices 40% to 50% higher than they have been in recent months." WILLIAM SULLIVAN of DEAN WITTER says: "Any substantial and sustained boost in energy prices would greatly effect the level of inflation. Any boost in energy could easily get the core rate of inflation up to 6% or 6 1/2% in quick order." (CNBC "Business View", 8/2)

"I think we may already be in a recession even though people are afraid to call it one," says ANTHONY WOODRUFF of KIDDER PEABODY. "All the economic statistics point to that." (WSJ, 8/3)

BRIAN KEYSER of FIRST FIDELITY BANCORP. thinks the economy will struggle for the next several months. "We'll be in the same environment we've been in for the last year or year and a half," predicts Keyser. (WSJ, 8/3)

Help-wanted advertising was down again in June, slipping to its lowest level since the mid-1980s, but the CONFERENCE BOARD predicts higher employment as a result of a slight jump in growth. "I'm not looking for a huge bounce back, but rather a subdued one," says Conference Board economist KEN GOLDSTEIN. (WSJ, 8/3)

IN WASHINGTON:

The SMALL BUSINESS ADMINISTRATION says at least $500 million in government-backed loans to small business are in liquidation and may never be repaid. That's five times more than a decade ago. "It's obvious [the program] has been totally mismanaged over the years," says SEN. TOM HARKIN (D. - Iowa.) ("USA Today", 8/3)

At hearings on Capitol Hill yesterday, MICHAEL BOSKIN, chairman of the Council of Economic Advisers., told REP. LEE HAMILTON (D. - Ind.) that President Bush had included $7 billion in the 1990 budget to run the RESOLUTION TRUST CORP. "What is your estimate of what it's going to take now?" asked Hamilton. SPOKANE, WASH. (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Inland Gold and Silver Corp. (NASDAQ: INGS) has recently retained Dr. Ralph J. Roberts and Dr. Raul J. Madrid of Conquistador Gold Ltd. to evaluate their Toiyabe project in the Bald Mountain Window of the northern Toiyabe Range, the company said today. This project comprises a 50-square-mile area within which Inland's producing Toiyabe mine is situated.

Roberts and Madrid find that the Toiyabe property has an excellent potential for the discovery of additional gold reserves to augment those currently delineated by Inland's mining staff. These potential reserves may occur in step-out zones adjacent to existing pits, in new shallow target areas, and in major deep zones. Gold bearing systems are present over much of the 5- to 6-km wide zone across the Toiyabe property, a width similar to that of the Carlin gold belt.

Several factors enter in these assessments. These include the geologic setting of the property which includes mineralization of both upper and lower plates of the Roberts Mountains thrust; the occurrence of zones of intrusives along the gold belt within which the property occurs; and the intensity and breadth of mineralization found within the property. Roberts and Madrid find that the geologic setting and the types of mineralization present on the Toiyabe property are similar to those found in gold deposits along the Carlin belt and in sedimentary-rock-hosted gold deposits along the Battle Mountain gold belt.

Gold-related mineralization occurs over much of the property, but 80-90 percent remains unexplored. Inland has an excellent property position that provides a large area suitable for continued detailed and grass-roots exploration for gold mineralized zones.

Inland Gold and Silver Corp. has signed a lease agreement giving Inland the exclusive right to explore and develop a 2,160-acre gold property in Nevada.

The Annie Property, comprised of 108 contiguous unpatented mining claims, covers a portion of a major northwest-trending mineralized structural zone which contains FMC Gold Co.'s Paradise Peak Mine (1.29 million ounces of gold) located 4-1/2 miles southeast of the Annie Property, and Kennecott's Denton-Rawhide Mine (1.63 million ounces of gold) located 24 miles northwest of the Annie Property.

Hydrothermally altered volcanic rocks of the favorable Paradise Peak's stratigraphy can be projected under gravel cover into the major northwest-trending structure covered by the Annie claims.

Geologic and geophysical surveys will commence immediately to define the best drill targets on the Annie Property.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - The Food and Drug Administration today said its review of non-prescription drugs to relieve symptoms of hemorrhoids and other rectal conditions has found 33 active ingredients safe and effective for protecting the skin, reducing swelling, or relieving discomfort, itching and inflammation.

"It should be reassuring to consumers that at least one of these ingredients is present in virtually every major non-prescription rectal product sold in this $150 million industry," said William E. Gilbertson, director of FDA's Division of Over-the-Counter Drug Evaluation.

Today's final rule, however, bans more than 30 other ingredients FDA says have not been proven safe and effective, including boric acid as an antiseptic, lanolin alcohols as a skin protectant, and both cod liver oil and Peruvian balsam as ingredients for treating wounds.

While some products no longer contain these ingredients, those that do include them will have to be reformulated when the regulation becomes effective in 12 months. It was published in today's Federal Register.

FDA said it was not ready to take final action on two ingredients now under review that are expected to take some time to resolve and would have delayed today's ruling. Any products with these ingredients may remain in the marketplace and are not subject to the final rule.

The first concerns the effectiveness of a live yeast cell derivative as a wound-healing agent for relief of hemorrhoidal symptoms. The makers of Preparation H have submitted two clinical studies on the ingredient.

The other issue involves a decision on whether to permit the use of hydrocortisone in combination with other non-prescription ingredients, including the topical anesthetic pramoxine. No non-prescription products with these combinations currently exist, but some manufacturers wish to produce them.

FDA said it would permit rectal products with certain ingredients approved as effective for specific conditions to make such claims on their labels as "for the temporary relief of discomfort," "helps relieve itching" and "temporarily shrinks hemorrhoidal tissue."

Labels will also have to carry warnings specific to certain ingredients. For instance, labels of products with ingredients that temporarily shrink hemorrhoidal tissue will have to state: "Do not use this product if you have heart disease, high blood pressure, thyroid disease, diabetes or difficulty in urination due to enlargement of the prostate gland unless directed by a doctor."

(AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Philadelphia Electric Co. (NYSE: PE) reported today that Unit No. 3 at the Peach Bottom Atomic Power Station in York County has returned to service.

PE said the unit began producing electricity for the region's power grid at 10 p.m. last night. It is scheduled to be gradually increased to full power in the next few days.

The unit was shut down on July 27 due to low vacuum in its steam condenser.

During the shutdown, there was a brief release of radioactive gas into the atmosphere. PE said radiation measured for the entire week at the boundary of the plant, including the release during the shutdown, was .0009 millirem (mr), a very small fraction of a chest X-ray, which is about 20 mr.

PE said the cause of loss of vacuum was a valve malfunction in the steam condenser air removal system. During the outage, the valve was repaired and additional maintenance was performed before the unit was returned to service.

Peach Bottom Unit 2 continued to operate at 100 percent power during the Unit 3 outage.

FORT WORTH, TX (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Texas-New Mexico Power Company, a wholly owned subsidiary of TNP Enterprises, Inc. (NYSE: TNP), today announced that the administrative law judge (ALJ) has recommended that the Public Utility Commission of Texas adopt an order which issues a Certificate of Convenience and Necessity for Units One and Two of TNP ONE, the Robertson County lignite-fueled electric generating project.

This report represents the culmination of proceedings before the PUCT's hearings division as was directed by the commissioners in December 1989.

The ALJ's recommendation that the commission adopt the findings of her report is based on additional information presented during the 1990 hearings and the information contained in the hearing examiner's report issued by the ALJ in the original 1987 CCN proceeding.

The ALJ's report sets forth a schedule for the parties to respond to the report and the case has been scheduled for consideration by the commissioners at an open meeting on Aug. 29, 1990. At that meeting, final action on the ALJ's report will be determined by the commissioners. Management believes that the PUCT will ultimately reaffirm the certification of the first and second units of TNP ONE.

As previously announced, in April TNP filed with the commission an application for increased rates that included Unit One in rate base and recognizes its effect on the utility's cost of service.

TNP will continue to pursue the appropriate legal and regulatory avenues to resolve these issues. Favorable and timely regulatory treatment with respect to the project is essential to the financial integrity of TNP.

BUFFALO, NY (Aug. 3) PR Newswire - Barrister Information Systems Corporation (AMEX: BIS) announced today that it has signed a contract with Halloran & Sage, a fifty-attorney firm located in Hartford, Conn., for the first installation of its new Advanced Law Firm Management System software.

After years of intense product development, the state-of-the-art software package, based on relational data base technology, currently referred to as ALFMS, will bring a new level of power and sophistication to law firm financial management, while providing a base on which to build as the needs of the law firm grow.

A Barrister client since 1982, Halloran & Sage decided to upgrade its present system in an effort to increase service to its clients while reducing overhead costs.

With the new Barrister(TM) system in place, instead of having timekeepers' "chargeable time" routinely collected and forwarded to the accounting department for entry into the system, individual timekeepers, including attorneys, secretaries, and administrative personnel will be able to enter charges directly.

According to Harold Cort, administrator for the firm, the upgrade of their present Barrister system will dramatically improve the firm's accounting operations.

Based on the anticipated increases in productivity, and improved ability to manage timekeeper profitability, the firm projects a short payback period on the Barrister software investment. Cort further stated that the Barrister ALFMS software will easily accommodate the firm's financial management needs through the 1990s and beyond.

Henry P. Semmelhack, president of Barrister Information Systems Corporation stated, "This contract is an important milestone in the history of the company. This first installation of the company's ALFMS software, at the law firm of Halloran & Sage, represents the culmination of several years of development on this advanced software product.

"ALFMS is a leadership product, designed to fill a specific void within the UNIX(TM)-based segment of the legal software market, where there are no discernible leaders. This unique software system has been designed as a true 'Law Office Management' system, in contrast to the traditional 'back office' accounting systems so prevalent in law firms today.

"In addition to providing standard accounts payable and general ledger functions, it will also provide marketing and personnel management capabilities. We are convinced that ALFMS is the standard by which other law firm financial systems will be judged."

CHAPEL HILL, NC (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Kenan Transport Company (NASDAQ: KTCO) today reported results for the second quarter of 1990.

Revenue for the second quarter of 1990 was $11,505,000, an increase of $274,000 and 2 percent from the second quarter of 1989. Net income was $203,000, a decrease of $362,000 and 64 percent. Earnings per share were $.09 compared to $.24.

Revenue for the six months ended June 30, 1990 was $23,651,000, an increase of $646,000 and 3 percent over the first half of 1989. Net income was $801,000, a decrease of $416,000 and 34 percent. Earnings per share were $.34 compared to $.52.

Operating results for the quarter and the first half were affected by adjustments to reserves for accidents and claims that reduced second quarter net income by $480,000. The adjustments reflect the effect of unfavorable developments on estimated costs of workers compensation and accident claims that occurred over the last three years. Workers compensation costs, which tend to require longer settlement times, are being driven higher by rapidly increasing medical costs and the trend toward greater involvement by the legal system in claims settlement. These developments are having a pronounced effect on operating costs of trucking and other labor-intensive industries.

PITTSBURGH (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - National Intergroup Inc. (NII) (NYSE: NII) today reported continuing improvement in operating income from its FoxMeyer Drug Co. subsidiary with a 40 percent increase over the first quarter of its 1990 fiscal year.

However, due to the establishment of estimated reserves associated with the final steps of its restructuring plan, the company reported a net loss of $281.7 million, or $13.01 per common share after preferred dividends, for the period.

NII reported that it has established reserves of $239.5 million to cover anticipated losses on the sale of its Ben Franklin and Permian Corp. subsidiaries, including a write-off of $30.3 million of FoxMeyer goodwill related to the Ben Franklin business. These reserves are based upon estimated net realizable values of the businesses as determined through analyses prepared by the company and independent investment bankers. Included in the reserves are the estimated results of operations through the projected disposition dates as well as related transaction costs. In addition, the company recorded a $26.7 million charge associated with the closing of the Pittsburgh office and a $14.8 million non-recurring charge reflecting the market value of the preferred stock and expenses related to the National Steel transaction. These losses were partially offset by a $12.0 million gain on the sale of the company's information services subsidiary, Genix Enterprises Inc., to MCN Corp., a holding company for Michigan Consolidated Gas Co. NII reported net income of $13.0 million, or $0.53 per common share after preferred dividends, in the comparable quarter last year.

EL PASO, TEXAS (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - William F. Farah, the former chairman and chief executive of Farah Incorporated (NYSE: FRA), who is trying to remove a majority of the board of directors through a proxy fight, said today his main objective, if he wins, would be to sell the company within two years at the best available price.

Mr. Farah said the book value of Farah, one of the country's largest manufacturers of men's slacks, was approximately $9.60 per share at April 30, 1990. Such amount is an estimate which is exclusive of anticipated losses for the third quarter of fiscal 1990, he said. "I will work like the dickens," Mr. Farah said, "to turn things around and make this company attractive to an industry buyer." Mr. Farah's parents founded the company 70 years ago and the former chairman is still the largest shareholder, with approximately 16 percent of the common stock.

Farah Incorporated reported sales for the half ended April 30, 1990, of $59.2 million against sales from continuing operations of $78.6 million for the same period last year with a net loss of $1,993,000, after a non-recurring gain of $1,272,000, in fiscal 1990 against income of $166,000 (exclusive of $2,925,000 of losses related to a discontinued operation) in the prior year. Mr. Farah said, however, that operative losses for the six months ended April 30, 1990, were $5.4 million and that based on internal financial statements provided to him, the company had additional operating losses of approximately $5.8 million in May and June of this year.

A special stockholders meeting will be held Aug. 10 in El Paso in which Mr. Farah is attempting to unseat six directors and current management is trying to unseat Mr. Farah and one other director.

ROCHESTER, NY (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Rochester Gas and Electric Corporation (RG&E) (NYSE: RGS) has filed a petition with the New York Public Service Commission asking for increased revenues for electricity and gas.

The company is seeking relief that would raise electric revenues by $38.4 million, or 6.3 percent, and $5.9 million in gas revenues, or a 2.6 percent increase. No increases would take effect until July 1991.

If approved in full, a typical residential electric customer who uses 500 kilowatt-hours of electricity a month would realize a monthly increase of $3.17. The typical residential gas customer who heats with gas would see a monthly increase of $2 on a 12-month average.

The annual average increase for the combination residential electric and gas customer would be four percent. This is in line with the company's goal of keeping energy cost increases within the rate of inflation.

RG&E cited overall inflation, higher operation and maintenance costs as the main factors for the increase. The company is committed to maintaining high standards of performance with the emphasis on safety for all employees and customers.

There are 2,708 RG&E employees serving 293,500 residential electric customers and 239,000 gas customers within the nine-county area surrounding the city of Rochester.

Note: Percentage changes are based on daily selling rates.

Comments: The following may be attributed to Robert L. Rewey, vice president - Sales Operations, Ford North American Automotive Operations.

"Led by the success of our new Explorer, Ford's share of the truck market has rebounded. An 84-percent year-to-year sales increase for Explorer/Bronco II in July should enable Ford, for the third consecutive month, to capture sales leadership in the compact utility segment."

"As availability of the all-new 1991 Ford Escort and Mercury Tracer models improves, we are confident that growing numbers of consumers will recognize their exceptional value and sales will gain momentum. Accordingly, we expect Ford's car market share to improve over the balance of the year, following the upturn in our truck market share already in evidence."

"Even if the economy were as robust as a year ago, and it clearly isn't, industry sales during the third quarter were bound to be considerably below 1989, when the seasonally adjusted annual rate reached 16.2 million units.

"Given the reasonable level of present inventories, we do not anticipate a repetition of the extraordinary incentive activity that occurred then, nor of the sales volumes that resulted. On the other hand, favorable fourth-quarter sales comparisons for the industry are quite likely."

PULASKI, VA (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Pulaski Furniture Corporation (NASDAQ: PLFC), Pulaski, Va., today reported operating results for the three quarters (36 weeks) of its fiscal year and for the third quarter (12 weeks) ended July 8, 1990, and compared them with the results for the corresponding periods of 1989 as follows:

PULASKI FURNITURE CORPORATION
(Dollars in thousands)

	Twelve weeks ended		Thirty six weeks ended
	7/08/90	7/09/89	7/08/90	7/09/89
Net sales	$26,963	$25,903	$86,229	$83,577

Net income	582	865	2,882	2,932
Earns. per share	$ 0.20	$ 0.30	$ 1.00	$ 1.02

The increase in sales in the 12 and 36 weeks ended July 8, 1990, is primarily attributable to the contribution to sales by the Accentrics division which began operations at the beginning of fiscal 1990.

Because of continuing industry softness, there was not sufficient demand for the company's furniture to support full time operations in all divisions. The reduced work schedule was the primary reason for the lower profit margins in the 1990 third quarter and the three quarters of 1990 compared to those in 1989.

The board of directors at its Aug. 3, 1990, meeting declared a dividend of twelve cents per common share payable on Sept. 14, 1990, to stockholders of record on Aug. 31, 1990.

HOUSTON (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Energy Service Company, Inc. (ENSCO) (AMEX: ESV) announced today that it has reached agreements in principle, subject to negotiating definitive purchase agreements and obtaining government approvals under the Hart-Scott-Rodino Act, to acquire all of the interests in 20 offshore supply and service vessels. The vessels are presently owned by Argosy Offshore Limited (Argosy).

Upon completing the Argosy transaction, ENSCO marine's fleet will more than double in size, thus greatly enhancing the company's marine service capabilities in the Gulf of Mexico. Argosy's fleet includes six 180-foot supply vessels, which were built since 1983, three 140-foot mini-supply vessels and 11 116-foot utility vessels, all built since 1979.

Argosy was formed in 1983 and has since that time operated a fleet of marine vessels in the Gulf of Mexico. From 1983 to November 1988 the fleet worked exclusively for Tenneco Oil Company and since then has worked exclusively for Chevron U.S.A. Inc.

It is expected that following the acquisition, all 20 vessels will continue working for Chevron pursuant to a long-term charter. The purchase of all ownership interests in Argosy is expected to be completed during the third quarter of 1990, and it is contemplated that ENSCO Marine will manage and operate the vessels from that time.

The acquisition of Argosy will come at a time when the marine transportation business is showing substantial improvement. ENSCO Marine's current fleet of 18 supply and anchor handling vessels experienced significantly increased utilization and dayrates for the first half of 1990 compared to the previous year. Carl Thorne, ENSCO chief executive officer and chairman, said, "We are very pleased with this segment's performance. We think the acquisition of Argosy will be an outstanding addition to ENSCO's growing asset base."

ENSCO, headquartered in Houston, is engaged in providing contract drilling and related energy services to the international petroleum industry. ENSCO's common stock and preferred stock trade on the American Stock Exchange.

NEW YORK (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - United Capital Corp. (AMEX: ICU) today reported results for the second quarter of 1990.

Total revenue for the quarter was $18,383,000 vs. $15,633,000 for the second quarter of 1989. Net income for the quarter was $1,657,000, or 15 cents per share. Net loss for the comparable 1989 period was $1,446,000, or 13 cents per share. Year-to-date loss was $5,272,000, or 49 cents per share, on $34,185,000 of revenues vs. earnings of $1,491,000, or 14 cents per share, on $23,656,000 of revenues during the comparable 1989 period.

In commenting on the results, A.F. Petrocelli, chairman of United Capital Corp., noted that revenues for the second quarter and six-month period ended June 30, 1990, were at record levels. Net income for the quarter reflects the strong operating performance of the Metex operating companies. The 1990 year-to-date loss reflects the first-quarter write-down of the company's investment in General Development Corporation, which filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code in April this year.

Petrocelli also noted that in March 1990 the company had announced that the operating assets of the Metex companies, exclusive of the real estate, would be offered for sale. As a result of the record performance of the businesses and a slow down in merger and acquisition activity, the company has decided to retain and develop these companies. In connection with this decision, Fred Arnold has been promoted to president and chief executive officer of Dorne & Margolin, Inc., a subsidiary of the company.

In addition to the Metex business acquired on March 3, 1989, which provided engineered products to aviation, industrial and automotive markets worldwide, United Capital Corp. owns and manages real estate assets.

LIVINGSTON, N.J. (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Mayflower Financial Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: MFFC), the holding company of Mayflower Savings Bank, SLA, today announced that its net income for the three and nine months ended June 30, 1990, amounted to $227,864 and $833,083, or 19 cents and 70 cents per share, respectively, as compared to $254,102 and $931,500, or 21 cents and 80 cents per share, respectively, for the comparable 1989 periods. Net interest income before provision for loan losses amounted to $869,009 and $2,675,422 during the three- and nine- month periods ended June 30, 1990, respectively, compared to $861,514 and $2,787,250 for the same respective periods in 1989.

Norman Goldfarb, president and chief executive officer of the company, stated that but for a $42,451 increase in other expenses, primarily related to the proposed acquisition of Mayflower by Valley National Bancorp, earnings for the three-month period would have been greater than in the comparable 1989 quarter. The primary reason for the decrease in earnings for the nine-month period was an increase in the cost of deposits which reduced net interest income before provision for loan losses by $111,828 over the comparable period in 1989. The decrease in net interest income before provision for loan losses for the nine-month period was partially offset by a $38,972 decrease in income taxes, due primarily to a decrease in pre-tax income over the comparable period in 1989.

Goldfarb reported that, as of June 30, 1990, total assets amounted to $125,979,257 and total stockholders' equity amounted to $18,007,206, which resulted in a ratio of stockholders' equity to total assets of 14.29 percent, one of the highest in New Jersey.

BALTIMORE (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - In a concentrated effort to make natural gas accessible to more of its customers, Baltimore Gas & Electric (NYSE: BGE) is stepping up a campaign to expand natural gas availability and to promote gas to new home developers, builders, and buyers.

In 1989, BG&E hooked up 900 new residential gas customers, and arranged for gas service to 75 new developments. Efforts are being intensified this year, as BG&E has taken several steps to increase the availability of gas to areas targeted for development. Additionally, the utility has stepped up marketing efforts to new residential customers. Already, BG&E has matched last year's 900 new customers, and expects to top 2,000 by the end of 1990.

"Our market research indicates that our customers like choices," said Michael J. Chesser, BG&E's vice president for Consumer Services. "For many customers, gas is a preference. It's clean, safe, comfortable and reliable. But in order to increase accessibility, we've got to sell the developers and builders on installing gas."

Approximately 47 percent of BG&E's 1 million residential customers presently heat with gas. After focusing efforts on converting oil customers to gas in the early 1980s, BG&E now has decided to concentrate efforts on new construction.

"We will always quote a gas conversion price to an oil customer when feasible," said Ed Skoglin, BG&E's manager of Marketing & Energy Services.

"But the real market is in new construction. We've changed and modified some policies and are willing to be more speculative in where we extend gas. Advances in technology have helped, too."

The major technological advance has been in the area of piping. Plastic pipe has replaced steel pipe in many applications, dramatically cutting installation costs.

Natural gas supplies have also become more plentiful. The fear of shortages, prevalent 5-10 years ago, has abated. And BG&E has increased its number of pipeline suppliers from one to three in the last three years.

While most of BG&E's focus has been on residential customers, it hasn't ignored the industrial and commercial sector. Often, BG&E's residential and industrial/commercial sections have worked hand-in-hand to make gas available to both sectors of new construction.

"For the most part, we are in the places where the growth is occurring, or will occur," said Chesser. "This allows us to take advantage of opportunities when they become available. As a result, more and more customers will be offered the choices they desire. That's good for the customer and good for BG&E."

Developers and builders seeking more information, or customers interested in a list of new gas developments, can call 800-666-5183.

MIDDLETOWN, PA (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Homestead Holding Corp. (NASDAQ: HMSD) today announced a loss of $2,891,255 or $2.50 a share for the second quarter.

Gary L. Holman, president and chief executive officer, attributed the majority of the loss of income due to an increase in loan-loss reserves. The addition to the reserves was needed to meet the more stringent requirements under new federal regulations in the industry. This reserve will be analyzed by the company on a monthly basis and will be maintained at the estimated level required by the regulators.

Holman also stated that Homestead Savings Association, a subsidiary of the Homestead Holding Corp., is currently being examined by the Office of Thrift Supervision and the Pennsylvania Department of Banking. This exam is a regularly scheduled exam and is not associated with the pending merger with CCNB Corp. (NASDAQ: CCNC). Holman added that until the exam is completed they will not know if the loan-loss reserves are adequate. The association exceeds by nearly double the required amount of core capital that is required even after the addition to the loan- loss reserves.

Second quarter income in 1989 totaled $715,566 or $.62 per share. The board of directors anticipates declaring a third quarter dividend of $.06 per share.

today reported consolidated net income of $1.075 million, or 3 cents per share, for the second quarter ending June 30, 1990, compared to $3.449 million, or 10 cents per share, for the same period in 1989, based on the same number of average shares outstanding.

For the first six months, consolidated net income was $4.084 million, or 12 cents per share, compared to $6.942 million, or 21 cents per share, for the same period in 1989, based on the same number of average shares outstanding.

Carl S. Quinn, chairman and chief executive officer of Arkla Exploration, attributed the reduction in second quarter net income to lower prices for gas and oil, and higher depletion, depreciation and interest expenses.

Meanwhile, the company's production volumes, revenues and cash flow increased for both the quarter and the half.

Revenues for the second quarter of 1990 totaled $36.888 million, a 4.3 percent increase over 1989 revenues of $35.373 million. Revenues for the first half were $81.726 million, up 14.0 percent from $71.707 million for the first half of 1989. Also, net cash flow from operations (before net changes in working capital) for the second quarter increased 18.9 percent to $18.293 million, up from $15.388 million in 1989; and for the first six months increased 26.1 percent to $39.673 million, up from $31.470 million for the same period last year.

Continuing a trend from the first quarter, Quinn said the drop in operating income was partially offset by additional tax credits gained on increased tight sands gas production.

For the quarter, Arkla Exploration had total sales volumes of 22.5 billion cubic feet of natural gas and gas equivalent (Bcfe), up from 19.4 Bcfe for 1989, a 16.0 percent increase. Sales volumes for the six month period totaled 45.1 Bcfe, up 16.8 percent from 38.6 Bcfe.

During the second quarter, the average sales price for natural gas was $1.56 per thousand cubic feet (Mcf) compared to $1.75 per Mcf in 1989, and for the half was $1.73 per Mcf, down from $1.80 per Mcf in the first half of last year.

Average liquids prices for the second quarter were $17.51 per barrel, compared to $18.89 in 1989. For the half, it was $18.84 per barrel, up from $17.41 per barrel in 1989.

In making this announcement, Quinn also reported that at their regular meeting on Aug. 2, the board of directors declared a quarterly dividend of 5 cents per share payable on Sept. 14, 1990, to all shareholders of record as of Aug. 24, 1990.

Arkla Exploration is one of the nation's largest independent gas and oil operators in terms of proved natural gas reserves, with more than 800 Bcfe of reserves. The company is actively engaged in the onshore exploration, development, production and marketing of natural gas and crude oil in the MidContinent and Gulf Coast regions of the United States.

DALLAS, (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - The board of directors of American Realty Trust Inc. (ART) (NYSE: ARB) today announced dividends will no longer be declared and paid on a quarterly basis. Dividend determination will be made at the end of the year.

The trust changed the dividend payment schedules in order to comply with the requirements of a loan agreement of ART's that restricts the amount of dividends paid to the amount of income the trust has during the year. As this amount cannot be determined on a quarterly basis, the board determined to declare distributions on an annual basis.

"We had previously based the dividend rate primarily on cash flow, but must now consider the level of the trust's earnings in order to comply with our loan agreement," said a spokesperson for the trust. "The mortgage defaults we announced last quarter are continuing to negatively impact cash flow and earnings. Also, although it has no impact on cash flow, our participation in the losses of the real estate investment trusts and partnership in which we own shares will also continue to depress earnings in the near future."

American Realty Trust Inc. is a real estate investment trust which primarily invests in mortgage loans, real estate and real estate-related entities.

MELVILLE, NY (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Aviation Education Systems, Inc. (PHLX: AES.X), announced today its preliminary results for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1990. The company estimates reporting net revenues of $2,200,000 for which it will sustain a net loss of approximately $900,000. A substantial part of this loss results from the settlement of an outstanding disputed account for $234,000 and non-recurring expenses occurring in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990, including increased expenses associated with the implementation of a new seminar program which has since been discontinued. Approximately $300,000 of this loss is attributable to expenses incurred during prior periods, a significant portion of which relates to the third quarter, which were not accrued by the company.

The company has also substantially reduced its operating expenses since fiscal year end, including the restructuring of its seminar programs.

COEUR D'ALENE, IDAHO (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Hecla Mining Co. (NYSE, PSE: HL) has announced that the Apex Unit in Utah will suspend processing ore from the Apex mine effective Aug. 5. The decision was prompted by the continuing decline in germanium and gallium prices in the world market, with no significant improvement in price expected in the near future. However, the company is investigating the possibility of utilizing the plant to produce germanium, gallium and other metals from higher grade feedstocks.

The Apex Unit, which produces sodium germanate, achieved start-up in February after undergoing a complete refurbishing of the plant. Unfortunately, Apex experienced metallurgical and operational difficulties which make it imprudent to process Apex ore at current prices.

The suspension of production at Apex will result in a reduction of approximately half of the plant's work force, affecting about 40 full-time employees. Hecla Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Arthur Brown said, "The continuing decline in the price of germanium and gallium is unfortunate for the Apex operation. Until the price of these metals improves, production from lower grade ore such as is found at the Apex mine can't be justified economically." Brown said he is optimistic that the plant will be in operation in the future.

Hecla Mining Co., headquartered in Coeur D'Alene, Idaho, is a leading domestic producer of newly mined silver and gold, and a supplier of premium ball clay, kaolin and specialty aggregates. The company has operations and projects under development in 12 states and three Canadian provinces.

TRAVERSE CITY, MICH. (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Donald W. Ableson, program manager for the Chevrolet-Pontiac-GM of Canada Group, will present the story of the development and manufacture of the new multi- purpose APV minivan at the University of Michigan's Management Briefing Seminars in Traverse City, Aug. 6-10. The weeklong conference will be held at the Grand Traverse Resort with Ableson addressing the group on Monday, Aug. 6, as the conference focuses on "World Class Manufacturing."

GM's new minivan, the result of a unique team effort, sets a new standard for design, structure, material usage and manufacturing processes in the automobile industry.

"We created a new manufacturing process by a unique combination of proven technologies and truly revolutionary techniques," Albeson commented. "The result is a new system that efficiently produces a unique new minivan." The APV, a front-wheel-drive minivan, features large reinforced composite panels adhesively bonded to a space frame structure and new, customer-focused features designed to make this vehicle a driving delight.

The premier engineering feat on these new models is the body construction. The vehicle begins with a space frame body structure. The 110-inch wheelbase foundation for this body structure has an integrated ladder frame with full-length longitudinal rails and supporting cross members, which enhances its cargo-carrying capability. Large exterior body panels made of reinforced composite materials, similar to those used on the Chevrolet Corvette, are then adhesively bonded to the space frame. Bonding adds to the integral structure of the frame.

Flexible fascias and a unique, friendly front fender are made of reinforced reaction injection molded material (RRIM). In fact, the fender represents the first commercial application of polyurea RRIM on a major body panel. It is mechanically attached to the space frame and is painted with the body, eliminating the need for separate paint support fixtures.

The composite panels allow for distinctive, innovative styling while providing "friendly" surfaces and increased dimensional accuracy for fits and finishes, and eliminating corrosion. With this body construction method, no sheet metal is exposed on the vehicle, except for the scalp and reveal moldings around the doors and windshield. Together, the panels and space frame form a body that provides a solid structure for ride and handling properties.

PITTSBURGH (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Allegheny International, Inc. (AI), (NYSE: AG) today reported its results for the third quarter of the 1990 fiscal year which ended on July 1, 1990.

AI reported third quarter fiscal 1990 sales of $237.3 million and a net loss of $32.1 million, or a loss of $3.51 per common share. That compares to sales of $234.9 million and a net loss of $15.3 million, equivalent to a loss per common share of $2.10, for the third quarter of fiscal 1989.

AI's consumer products companies reported operating earnings of $4.1 million in the fiscal year 1990 third quarter, as compared to $5.8 million in the fiscal 1989 third quarter. Sales and operating earnings of AI's barbecue grill business in the fiscal 1990 third quarter were well ahead of the prior year as favorable customer reaction to added product features resulted in higher unit sales and a shift in sales mix to higher margin products. AI's outdoor furniture business' operating earnings were reduced in the 1990 third quarter by unfavorable manufacturing and overhead variances resulting from lower than anticipated year-to-date sales and production levels. Third quarter 1990 results for most of AI's other businesses were below 1989 levels, which is believed to be due in part to a general slowdown in consumer spending and the unstable financial condition of several major retail customers. However, customer orders for small appliances and electric blankets have shown improvement during the last several weeks, and current open orders are above the level at this time last year.

AI also recorded a provision of $13.1 million in the 1990 third quarter for costs associated with the consolidation of its Canadian small appliance and electric blanket businesses, the liquidation of its electric blanket operations in the United Kingdom, and the consolidation of manufacturing operations for its outdoor furniture business.

The $10 million loss from discontinued operations in the 1990 third quarter reflects a provision for estimated additional costs of environmental obligations relating to a previously-divested business.

For the fiscal 1990 nine-month period, AI reported sales of $704.8 million and a net loss of $42.6 million, compared to sales of $730.2 million and a net loss of $18.2 million for the nine-month period of fiscal 1989. AI lost $5.89 per common share in the fiscal 1990 period, compared to a loss per share of $3.75 in the nine-month period of fiscal 1989.

Pittsburgh-based AI manufactures and markets consumer products that include small household appliances, electric blankets, outdoor furniture, and barbecue grills.

Of the total payment, $284 million was for vacation pay and $24 million was for paid absence allowance not used during the eligibility period.

RICHMOND, VA. (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Henry H. Harrell, President and Chief Executive Officer of Universal Corporation (NYSE: UVV), announced today the unaudited results for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1990. Net income for the year was $45.1 million as compared to last year's $54.0 million. On a per share basis earnings were $2.69 against $3.19 for the prior year. There was a loss of $4.5 million in the fourth quarter or 25 cents per share as compared to a profit of $1.8 million or 11 cents per share for the same quarter last year.

Gross revenues of $2.8 billion were reported for the fiscal year, slightly below the $2.9 billion of fiscal 1989. For the fourth quarter, gross revenues were $543 million as compared to $572 million in the same quarter of the prior year.

Overall results from domestic tobacco improved with a major contribution coming from increased productivity due to previously made capital expenditures. Because of a small burley crop, the total volume of domestic tobacco processed was approximately the same as last year. Foreign source tobacco earnings were good but because of reduced earnings from Brazil and the European companies, earnings did not equal the record level of 1989.

One of the sharpest declines in the real estate economy in this country in many years resulted in Lawyers Title being unprofitable in the fiscal year. In reaction to this, staff was reduced 11 percent and the company wrote off certain non-income producing assets.

Deli Universal's lumber and building products distribution business had another exceptional year while operating results in agri-products were mixed.

The previously announced negotiations to acquire Gebrueder Kulenkampff AG are expected to be completed by the end of August. The negotiations for the purchase of the leaf operations of R.J. Reynolds Tabacos do Brazil, Ltd. from Dibrell Brothers, Inc. have been terminated. To support the financing of the GK acquisition and other corporate needs, the Company recently completed a revolving credit and term loan agreement totaling $150 million.

The Board of Directors fixed the voting record date of September 4th for the annual meeting of shareholders on October 23, 1990. The Board declared a dividend of thirty-seven cents ($.37) per share on the common stock payable November 1, 1990 to shareholders of record on October 1, 1990.

DALLAS (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Commercial Metals Co. (NYSE: CMC) headquartered in Dallas, and Siskin Steel & Supply Co. Inc. of Chattanooga Tenn., have entered into an agreement which will result in CMC acquiring substantially all the operating assets related to Siskin's scrap recycling operation. Siskin will retain, operate and expand its new steel service center chain. The closing date for the agreement has been set for mid-September 1990.

In making the announcement Harry J. Heinkele, president of CMC's Secondary Metals Processing Division, said the company will consolidate Siskin's scrap processing operation into CMC's current location, 400 East 20th in Chattanooga. "New equipment on order, along with that of both operations will allow CMC to expand its existing plant and provide all Chattanooga area scrap generators with continued excellent service."

Siskin Steel & Supply Co., a privately owned enterprise, was founded as a Chattanooga scrap recycling company over 90 years ago. It has grown into a multi-location steel service center chain as well as a scrap processing company. Mervin Pregulman, president of Siskin Steel, said the agreement with CMC will allow Siskin to concentrate its total resources to accelerate expansion of its steel service center division, which now serves the states of Tennessee, Alabama, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Kentucky and Mississippi.

Commercial Metals Co. was founded 75 years ago as a scrap metal recycling company and has now grown into an organization consisting of three steel mini-mills, steel fabrication shops, a copper tube plant, over 30 scrap recycling sites and world-wide trading in various minerals, metals and semi-fabricated, nonferrous metal.

EVANSVILLE, IND. (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Southern Indiana Gas and Electric Company (NYSE: SIG) reported earnings per share of 66 cents for the three months ended June 30, 1990, compared to 57 cents in 1989. Increases in retail electric sales and wholesale electric sales, up 2 percent and 29 percent, respectively, were offset by scheduled maintenance project expenditures at one of the company's major generating stations causing electric operating income to remain flat for the quarter while gas operating income increased due to improved margins on gas sales.

For the first six months of 1990, earnings per share were up 11 cents from the same period in 1989. Improved electric sales were more than offset by scheduled maintenance project expenditures which caused a slight decrease in electric operating income while gas operating income increased due to improved margins on gas sales.

Earnings per share of $2.92 for the twelve months ended June 30, 1990 represents a 1.0 percent decrease compared to the prior period of $2.95. The decrease is attributed to much cooler summer weather in 1989 and increased plant maintenance expenditures, partially offset by an increased customer base and increased earnings on cash investments.

MIAMI (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Hotelecopy Inc.'s (NASDAQ-NMS: FAXM) fourth quarter witnessed nationwide installation of FaxMail terminals in accordance with its U.S. Postal Service joint-venture and expansion of its relationship with MCI Telecommunications Corporation. Full fiscal year revenues continued to rise as profitability remained limited due to outlays in connection with Hotelecopy's FaxMail Postal Service program and the company's overall growth.

"Hotelecopy's ultra-sophisticated FaxMail terminals are now in place in key markets across America," said Edd Helms, chairman and president of Miami-based Hotelecopy, the world's largest public access facsimile network. "To support the program, a creative, hard-hitting marketing campaign aimed at our target publics is going into full gear. Normally, it takes several months for marketing to catch up with product," Helms advised, "but, when it does, we expect to be looking at substantial usage figures." Most of the nation's 40,000 post offices could eventually be included in the FaxMail program, Helms pointed out.

RAPID GROWTH LIMITS PROFITABILITY

Rapid growth again limited profitability this quarter, due specifically to outlays for installation of sophisticated, credit-card operated, self-service facsimile terminals in post office lobbies and other high-traffic sites throughout the nation. Additional expenditures were incurred in marketing, servicing and developing new products. The company reported net loss of $214,000 or $.11 per share for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 on revenues of $1,419,000 comparable with net profit of $205,000 or $.20 per share on revenues of $1,455,000 for the fourth quarter of fiscal 1989.

Net income for the 12 months ended May 31, 1990, totaled $151,000 or $.09 per share compared with $409,000 or $.40 per share over the same period last year. Average shares outstanding during the fourth quarter of fiscal 1990 were 88 percent greater than the comparable quarter one year ago. For the 12 months of fiscal 1990, average shares outstanding exceed the prior comparable period by 59 percent.

FIVE-POINT PROGRAM MARKS EXPANDED HOTELECOPY/MCI RELATIONSHIP

Hotelecopy expanded its relationship with MCI via a five-point program aimed principally at the lodging industry, the business travel market and the U.S. Postal Service. "In place is a co-marketing agreement whereby MCI supports Hotelecopy in promoting and advertising our new FaxMail service to the public. The main thrust of that agreement is to inform all target audiences that Hotelecopy FaxMail, using the MCI fax network, is available in various locations, including hotels and post office lobbies, is an alternative to overnight delivery and provides convenient 24-hour facsimile service," Helms explained. The agreement allows MCI to handle all of Hotelecopy's administrative long-distance telephone traffic, as well as fax traffic for the more than 2,100 hotels and post office lobbies in the Hotelecopy network. In addition, a "Corporate Affinity" program will see Hotelecopy marketing MCI's voice services via recommendations to its member hotels.

CONTRACT RENEWALS A KEY INDICATOR; HOTELETICKET CONTINUES GROWTH PATTERN

Helms noted that the renewal rate for Hotel contracts, a key indicator of the corporation's profitability, averages 84 percent with Hotelecopy FaxMail placement in hotel sites now numbering 1,750 nationwide, as compared with 1,577 for the same period last year. The growth of average revenues per machine in hotels showed a year-to-year increase of over six percent to $3,254 per machine, vs. $3,076.

The fourth quarter saw Hoteleticket, Hotelecopy's subsidiary company, purchase 50 additional satellite ticket printers in line with expansion of it's Travel Agent Satellite Ticketing program. Aggressively seeking to develop its outreach in other areas, Hoteleticket has initiated solicitation of corporate businesses to attract corporate clients to its hotels. In a significant development, ARC (Airline Reporting Corporation) agreed to establish an ETDN (Electronic Ticketing Distribution Network) that can be used by all travel agencies. ARC's ETDN approval provides Hoteleticket -- with its established locations and acceptance of its highly-regarded technology among travel agents across America -- an immediate advantage over the rest of the industry. Hoteleticket has now signed more than 178 contracts with hotels to provide instantaneous airline ticketing and reservations to hotel guests.

OTHER HIGHTLIGHTS

In ceremonies at Postal Service Headquarters in Washington, D.C., U.S. Postmaster General Anthony M. Frank and Edd Helms issued a joint proclamation of support for the FaxMail Program, designating June 25-July 1 as National FaxMail Week. Heavy favorable press coverage continued in all media nationwide including a story on Hotelecopy in the April 16th issue of Business Week. Reviewing Florida's top 50 public companies, Florida Trend, a highly respected regional business publication, ranked Hotelecopy 2nd in return on equity and 31st in return on assets for fiscal 1989.

FAVORABLE OUTLOOK

"Hotelecopy remains optimistic concerning the future," Helms emphasized. "Profitability in the long-term continues as our prime objective and we fully expect to maintain our revenue growth."

The new cells are located in downtown Pittsburgh, enhancing downtown coverage (especially portable phone coverage); East End, improving service in East Liberty, Mellon Park, Fifth Avenue, and Point Breeze, and Brentwood at the intersection of Routes 51 and 88, covering those heavy traffic routes and Whitehall.

In addition, cellular service has been expanded in Erie, with a new site located in the downtown area covering Presque Isle State Park, and another west of Erie in Girard, Pa., -- totaling three cell sites in Erie.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Pilots at Eastern Airlines have overwhelmingly authorized their leadership to strike the airline if a collective bargaining agreement cannot be reached by Aug. 11. Eastern pilots passed the measure through a ballot taken at local council meetings held last night.

In a separate but related development, contract talks are scheduled to resume next week in Washington under the auspices of the National Mediation Board.

"The ballot was taken as a last resort since Eastern pilot attempts to negotiate contract terms with the company have not been successful to date. The ballot does not order a strike, but allows the Eastern pilots Master Executive Council to call a strike if deemed necessary. The last thing we want is another strike at this crippled airline, but we do have the pilots' authorization now if it comes down to that," said Capt. Roger Hall, first vice president of the Air Line Pilots Association.

"Labor peace still is an essential ingredient to rebuilding Eastern. Look at the devastating effects of the machinist strike. Look at what happened when the unions blew the whistle on safety violations at Eastern. Then look at some of the recent lawsuits and administrative actions initiated and won by the unions at Eastern's expense. You'll see that there's no way that Martin Shugrue can keep this airline flying unless he quickly settles his labor problems," said Capt. Skip Copeland, chairman of the Eastern pilots MEC.

The 30-day cooling off period to settle expires at midnight the evening of Friday, Aug. 10. At 0001 hours Aug. 11 the pilots are free to begin industrial actions, including a strike, and the company is free to impose its own contract terms.

The issue of job security for the pilots who returned to work after honoring the machinist strike continues to be a major stumbling block in the talks. "We've always indicated that the economic issues can be resolved. However, there's not much sense in discussing pay and benefits if you don't have a job to go back to," Copeland said.

ALBUQUERQUE, NM (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Today, Aug. 3, 1990, the New Mexico Public Service Commission (NMPSC) issued a decision denying Public Service Co. of New Mexico's (PNM) (NYSE: PNM) request for decertification of 130 MW of San Juan Unit 4. In its April 1989 order on excess capacity, the Commission excluded from jurisdictional rates 130 MW of San Juan Unit 4 and PNM's 130 MW ownership of Palo Verde Unit 3. On May 21, 1990, the Commission approved the Company's request to decertify and relinquish control over Palo Verde Unit 3.

In today's decision, the Commission upheld the June 20, 1990, Hearing Examiner's recommendation to deny decertification. That recommendation was based in part on the Hearing Examiner's belief that the Commission did not intend to relinquish control over the 130 MW of San Juan Unit 4 when it excluded it from rate base.

PNM believes that denial of decertification results in a confiscation of property. New Mexico customers are not currently paying for the excluded San Juan generation and PNM is making wholesale power sales from the plant but is receiving little return on its investment. The Company is reviewing the Commission's order and will decide on an appeal to the New Mexico Supreme Court within the next 30 days.

ST. PAUL, MN (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - In order to offset rising jet fuel costs, Northwest Airlines said today it will add $8 each way to the price of domestic tickets purchased beginning Aug. 9.

The surcharge is a direct result of jet fuel cost increases incurred by Northwest since the military invasion of Kuwait by Iraqi troops in the Middle East. Fuel prices have increased 8 cents a gallon since Wednesday and are expected to increase further.

The surcharge is not designed as a permanent revision to its pricing structure, Northwest said, and its will be reviewed periodically.

"Fuel costs are a major contributor to the operating expenses of all airlines," said Jack Van Der Wege, senior director of fuel administration. "Crude oil prices have jumped considerably since Wednesday and will be sharply higher in August than was previously forecasted."

Fuel is Northwest's second-largest cost, accounting for about 17 percent of its operating expenses.

ROCKY MOUNT, NC (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - William E. Prather, Jr., President and Chief Executive Officer of Hardee's Food Systems, Inc., today announed that the conversion of Roy Rogers restaurants is on schedule, and that the acquired chain's acquisition is already contributing to earnings growth.

Prather noted that the company's sytemwide sales for the Second Quarter increased 26 percent to $1.1 billion, and was up 18 percent for the year-to-date. Average unit sales of restaurants was also stronger, increasing 4 percent for the year.

The 43-year-old chief executive credits much of the company's success this year to being consumer-driven, adding new nutritional products to its standard menu, and to the aquisition of the 648 unit Roy Rogers restaurants chain, which was finalized in April.

Last month, Hardee's successuflly converted sixty Roy Rogers restaurants, and added Roy Rogers fried chicken to fifty existing Hardee's restaurants in the Baltimore-area. Five Roy Rogers restaurants in the Washington, D.C.-area became Hardee's last week. By the end of the summer, over one hundred Roy Rogers restaurants will have changed to Hardee's. Approximately 20 of these conversions will be franchise-owned restaurants. Company officials are optimistic that the entire Roy Rogers chain will merge to the Hardee's trademark by summer 1991.

Sales boosts during the Second Quarter were also realized by the limited introduction of a new quarter-pound hamburger, the Lean 1, containing just 17.5 percent of fat (pre-cooked) and 18 grams of total fat (cooked and fully garnised). The leaner hamburger product, which has the lowest total fat of any standard quarter-pound hamburger, has been applauded by health-officials across the nation. Hardee's has also used cholesterol-free, all-vegetable oil to cook all of its fried products since 1988, a switch just announced by the other three hamburger giants this month.

The third largest fast-food hamburger restaurant chain in America, Hardee's Food Systems, Inc., operates about 4,000 restaurants in 41 states and nine foreign countries.

Keel, President, Chief Executive Officer of Seaboard Savings and Loan Association (NASDAQ-NMS: SEAB) announced consolidated operating losses for the six months ended June 30, 1990 totalling $214,522 after taxes or $.24 per share. After tax losses for the second quarter were $92,891 as compared to losses of $121,632 for the first quarter of 1990. The improvement was due primarily to an increase in net interest income.

The effect of non-earning assets on the Association's interest margin was the primary cause of the reported losses. Interest income not recorded on the non-earning assets for the six months totalled approximately $300,000 of which approximately $110,000 related to the second quarter.

Total assets at June 30, 1990 were $106,732,794 as compared to $118,646,605 at June 30, 1989. The Association's net worth at June 30, 1990 was $6,522,971 or 6.11 percent of total assets.

BOSTON (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Representatives of Alberta Northeast Gas Limited (ANE), the consortium of U.S. local gas distribution companies (LDCs) which will be responsible for almost three-quarters of the gas to be shipped annually on the proposed Iroquois Gas Transmission System, provided their reactions today to the recent action taken on Iroquois by the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission (FERC). On July 25, FERC issued an order which essentially resolved most of the outstanding issues on Iroquois but which set certain narrow issues for evidentiary hearings and established a schedule which will allow final action no later than Nov. 28 1990. FERC has stated it will consider granting full certification to Iroquois at that time.

Robert Catell, president of the Brooklyn Union Gas Company and chairman of ANE, said "We were hopeful that Iroquois would be certified July 25 and there's no question that this action is unfortunate. We need these gas supplies to begin arriving no later than winter 1991/92 and are disappointed that FERC's action did not conclusively deal with the Iroquois Project. We are very encouraged, however, that FERC's order approves most elements of the project. We note that the burden is clearly on opponents to show why FERC should not proceed to finalize its approval of Iroquois in November."

The ANE project, formed in 1985, will provide nearly 400 million cubic feet per day of clean burning natural gas to nearly seven million customers in seven Northeastern states (New York, New England and New Jersey) over a 15-year contract period.

James A. Rooney, president of ANE, described the obstacles encountered by the Iroquois delivery system as "unprecedented". He said, "This development is particularly disappointing given the growing market for gas in the Northeast and the need for timely action to protect both our contracts with the Canadian producers and our export related licenses from the Canadian National Energy Board. Rooney also said that "Local gas distribution companies in the U.S. Northeast and the customers they serve are particularly disappointed that U.S. producer interests seem unwilling to sign the same kind of competitive, long-term deals as Canadian suppliers. Our market has a growing need for all the gas we can get from every competitive source. We are confident that both Iroquois and additional Southwest U.S. gas supplies will play an important role in serving the region's growing needs."

Both Catell and Rooney expressed optimism that FERC will act favorably by November, but cautioned that parties interested in seeing the Iroquois and ANE projects move forward must remain constantly vigilant in these next months to ensure that no further delays in the certification process are allowed.

PHILADELPHIA (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - In the second quarter of 1990, Tasty Baking Co. (NYSE: TBC) realized net income in the amount of $1,934,000 which compares to net income earned in 1989 for the comparable quarter of $2,854,000.

Net income per share was $.31 which compares to the second quarter of 1989 of $.45 per share.

For the 26-week period ended June 30, 1990, the company realized a net loss of $1,118,000 which, however, reflects a special pre-tax provision for an early retirement program in the amount of $8.2 million. Excluding the special provision which amounted to $.78 per share, the company realized a profit of $3,834,000 or $.61 per share, which compares to a profit earned in 1989 of $5,074,000 or $.80 per share.

Net sales for the second quarter of 1990 were $68,290,000 which were relatively flat compared to the second quarter of 1989 which were $69,377,000. Net sales for the 26-weeks ended June 30, 1990, of $136,089,000 when compared with the comparable period of 1989 of $137,386,000 were also relatively flat.

Nelson G. Harris, president and chief executive officer, said in a letter to shareholders, "While total sales for the Tastykake Division were down approximately 5 percent on a comparable basis, the control of costs continued to be effective as to commodity, operating and fixed expenses. Management, recognizing the soft economy, promoted heavily throughout the quarter, and such promotion costs materially impacted net income."

Harris further stated, "Management does not anticipate a continuing high level of promotion costs for the balance of the year. The early retirement program has been successfully implemented and the anticipated savings are expected to be reflected in the latter part of the third quarter, fully realized in the fourth quarter, and of course into 1991. In addition, management, being fully aware of the nutritional concerns of its customer, has substantially removed tropical oils and has reduced saturated fats without a loss in taste or quality; and, is continuing in its research toward the development of additional low-fat products."

Relative to Phillips & Jacobs Inc., the company's graphic arts and industrial chemical subsidiary, Harris said, "For the second quarter, the company also is operating in a soft economy, but nevertheless, improved sales levels approximately 5 percent relative to the preceding year, however, profits were comparable for the respective quarters. Management of this subsidiary recognizes the technological changes anticipated within the graphic arts industry and is positioning itself to realize the potential of these new opportunities."

On July 20, 1990, the board of directors amended the by-laws of the company to opt out of the coverage of the 1990 Pennsylvania Anti-Takeover Act.

In conclusion, Harris stated, "It would be unrealistic not to recognize the softness existing in the present economy; however, as a result of the positive actions which management has taken relative to cost containment, stabilization of commodity prices, new product development and expansion of distribution, we believe the balance of the year will be productive for the company and its shareholders."

DENVER (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Western Capital Investment Corp. (WCIC) (NASDAQ: WECA), parent of Bank Western, a federal savings bank, reported a net loss of $29.4 million, or $3.14 per share for the second quarter. A year earlier the company reported a second quarter net loss of $24.8 million or $2.65 per share. The net loss for the first and second quarters of 1990 combined was $31.1 million compared to $26 million for the like period in 1989. An estimated net loss of $29 million for the second quarter was announced in a press release on July 26, 1990.

As previously reported, the quarterly net loss was due in large part to a $20.8 million provision for losses which reflects additional reserves on Bank Western's problem assets to assist in marketing real estate owned in a still depressed Colorado commercial real estate economy. Additionally, a Bank Western subsidiary recorded $10.9 million in write-downs to facilitate disposal of assets previously held for investment or development. For the six-month period ended June 30, 1990, provisions for losses totaled $25.4 million compared to $29.4 million for the like period in 1989. Despite these actions, Bank Western still maintains regulatory capital in excess of all current regulatory requirements.

Net interest income for the quarter was $13.5 million, down $0.6 million from $14.1 million in the like period one year ago. Net interest income for the six-month period ended June 30, 1990 was $28.5 million compared to

General and administrative (G&A) expenses for the second quarter 1990 were $17.6 million or a reduction of $1.1 million from the 1989 second quarter total of $18.7 million. For the six-month period ended June 30, 1990, expenses totaled $34.3 million compared to $43 million in the like period of 1989. The decrease of $8.7 million reflects $2.6 million of reductions in G&A expenses of ongoing operations and $6.1 million related to a subsidiary sold during the first quarter of 1989.

WCIC's assets totaled $3.3 billion at June 30, 1990 compared to $3.5 billion one year ago. The company's stockholders' equity at June 30, 1990 was $160.1 million.

LOUISVILLE, KY (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Liberty National Bank and Trust Company of Louisville ("Liberty Bank"), the principal subsidiary of Liberty National Bancorp, Inc. (NASDAQ: LNBC) announced today that the Fayette Circuit Court has granted its motion for a new trial in Liberty National Bank and Trust Company of Louisville vs. Archie Donaldson, M.D.

On August 28, 1989, a jury returned a verdict against Liberty Bank for compensatory damages which resulted in a judgment totalling approximately $7 million, plus interest from the date judgment was entered. The court's order sets aside that judgment. This jury verdict had been offset by a directed verdict in favor of Liberty Bank on its claim on the debt owed by the borrower in the approximate amount of $2.8 million. The court did not expressly rule on the borrower's motions seeking to set aside the directed verdict in favor of Liberty on its claim against the borrower.

Liberty Bank believes that it will prevail in any re-trial of this matter, and, accordingly, no provision for any liability that may result upon adjudication had been made in Liberty's consolidated financial statements.

The motion of Liberty National Bank for a new trial is sustained. The failure of Archie Donaldson to furnish sought-after discovery concerning his tax liability materially contributed to Liberty's inability to present the true facts to the jury. The attempted tax levy on an employee of Liberty National Bank was not such as to give reasonable notice to the bank and its attorneys.

The Court is concerned about many other issues, such as the very general interrogatory which did not permit the jury to decide specific issues; the nature of the notes; whether Dr. Donaldson actually sustained a loss, et cetera. Since the Court is granting a new trial based upon the discovery issue, it is not necessary that other reasons be discussed.

The company's international rig utilization rate for owned and leased equipment for the six months was 40 percent, up from 32 percent in the 1989 comparable period. At June 30, 1990, the company also operated 14 rigs through labor contracts, 12 in the North Sea, one offshore Malaysia and one in Kenya.

Three posted barges and a shallow-water jackup (which is 50 percent owned by the company) are currently in shipyards where they are undergoing substantial refurbishment and upgrade prior to their scheduled movement to Nigeria in late 1990.

One of the company's land rigs was moved from southern Texas to Venezuela during the quarter in a lease arrangement, marking the company's first entry into that country.

Day said, "We are optimistic about the future of our business. Activity has increased slightly, but steadily, in the past few months and we are beginning to see some improvement in operating margins through increased day rates. The impact of the new Nigerian operations should be an important element in the company's future."

In a previous release dated July 6, 1990, Noble Drilling Corp. announced that it filed a registration statement with the Securities and Exchange Commission for the offer and sale of 5,000,000 shares of its Common Stock. The registration statement also covers a total of 4,000,000 shares of Common Stock being offered by two selling stockholders. The company will not receive any of the proceeds from the sale of shares of common stock by the selling shareholders.

ST. LOUIS (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - The board of directors of Mark Twain Bancshares Inc. (NASDAQ: MTWN) today announced an increase in the company's stock repurchase program, which now authorizes a total of 150,000 shares of its common stock for repurchase in private or open markets. In March, 1990 the company initiated the repurchase program, which, at that time, authorized the repurchase of up to 70,000 shares.

Keith Miller, chief financial officer of Mark Twain, said the bank holding company will use the additional shares as regular treasury stock to pre-fund future employee stock-related benefit programs.

"We expect to realize two tangible benefits from the stock repurchase program. First, because of the current low price of stock, we believe these programs will be financed at a discount. Second, Mark Twain believes an investment in our own stock is an excellent financial decision that has the potential for good appreciation in a relatively short period of time," he said.

Mark Twain stock closed the day of trade Friday, Aug. 3 at 13 1/4. The company's fully diluted book value for the quarter ended June 30, 1990 was $14.79.

Miller said that Mark Twain stock is trading at historically low levels as measured by price-to-book value and price/earnings ratios. The company's performance remains very strong at a time of volatility in the banking industry, according to Miller.

Mark Twain continues to have one of the lowest levels of net loan charge offs in the banking industry, 0.13 percent for the first six months of 1990, and has reduced its nonperforming assets by 18 percent over the last year, Miller said.

Alvin Siteman, chairman of the board of Mark Twain Bancshares, expressed the board's opinion that, "because of the decline in the price of bank stocks generally, we believe that Mark Twain stock represents an exceptional value at its current price. Mark Twain's experienced management team practices sound banking fundamentals. The market should recognize banks will solid performance, solid assets and strong management and there should be significant rebounds in bank stock prices in the near

MIAMI, (AUG. 3) PR NEWSWIRE - Dr. Laurence B. Brody, a respected South Florida business entrepreneur was elected chairman of Amerifirst Bank (NASDAQ: AMRI) today. He has served on the AmeriFirst board since the spring of 1989 and has served on numerous bank boards in Miami since the late 1960s.

In 1974 Dr. Brody founded what is now the CIGNA Dental Health Plan. An avid academic nature has led Dr. Brody to start a software company as well as a management consulting company. He is currently spearheading the conversion of AmeriFirst's multi-computer systems into one.

Dr. Brody holds a B.A. and a D.D.S. degree from the University of Pennsylvania and also currently serves there as an Assistant Professor.

As a computer expert, management consultant and organization builder, Dr. Brody said of his election today, "Our team will be continuing to burn the midnight oil."

In addition to banking, business and medical experience, Dr. Brody has consulted to various government agencies. He was appointed by the Insurance Department to the Board of the Patient Compensation Fund.

AmeriFirst today also released the following letter to shareholders:
August 3, 1990 Dear Shareholder: Fourteen months ago we assumed our positions at AmeriFirst. During that time we have labored to solve the problems we inherited. We sought to return the Bank to profitability. We also communicated to the shareholders the true picture and the unvarnished truth about the business and financial condition of AmeriFirst as it became apparent. It has been a significant responsibility and a difficult and unhappy experience. Your Board and senior managers worked long and hard over the last year to return the Bank to a sound financial footing:

-- We cut operating expenses to the bone. We abolished the "country club" style of operations and cut the operating costs of AmeriFirst for fiscal 1990 by some $33 million when compared to fiscal 1989, an amount roughly equal to 25 percent on an annualized basis.

-- We shrank the company as dramatically and quickly as we prudently could, from about $4.7 billion in assets as of June 30, 1989 to about $3.9 billion in assets as of June 30, 1990, and from about $3.29 billion in deposit liabilities as of September 30, 1989 to about $2.96 billion in deposit liabilities as of June 30, 1990.

-- We retained and, if anything, improved the core retail franchise value of AmeriFirst by keeping about 94 percent of our retail deposits. In doing so, we lowered the cost of deposits from an average of 7.55 percent as of September 30, 1989 to about 7.11 percent as of June 30, 1990. We eliminated all goodwill from the balance sheet as well as about $300 million in high cost brokered certificates of deposit.

-- We made substantial progress in addressing the overwhelming problem of removing foreclosed and development real estate and nonperforming commercial real estate loans from our balance sheet. During the first nine months of fiscal 1990, we had a net reduction in non-earning assets of about $49.3 million (representing additional non-earnings assets of $40.5 million offset by $89.8 million in payments received on non-accrual loans and sales of non-earning assets). After writing these assets down from their previously stated levels under former management, we sold these assets on average at close to 100 percent of their new marked to market book values, and we sold most of them for cash. When we financed these sales, as we rarely did, we received 20 percent down or more.

-- We replaced 7 of the top 9 senior managers of the company and hired competent real estate professionals -- not bankers -- to deal with the huge commercial real estate exposure of the company. We replaced our outside auditors who had rendered a clean opinion on the company's equity of nearly $200 million as of the beginning of fiscal 1989. We sued those we believed were responsible for AmeriFirst's disastrous losses and are continuing to prosecute those claims vigorously.

Many of these accomplishments brought the Bank close to meeting goals set in the capital plan submitted to federal regulators in January 1990. That capital plan envisaged, among other things, an emphasis on the Bank's core retail businesses, liquidation of the investment in the Bank's real estate subsidiary and of real estate owned by AmeriFirst and other assets, a reduction in operating expenses, and an infusion of approximately $60 million in private capital.

For example, our plan was to cut operating expenses to $79.2 million by June 30, 1990, and we reduced those expenses to about $79.1 million by that date. The plan was to reduce the Bank's investment in its real estate subsidiary to $124.5 million by June 30 and our investment on that date was about $132.2 million and, five days later, was about $117 million. We had non-earning assets of $348.9 million on June 30, and our plan was to have $340 million; a variance of only $8.9 million. Our reduction in total assets also was near the goal in our plan.

To address the capital deficiencies of the Bank, we engaged the services of financial advisors, Kidder Peabody & Co. Kidder Peabody explored the alternatives for raising new capital and maximizing shareholder value, but encountered an unattractive environment for private investment in banks and thrifts.

It has become clear, that the measures we took have not been enough to rescue AmeriFirst from the consequences of its disastrous exposure to commercial real estate. In the quarter ended June 30, 1990, AmeriFirst continued to suffer operating losses. The total loss for the quarter under generally accepted accounting principles was about $15 million, including an additional provision for loan losses in the amount of about $6 million. The commercial real estate market in Florida has continued to deteriorate, and we see no signs of a turnaround.

The quarterly loss leaves the Bank with shareholder equity of about $48 million, which continues to erode rapidly. AmeriFirst now fails all three capital standards under the Financial Institutions Reform, Recovery and Enforcement Act of 1989.

As bad as they are, these results are of questionable significance, because they are based on the assumption the AmeriFirst is a going concern. As previously reported, federal thrift regulators rejected AmeriFirst's capital plan after the Board advised them that it was infeasible to obtain new capital solely from private sources and thus to achieve the goals in the capital plan. The rejection of the capital plan subjects the Bank to numerous onerous operating restrictions and to the possible appointment of a conservator or receiver for the institution.

The federal regulators also requested that the Bank enter into an agreement that would impose additional significant operating restrictions.

As a result of these restrictions, Amerifirst's results of operations in the current quarter are certain to be worse, and perhaps dramatically worse, than the results of operations in the previous quarter. For example, we presently anticipate that operating restrictions affecting AmeriFirst's single largest real estate development asset will result in an additional provision for losses with respect to that project alone in an amount possibly exceeding $10 million.

On July 17, 1990, AmeriFirst announced that its Board had concluded that an infusion of capital from the private capital markets appeared infeasible and that the company would focus on efforts to obtain governmental assistance. With the assistance of AmeriFirst's advisors, we have submitted a proposal to federal regulatory officials that would include:

(i) a transfer to the government of development, foreclosed and nonperforming real estate assets with a book value of about $500 million in return for cash in that amount;
(ii) an additional cash infusion of about $134 million from the government; and
(iii) a private infusion of equity capital in the amount of $160 to $170 million.

We believe that the proposal would offer the federal government the least costly solution of AmeriFirst's problems, but we are unable to predict the likelihood of success. If the proposal were successful, it could result in some value for the existing shareholders of AmeriFirst, although in our judgement it is unlikely that the value would exceed one or two percent of the equity in the newly recapitalized company.

Today, Dr. M. Lee Pearce resigned as Chairman of the Board and as a Director of AmeriFirst. The Board has decided to accept the Chairman's resignation. The Board has requested Director Laurence Brody to become Chairman of the Board. Dr. Brody has accepted the position as Chairman. Dr. Brody will continue to pursue AmeriFirst's proposal for open bank assistance and will seek in any event to conserve the assets and franchise value of the institution to the maximum extent possible.

We recognize that these developments and conclusions are a bitter pill for shareholders, as they are for the members of the Board and for the officers and employees of AmeriFirst.

We are grateful to you for your support and know you join us in thanking the managers and employees of the Bank for their heroic effectors during this difficult period.

Respectfully submitted,

M. Lee Pearce, M.D.	A. L. Teti

ROSEMEAD, CA (AUG. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - The Board of the South Coast Air Quality Management District (AQMD) voted 10-1 today to accept Southern California Edison's proposal to mitigate potential air quality impacts in the Los Angeles Basin of the proposed merger of Edison and San Diego Gas & Electric Company.

The agreement will result in NOx emission reductions over the entire period covered in the California Public Utilities Commission's draft Environmental Impact Report (EIR) of approximately 55 percent greater than necessary to fully mitigate the projected merger related increase, an Edison spokesperson said.

The agreement also will result in very substantial reductions in both hydrocarbon emissions and carbon monoxide emissions.

The AQMD staff had concluded that the mitigation agreement is technically sound and provides for the mitigation of all significant air quality impacts. Further, they concluded that the mitigation offsets are quantifiable and enforceable.

The plan calls for Edison to subsidize the conversion of internal combustion engines operated by other companies (used mostly for water and oil pumping) to non-polluting electric motors. Edison also will subsidize the conversion of metal-melting furnaces from gas-fired to electric furnaces as mitigation for the period after 2004 when AQMD rules would eliminate the credits from IC engine conversions. As further mitigation, Edison will install, by the end of 2005, NOx control technology on a 215-megawatt power plant generating unit in the South Coast Basin. This control is in excess of the controls already required of power plants under AQMD rules.

The mitigation package is based upon the merger-related air quality impacts predicted in the CPUC's draft EIR. In approving the agreement, the AQMD board reserved the right to re-examine the issue if the predicted merger impacts in the final EIR are materially different from those identified in the draft EIR.

The agreement comes on the heels of similar understandings reached recently with the Ventura County Air Pollution Control District and the San Bernardino Air Pollution Control District.

The potential for increased power plant emissions in the Los Angeles, Ventura, and Southeast desert regions would arise from increased use of more efficient power plants in those areas after the merger, and reduced use of less efficient power plants in the San Diego area.

IRVINE, CA (AUG. 5) PR NEWSWIRE - Helionetics Inc. (AMEX: ZAP) announced today that its wholly owned subsidiary, Xcell Circuit Technology Inc., has successfully relaunched the commercial sale of its printed circuit boards as part of a company-wide strategic effort to deemphasize dependency on military contracting.

Acquired by Helionetics in June 1989, Xcell, which recently had confined its marketing efforts to the federal government, has been impacted by current slowdowns in defense spending. Additionally, Xcell has been temporarily suspended from certain government contracting based on the need to resolve certain matters regarding its affiliation with its prior owner, Calprotech Inc., a company presently under indictment in the U.S. District Court for Central California for allegedly fraudulent acts committed four-to-five years prior to the acquisition of Xcell by Helionetics.

Helionetics has provided the government with documentation that there is no current affiliation between the company or its Xcell subsidiary and Calprotech. Subsequent to acquiring Xcell last year, Helionetics also substantially and effectively changed and upgraded Xcell's operations to conform with the requirements of U.S. government specifications. According to the company, there is reasonable expectation that the government suspension will be rescinded in the near future.

Helionetics' product lines are designed around state-of-the-art 32-bit microprocessors and include vector, scalar, parallel and graphic processors which find applications in computer-aided design (CAD), modeling, simulation and three-dimensional fluid dynamics. The company also designs and manufactures solid-state and rotary power conditioning systems and high-tech printed wiring boards.

(AUG. 3) UPI - The Arab League has convened an emergency session to consider its response to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. Kuwait asked its Arab allies to respond to Iraq's aggression with force. Western diplomats say such a response is unlikely and indicate Arab condemnation of the invasion will probably result from the meeting in Cairo.

Sporadic gunfire is reported in Kuwait's capital. Iraq's sheer numerical advantage allowed it to easily conquer its militarily inferior neighbor. Kuwait has issued a plea to its Arab allies and the world community in general to mount a military campaign to oust the Iraqis.

Officials in Trinidad and Tobago say they expect about 350 troops from other East Caribbean nations to arrive Friday to help local security forces. The scheduled arrival comes as government officials in Port-of-Spain asserted control in the aftermath of a six-day coup attempt. A group of Moslem rebels who tried to topple the government surrendered Wednesday. Authorities say the insurgents will be punished to the fullest extent of the law.

Los Angeles prosecutors say they plan to seek the death penalty against the man suspected of killing actress Rebecca Schaefer... a co-star in the sit-com ''My Sister Sam.'' L-A Deputy District Attorney Marcia Clark says she will back off the quest for capital punishment if Robert Bardo's lawyers provide a suitable reason to do so. Bardo reportedly has a history of mental illness, but Clark says she thinks he was sane when he murdered Schaefer last year.

KALAPANA, HI (AUG. 3) UPI - Lava from Kilauea Volcano that has already virtually destroyed the community of Kalapana began claiming the nearby world-famous Kaimu black sand beach Thursday.

The molten rock spilled into the bay at Kaimu about a mile northeast of Kalapana and inched along the palm-fringed black sands of the beach, often seen in travel posters and postcards.

The lava river, which paused overnight and then resumed its march forward, covered half of the bay and scenic beach as it followed the coastline.

''This is the last foothold of old Hawaii,'' said Big Island Civil Defense Administrator Harry Kim.

The flow showed no sign of stopping, Kim said.

''We have been saying for months now ... that Kaimu is in its path (and) unless the eruption ceases or there is some dramatic change, Kaimu will be inundated by lava,'' he said.

Residents of nine homes in the area remained on evacuation alert as a finger of lava moving inland stalled 350 yards from the nearest structure.

Kim said all of the residents were busy packing, were ready to go or had already moved out. The only restaurant in the area, the Blacksand Beach Drive-In and Gift Shop, was closed at the order of civil defense authorities.

Clouds of ''laze'' - potentially dangerous lava haze that forms when the molten rock hits sea water - were being blown harmlessly out to sea by trade winds, authorities said.

But civil defense workers kept visitors a quarter-mile away from the flow as the plumes of haze, which contains hydrochloric acid, moved closer to Kaimu.

Kilauea's current eruption, the longest in recorded history, began Jan. 3, 1984 and has destroyed 169 homes and caused more than $61 million damage on the island of Hawaii, 200 miles away from Honolulu on the island of Oahu.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - The Senate has passed a bill authorizing a $100 million trust fund to compensate hundreds of Americans who developed cancer from radiation exposure because of government neglect during the Cold War.

The legislation would provide damage awards to people exposed to cancer-causing fallout from open-air atomic weapons tests in Nevada and to uranium miners who dug the radioactive ore that went into those bombs.

The bill, approved by unanimous consent early Thursday, differs from a House-passed version of the legislation by placing conditions on compensation based on such factors as smoking, alcohol consumption and age.

The uranimum miners and fallout victims, or ''downwinders'' as they call themselves, turned to Congress for compensation after the courts ruled they were unable to recover damages in lawsuits against the federal government.

Congress previously has enacted measures to compensate victims of fallout from nuclear weapons tests in the Marhall Islands and to veterans exposed to radiation while working at the Nevada Test Site in the 1950s or in Japan at the end of World War II.

The Senate-added provisions establishing conditions for smoking, drinking and age were aimed largely at overcoming objections raised by the administration.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, the chief sponsor of the Senate bill, said Thursday the Justice Department had informed him it would not oppose the changes adopted by the Senate.

''The government has finally admitted negligence,'' Hatch said in a statement. ''We've fought through layers of red tape for years, through litigation, reversals, and years of pain suffered by those people who lived through the horrors of a death they could not see - radiation.''

Rep. Wayne Owens, D-Utah, the primary sponsor of the House-passed bill, said Thursday he would recommend that the House accept the Senate version of the bill and send it on to President Bush to be signed into law.

Such a move would avoid the need for a potentially lengthy House-Senate conference to reconcile differences between the two bills.

Owens said he expected final House action on the bill in the first week to 10 days after Congress returns from its August recess.

''Those good people who have suffered so long will have been apologized to and offered compensation, and that is very rewarding,'' he said.

However, before any compensation can actually be paid, Congress must pass a companion appropriations bill to set up the $100 million account.

The bill is aimed at an estimated 600 to 800 people from Nevada, Utah and the northwestern corner of Arizona who developed cancer as a result of radioactive fallout from 223 above-ground nuclear explosions conducted at the Nevada Test Site in the 1950s and early 1960s.

Also covered are an estimated 250 to 450 minuers who contracted lung cancer or other respiratory diseases from radiation while working in the underground uranium mines of Utah, Arizona, Colorado, New Mexico and Wyoming to extract ore for federal nuclear weapons from 1947 until 1971.

Many of the uranimum miners of that era were Navajo Indians, with some of the earliest and dirtiest of the mines located on Indian reservations.

The Wyoming miners were added in the version of the bill that cleared the Senate.

The downwinders would be eligible for individual payments of up to $50,000 and the miners could get as much as $100,000 each. Survivors of the victims also could qualify for compensation.

Some 1,200 downwinders, including children of the fallout victims themselves, filed suit several years ago claiming they were exposed to cancer-causing radiation as a result of negligence on the part of the government.

A federal judge in Utah ruled in favor of the plaintiffs in 10 of 24 test cases, but the 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed the decision. The appeals court held the government was immune to such damage suits and that compensation was a matter for Congress to decide.

The courts reached similar conclusions in other cases brought by uranium miners.

ANCHORAGE, AK (AUG. 3) UPI - Federal prosecutors declined to comment on their disclosures that Exxon shipping officials knew in 1985 that Capt. Joseph Hazelwood admitted returning intoxicated to his vessel in port on several occasions.

The disclosures were made in documents ordered filed by U.S. District Judge Russel Holland in the criminal case against Exxon Shipping and its parent company, Exxon Corp., following the March 24, 1989, 11-million gallon oil spill in Prince William Sound, the nation's worst.

In a bill of particulars filed earlier this week, federal prosecutors cited a May 29, 1985, memo written by an Exxon shipping manager, Ben C. Graves, to Exxon USA's legal department noting that Hazelwood ''had admitted to returning to vessels in port in an intoxicated state on several occasions, and that shipmates of Hazelwood's reported that he had violated company alcohol policy on at least several occasions.''

According to testimony collected during inquiries into the cause of the Exxon Valdez spill, which killed tens of thousands of sea birds and mammals, Hazelwood spent much of the afternoon prior to his ship's departure from the Alyeska oil terminal drinking with other crew members in local bars.

A U.S. Justice Department spokeswoman in Washington, D.C., declined comment Thursday on the Hazelwood revelations.

The Justice Department has charged Exxon Corp. and Exxon Shipping with criminal violations of the federal Clean Water Act, the Refuse Act, Migratory Bird Treaty Act, Ports and Waterways Safety Act and the Dangerous Cargo Act.

Exxon contends the federal government is using criminal environmental laws in ways not previously attempted.

The Justice Department spokeswoman agreed.

''Yes, it's not common for criminal charges to be brought under these statutes,'' she said. ''But we're very comfortable using these statutes.''

CAIRO, Egypt (AUG. 3) UPI - Kuwait's ambassador to the United States insisted his government has not been overthrown even though its leadership has fled following Iraq's military invasion and apparent intention to install a provisional government.

''The people of Kuwait are fighting this penetration,'' said Kuwait's ambassador to the United States, Sheikh Saud Nasir Al Sabah, in an inteview Thursday night on ABC-TV's ''Nightline'' news program.

''No, the government has not been overthrown,'' said Al Sabah. ''The nation still exists. It is under occupation and it is resisting this brutal occupation.''

Al Sabah said the emir of Kuwait, Sheikh Jaber Al Ahmad Al Sabah, and the prime minister were in a ''haven place'' - neighboring Saudi Arabia - and were talking with other Arab leaders about how to respond to the Iraqi invasion early Thursday ordered by Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

The attack followed the collapse of talks in Saudi Arabia this week concerning the two Arab nations' disputes over oil rights and their border and a massive buildup of Iraqi forces near the Kuwaiti border.

Iraq said the invasion was mounted to support unspecified revolutionaries who had overthrown the Kuwaiti government and its troops will leave when order is restored and ''the free government of Kuwait'' is established. It said this could be in ''days or weeks.''

The Iraqi invasion and occupation of Kuwait drove up oil prices and wreaked havoc on world financial markets. In early trading Friday, stock prices in Tokyo hit a three-month low in response to the invasion.

A U.S.-based energy expert said an Iraq-Kuwait oil producing bloc would be second only to Saudi Arabia, producing 5.4 million barrels a day compared with the Saudi capacity of 7.5 million barrels a day.

Secretary of State James Baker was cutting short a visit to Mongolia and heading to Moscow Friday, where he and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze planned to make a joint statement condemning the Iraqi action.

Prior to leaving Mongolia, Baker said at a news conference Friday that it appears ''the occupying power is setting up a puppet government.''

Heavy casualties were reported in Kuwait. Witnesses in Kuwait said the brother of Kuwait's emir, Sheikh Fahad al Ahmad al Sabah, was killed while defending the royal palace.

The State Department said no casualties were reported among about 3,000 U.S. citizens in Kuwait.

A State Department official said six American employees of a U.S. oil company in Kuwait, which he would not identify, were missing and there had been unconfirmed reports the six were seen with Iraqi forces.

''We've reminded the government of Iraq that they have a commitment to the security and the welfare of U.S. citizens (in Kuwait) since Iraq invaded a sovereign country,'' the official said.

Iraq has warned against foreign interference while it helped to install a provisional government.

President Bush, while denouncing the invasion and slapping a trade embargo on the Persian Gulf nation, said he was not ruling out any options, including a military response.

The Pentagon said a U.S. Navy task force of an aircraft carrier and six other ships were steaming outside the Persian Gulf but had no plans to enter the strategic waterway. Eight other U.S. warships already are in the gulf.

Kuwait's envoy to Washington, said, ''U.S. intervention at this stage is of paramount importance.''

Kuwait has also asked its Arab allies to forcibly remove the Iraqi forces, said a diplomatic source attending an Arab League foreign ministers meeting Thursday in Cairo.

Other sources at the meeting said Kuwait asked the Arab League to activate the joint Arab defense pact and come to the emirate's aid ''as soon as possible.'' The pact has never been activated before, even in an Arab-Israeli war.

Western diplomats said Kuwait's Arab allies would most likely condemn the invasion but not resort to force.

Kuwait's defense was no numerical match for the Iraqi military. Baghdad boasts a battle-hardened armed forces of 1 million men, a formidable air force and substantial tank divisions. Kuwait's armed forces total about 20,000.

(AUG. 3) UPI - Tennessee state lawmaker Dwight Henry won the Republican gubernatorial nomination yesterday and will face Democratic Governor Ned McWherter in November. McWherter's administration has been tainted by scandal, but he has NOT been implicated. He remains so popular that several G-O-P leaders refused to run against him.

Health Secretary Louis Sullivan is demanding an apology from California Congressman Fortney Stark, but Stark refuses. The California Democrat yesterday accused Sullivan of changing his views on sensitive issues to appease President Bush. He called Sullivan a ''disgrace to his profession and his race.''

Jim Bakker's scandal-scarred P-T-L ministry apparently has finally been sold. A bankruptcy judge in Fort Mill, South Carolina, yesterday signed an order selling the ministry to California evangelist Morris Cerullo for 52-Million dollars. Cerullo now has 90 days to come up with 45-Million dollars to complete the sale.

Mercy killer Roswell Gilbert is a free man following his release from prison in Florida yesterday. The 81-year-old Gilbert was freed after serving five and one-half years through a clemency order. He says he shot his ailing wife in 1985 to end her suffering, but says he now regrets his action.

Idaho Governor Cecil Andrus fulfilled a two-year-old pledge yesterday by naming the first woman in the state's history to serve on an Idaho appellate court. Boise attorney Cathy Silak was appointed to replace retiring Judge Donald Burnett. Andrus promised in 1989 to name a woman either to the state Supreme Court or the court of appeals.

MEXICO CITY (AUG. 3) UPI - The last surviving participant in Cuba's war of independence from Spain died at age 108, the official Cuban news agency

Prensa Latina announced.

In a dispatch monitored in Mexico City, Prensa Latina quoted sources as saying Juan Fajardo Vega died Thursday at his home in Contramaestre, 555 miles east of Havana.

Fajardo Vega joined the independence fighters, known in Cuba as ''nambis '' at age 14, and fought under Gen. Saturnino Lora in the second independence war (1895-1898) against Spanish colonialists.

The news agency said Fajardo Vega - who also supported Cuban leader Fidel Castro's revolution that ousted dictator Fulgencio Batista in 1959 - had 21 children, 83 grandchildren, 238 great-grandchildren, and an undetermined number of great-great-grandchildren.

(AUG. 8) UPI - Joe Torre found out that it's still a numbing experience to win a game, espicially when it's the first one in seven years.

''It wasn't easy,'' said Torre, following the Cardinals 4-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies. ''I'm still a little numb.''

The new Cardinals skipper enjoyed his team's first victory since taking the reins from interim manager Red Schoendienst on Wednesday. Schoendienst had stepped in when Whitey Herzog resigned July 6.

Although not new to major league management, Torre hasn't supervised from the dugout since being fired by the Atlanta Braves in 1984.

Vince Coleman's three-run double in the sixth inning off reliever Dennis Cook was the difference offensively and Lee Smith picked up his 18th save by retiring all six batters he faced over the final two innings.

Torre managed the Cincinnati Braves to a National League West title in 1982 and also skippered the New York Mets from 1977-81. He's been in the business long enough to know that a manager can only do so much.

''We got the big hit by Coleman and once we turned it over to Lee Smith there is nothing else you can do,'' Torre said. ''You stop managing, you win it or lose it.''

Held to just one single through the first five innings, St. Louis knocked out starter Jose DeJesus, 2-3, with singles by Todd Zeile, Milt Thompson and Jose Oquendo in the sixth.

Cook came in and struck out pinch hitter Rod Hudler but Coleman lined his double over center fielder Lenny Dykstra for a 4-2 Cardinal lead.

Philadelphia could only muster one more run in the bottom of the sixth when Charlie Hayes came home on a pinch-hit single by Randy Ready to finalize scoring, 4-3.

--- AROUND THE NL ---

Elsewhere in the National League, New York beat Montreal, 5-1; Pittburgh rapped Chicago, 8-5; San Diego beat Cincinnati, 8-5; Houston stopped Atlanta 3-1, and San Francisco downed Los Angeles, 3-1.

Mets 5, Expos 1

At Montreal, Frank Viola threw a six-hitter to become the National League's first 15-game winner this season and Darryl Strawberry drove in three runs with a single and a homer to lead New York. Viola, 15-5, threw his fifth complete game and improved to 4-0 lifetime against the Expos since coming to the NL a year ago. Dennis Martinez took the loss and fell to 7-8.

Pirates 8, Cubs 5

At Chicago, Bobby Bonilla smacked two solo homers, and Andy Van Slyke and Barry Bonds added two-run shots powering Pittsburgh. John Smiley, 5-5, scattered nine hits over 5 1-3 innings, ending a personal four-game winless streak. Bob Walk finished for his first save since 1986. Steve Wilson, 3-7, pitched just one inning for the loss.

Padres 8, Reds 5

At Cincinnati, Joe Carter drove in five runs with a three-run homer and a double to lift San Diego. Dennis Rasmussen, 8-9, gave up five runs on eight hits and two walks while striking out one over 6 1-3 innings. Tom Browning, 10-6, was belted for seven runs on seven hits and two walks over two innings.

Astros 3, Braves 1

At Houston, Bill Gullickson scattered five hits over seven innings and Carl Nichols and Casey Candaele provided pinch-hit RBI to lead the Astros.Gullickson, 7-8, allowed one run while walking one and striking out one. Larry Andersen pitched the final two innings and recorded his fifth save. Tom Glavine, 6-7, allowed three runs on eight hits in a losing effort.

Giants 3, Dodgers 1

At San Francisco, Robbie Thompson homered in the fifth inning to break a 1-1 tie and Matt Williams contributed an RBI double to lift the Giants. John Burkett, 10-3, scattered six hits over 8 1-3 innings. Mark Thurmond finished for his third save. Fernando Valenzuela, 8-9, worked six innings, allowing six hits and all three Giants runs.

(AUG. 3) UPI - Two mighty swings from Oakland's Jose Canseco helped put Chicago back in their place despite gaining their first double-header sweep in seven years.

Lead by several rookies Thursday night, Chicago swept Milwaukee 4-3 and 4-2, but Canseco blasted two home runs, including his major league leading 34th in a 7-5 win over California.

The White Sox, who had not swept a double-header since 1983, only gained a half-game on Oakland. Chicago remains 3 1-2 game back in the AL West.

Frank Thomas, making his major-league debut, drove in the winning run in the opener and rookie Robin Ventura lined a two-run single in the nightcap.

June 1990 draft choice Alex Fernandez added seven strong innings in his major-league pitching debut in the first game.

''Our young kids don't seem to be phased with the big league situation,'' White Sox Manager Jeff Torberg said. ''To develop and win at the same time is pretty sensational, and that's what we're doing.''

''You always have jitters and you have to prove you belong here,'' Fernandez, a 20-year-old right-hander, said. ''I think I did that tonight.''

Bobby Thigpen pitched the ninth inning in each game to earn his major-league leading 33rd and 34th saves.

He warned not to count out Chicago.

''The fact that we're young is why everybody is waiting for us to lose four, five, six in a row, fade into the sunset and let Oakland win it,'' Thigpen said.

But if Canseco keeps on bashing home runs to lead Oakland, Chicago might not have much choice.

Canseco overtook Cecil Fielder of Detroit for the major league home run lead and registered his seventh multi-homer game of the season. He's not talking about Chicago's season or their rookies. Instead he's talking about a 50-50 season.

''You all laughed at me when I talked about 40-40,'' Canseco said, referring to home runs and stolen bases. ''You might see 50-50.''

No player has ever hit 50 home runs and stolen 50 bases in one year and Canseco is the first to ever go 40-40, hitting 42 homers and stealing 40 bases in 1988.

--- AROUND THE AL ---

Elsewhere in the AL, Baltimore ripped Kansas City 5-1, Detroit edged New York 6-5 in 14 innings, Texas shaded Toronto 5-4 in 11 innings, and Seattle pounded Minnesota 7-2.

Orioles 5, Royals 1

At Baltimore, Cal Ripken tripled across three runs and scored another to power the Orioles. Bob Melvin hit his third home run and Craig Worthington added an RBI single. Dave Johnson, 11-6, got the win. Gregg Olson, recorded two outs for his 25th save. Pete Filson remained winless at 0-2.

Tigers 6, Yankees 5, 14 innings

At New York, Chet Lemon's one-out triple in the 14th inning scored Dave Bergman to lift Detroit, ending the 4-hour, 40-minute game. Cecil Fielder struck out five times in six at-bats.

Rangers 5, Blue Jays 4, 11 innings

At Texas, Steve Buechele's two-out single in the 11th inning scored Ruben Sierra from second to carry the Rangers. Brad Arnsberg, 5-1, pitched the final 2 2-3 innings for the Rangers' fourth straight victory. Toronto fell one-half game behind first-place Boston in the AL East. John Candaleria, 7-4, took the loss in relief.

Mariners 7, Twins 2

At Seattle, Tracy Jones drove in two runs and Brian Holman scattered seven hits over eight innings to lead the Mariners.. Alvin Davis added three hits, including a homer, to fuel Seattle's 15-hit attack. Holman, raised his record to 11-7. Mark Guthrie, 3-4, absorbed the loss, allowing four runs in 5 2-3 innings.

FRESNO, CA (AUG. 3) UPI - Former President Ronald Reagan walked away with a bad taste in his mouth after being attacked by a swarm of light-loving gnats at a $1,000-a-plate fund-raiser with a group of Republican farm businessmen.

Reagan, appearing Thursday evening at the outdoor gathering of San Joaquin Valley agribusinessmen to boost the gubernatorial campaign of Republican Sen. Pete Wilson, spent much of his speech swatting insects and cracking jokes.

The gnats buzzed around the lighted podium, circling the former president as he tried to deliver his address and at times flying into his mouth.

Reagan coughed several times during the speech and at one point apologized for his voice, explaining, ''Some of these gnats got inside.''

A short time later, Wilson brought him a glass of water.

''They don't taste good at all,'' Reagan said, drawing a big laugh.

The $1,000-a-plate affair, which drew 350 guests including many powerful agriculture business figures from the region, was staged along the Kings River, in the backyard of a mansion owned by cattleman John Harris.

Reagan plugged Wilson's gubernatorial candidacy against Democrat Dianne Feinstein in the November general election and praised San Joaquin Valley farmers.

As he was leaving the event, Reagan was asked by a reporter what he thought of Roseanne Barr's contoversial rendition of the national anthem at a recent baseball game in San Diego. ''Once is enough,'' he said.

CARTERET, NJ (AUG. 3) UPI - A pipeline burst early Friday on the grounds of the oil storage facility, spilling about 84,000 gallons of jet fuel into a contained area on property bordering the Arthur Kill waterway, officials said.

Coast Guard Petty Officer William Falk said the spill was reported at 1:50 a.m. on the edge of the waterway that separates New York and New Jersey.

''Nothing has entered the water,'' Falk said. ''The only threat is fire at this time, and the Carteret Fire Department is on the scene in force.''

Falk said 84,000 gallons of jet fuel gushed from the break in the pipeline into a dike area on the GATX Corp.

Falk said the Hazardous Material Unit from Middlesex County also was called to the scene.

The Arthur Kill - a much-traveled waterway within New York Harbor that straddles New Jersey and New York - has been the scene of a number of fuel oil spills, but Falk said it did not appear the jet fuel accident would contaminate the waterway.

SEATTLE (AUG. 3) UPI - Boeing Co. officials disagree with a National Transportation Safety Board finding that a spark from a malfunctioning fuel switch may have caused an explosion aboard a Philippine Air Lines 737-300 last May that killed eight people.

The safety board said Wednesday a ''float switch'' that regulated the flow of fuel from the plane's central tank was defective and, combined with damaged wire near the switch, could have caused sparks that ignited the fuel tank.

Boeing spokesman Tom Cole said Thursday company inspectors found no evidence to indicate a spark to the float switch caused the explosion.

''We have not put out any all-fleet advisory about investigating or inspecting the float switch,'' he said. ''At this time, Boeing does not believe that sufficient evidence exists that warrants a call for a fleetwide inspection.''

The NTSB called for immediate inspection of all Boeing 737-300, 737-400 and 737-500 aircraft, warning of possible fuel tank explosions. Federal Aviation Administration officials said the FAA had not decided whether to order inspections.

The board said evidence indicated the explosion aboard the Philippine Air Line 737-300 May 11 may have been caused by a malfunctioning fuel switch, combined with faulty wiring.

The blast, which killed eight and seriously injured 30 of the 119 people aboard, occurred while the plane was preparing to take off from Manila.

The safety board board said in a letter to FAA chief James Busey that faulty wiring could create ''the potential for a fuel tank explosion.''

The float switch, provided to Boeing by Revere Aerospace of Wallingford, Conn., ''may not have passed inspection when originally assembled,'' the safety board said.

Ron Buchanan, president of Revere Aerospace, disagreed, saying there was ''no evidence that there was any defect.''

The safety board told Busey no evidence of a bomb or other sabotage was found.

Boeing has delivered about 750 of the 737 series planes to dozens of airlines. All U.S. carriers would have to conduct any inspections ordered by the FAA.

Altogether, airlines have placed orders for 1,637 of the 737 series planes at a cost of $32 million to $33 million each.

ASTORIA, OR (AUG. 3) UPI - A judge denied a request to halt a shark fishing tournament starting Friday and opponents say the tournament will lure sharks dangerously close to beaches.

Circuit Court Judge Pat Dooley said opponents failed to give the tournament's organizers sufficient notice of Thursday's hearing for a temporary restraining order.

The opponents, representing Safe Harbors and Recreational Choices, or SHARC, appeared for the hearing but organizers of the event failed to show up.

The hunt, which is set for Friday and Saturday 20 miles off the mouth of the Columbia River, apparently was to go ahead as planned.

Eugene lawyer David Atkin filed a lawsuit Wednesday in an attempt to halt the tournament but Dooley ruled that Atkin failed to give the organizers enough time to prepare their case.

Atkin was hoping the judge would issue a temporary restraining order against the hunt and allow him to prepare a case for a permanent injunction against the event.

Atkin said Wednesday he had solid evidence that chumming - throwing blood and fish parts into the ocean to attract sharks - would lure the creatures close to shore and increase the likelihood of attacks on humans.

But Ron Miller, an organizer of the event, said the contest poses no danger because most of the fishing will take place 20 to 100 miles offshore.

Steve McKenzie, manager of the Cleanlife Surf Shop in Seaside and a member of SHARC, said lifeguards have signed affidavits warning the tournament could bring sharks dangerously close to beaches.

Mark Marks, a white shark behaviorist with the Shark Resarch Committee in Van Nuys, Calif., said the Oregon contest would ''increase the risk of encounters between sharks and the people who use this area for recreation.''

Marks also said the proliferation of shark tournaments in California has seriously affected several types of sharks. He said such contests spring from a ''head-hunting mentality that has no place in a civilized society.''

Miller, a charter boat owner and former lawyer, said only a dozen or so boats are likely to participate in the tournament. The entry fee has been cut from $600 to $10.

He also said most of the sharks would be eaten, not simply photographed, weighed and tossed in a landfill. A shark dinner, free to the public, is planned Saturday night at the Dog Salmon restaurant in Long Beach, Wash.

MIAMI (AUG. 3) UPI - Airline chief Frank Lorenzo may try to reacquire some of Eastern Airlines' assets from the creditors who wrested control of the financially troubled company from him in April, it was reported Friday.

Lorenzo, whose Texas Air firm changed its name to Continental Airlines Holdings Inc. in June, wants some of Eastern's planes and its gates and slots in Atlanta and the Northeast, The Miami Herald said, citing sources familiar with the carrier's troubles.

As head of Texas Air, then the parent company of Eastern Airlines, Lorenzo oversaw Eastern's filing for protection from its creditors under Chapter 11 of the U.S. Bankruptcy Code following a crippling strike by the carrier's pilots, flight attendants and ground workers in March 1989.

In April, a federal bankruptcy court judge heeded the requests of the airline's unsecured creditors and took control of Eastern away from Lorenzo and into the hands of court-appointed trustee Martin Shugrue. However, the airline continues to lose about $1 million a day.

Lorenzo wants to regain selected Eastern assets for Continental Airlines. Under bankruptcy law, he is free to bargain with creditors for the assets he wants.

A bid for assets only would mean Lorenzo would have no obligation to hire any Eastern employees, though he would probably need highly trained workers, such as pilots.

Lorenzo's interest in acquiring specific assets manifested itself in a letter written Aug. 1 to Tom Cooper, president of the working pilots group at Eastern.

With Northwest Airlines parent, NWA Inc., expressing an interest in taking over Eastern, Cooper sent a letter to several other airlines who might consider acquiring Eastern. Northwest Airlines employees are very unionized, which would not necessarily bode well for Eastern's largely non-union staff.

''The only person to respond to my letter so far has been Frank Lorenzo,'' Cooper told The Herald. ''He indicated that although Continental has not yet prepared a bid for the assets of Eastern Airlines, and although they have not made a decision to propose one yet, that if they did, the working employees of Eastern would be of prime consideration.''

The newspaper also reported Lorenzo has talked with NWA Chairman Alfred Checchi about an agreement under which Northwest would bid for some Eastern assets while Continental would acquire others.

If such an agreement does not materialize, Lorenzo could still make a competing bid for assets Northwest also wants.

The airline's creditors probably would receive a combination of cash, notes and a promise to assume the continuing losses in exchange for the carrier, said Daniel Hersh, an airline analyst for Bateman Eichler, Hill Richards in Los Angeles.

Hersh said there are several pieces of Eastern that Continental would like including 53 gates in Atlanta and others at New York LaGuardia and Washington National airports.

''Continental does not have a Southeast hub and this would give it a hub in Atlanta,'' Hersh said. ''Also, Continental is strong in Newark but not at the other New York airports, where this would give it gates and slots.''

(AUG. 3) UPI - U-S and Soviet officials are preparing to issue an UNprecedented joint condemnation of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. Secretary of State Baker is en route to Moscow, where he and the Soviet foreign minister plan to make their joint statement today. In Kuwait, fierce fighting is reported in Kuwait City between pockets of loyalist troops and Iraqi soldiers. Iraqi troops also are reported to be advancing toward the border with Saudi Arabia.

Most world leaders condemned Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, but NOT radical Libya. The Libyan government joined with Iraq in saying Kuwait provoked the attack by over-producing oil. Libya also warned against outside intervention, saying- ''the Arabs are capable of solving their problems on their own.'' Moscow did condemn yesterday's invasion and suspended arms shipments to Iraq.

There's good news and bad news about the savings-and-loan crisis. The nation's top thrift regulator told a Senate panel the government expects to recover nearly 300-Million dollars this year from settlements in thrift fraud cases. That's about 100-Million more than anticipated. But Attorney General Thornburgh told the panel yesterday it's UNlikely the government will ever be able to recover all the BILLIONS of dollars lost in the S-and-L failures.

The repaired shuttle Columbia was hauled from its hangar to NASA's rocket assembly building yesterday... in preparation for roll-out to the launch pad next week. (AUG. 3) UPI - The National Transportation Safety Board says a spark from a faulty fuel switch might have caused an explosion aboard a Philippine Air Lines jet last May that killed eight people. More violence in Lebanon. Police and security sources say two car bombs exploded in southern Lebanon, killing 13 people and wounding 19. One of the bombings occurred last night in front of an office of the Syrian-backed Shiite Amal movement in Tyre , 46 miles south of Beirut. Police say another car bomb blew up in an Amal-controlled town, 33 miles southeast of Beirut.

A Hawaiian landmark is being destroyed by lava from the Kilauea Volcano. Officials say lava that has already virtually destroyed the town of Kalapana has started claiming the world-famous Kaimu black sand beach. Big Island civil defense chief Harry Kim says- ''This is the last foothold of old Hawaii.'' Kilauea's current eruption began January 3rd, 1984, and has caused extensive damage on the picturseque island of Hawaii.

Officials in New Jersey say a pipeline burst early this morning on the grounds of a storage facility near the Arthur Kill waterway, spilling 84-thousand gallons of jet fuel into a contained area on the property. Authorities say it's UNlikely that any of the fuel will spill into the waterway. The Coast Guard initially estimated the spill at half-a-Million gallons, but that was later downgraded.

PHILADELPHIA (AUG. 3) UPI - A police officer was suspended without pay for failing to help a homeless woman who was literally freezing to death in December, police said Friday.

Officer Raymond Ruczynski, 43, a 19-year veteran of the police force, was suspended this week for 10 days upon the recommendation of the Police Board of Inquiry, police Capt. Richard DeLise said.

Nearly an hour after the officer reported to police headquarters on Dec. 16 that the woman was drunk and had refused assistance, Mary Dennis, 59, was found frozen to death on a bench at a city bus stop.

The temperature that day was 26 degrees with wind gusts up to 26 mph.

Police dispatchers received at least eight calls from passersby who saw the woman convulsing and apparently having trouble breathing. The woman was wearing several layers of clothing but her midsection was exposed, police said.

The Fraternal Order of Police was expected to appeal Ruczynski's suspension.

(AUG. 3) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange plunged Friday in continued light trading on reports that Iraqi troops were approaching the Saudi Arabian border following their invasion of Kuwait.

The blue-chip Nikkei Index of 225 selected shares, which plummented 592.81 points Thursday, tumbled 729.42 points or 2.41 percent to end the week at 29,515.76, its lowest level in three months.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Price Index of all major listed shares, which fell 31.25 points Thursday, lost an additional 40.76 points to end at 2,174.67.

Trading was estimated at a fairly light 430 million shares, compared with 403 million shares Thursday.

Declines hammered advances 861 to 140, while 111 issues managed to escape the selloff.

Analysts said investors were backpedaling to await developments in the tumultuous Middle East.

Reports that Iraq's army, having invaded Kuwait, was moving toward Saudi Arabia, reversed an uptrend of late morning trading.

Although there were no immediate fears for Japan's oil supply, investors worried that higher oil prices and interest rates would result in the near term, analysts said.

''The mood of the market was mainly a wait-and-see,'' said one analyst with Nomura Securities Co.

''The effect on the economy may not be immediately bad.''

Economist Robert Alan Feldman of Salomon Brothers Asia agreed, saying his calculations showed that even if oil prices jumped to $25 a barrel from their second-quarter average of $17.50, Japanese inflation would only rise about one percentage point.

An oil shortage in the near term is unlikely, Feldman said, because inventories are high.

Additionally, Feldman pointed out that Japan's current economic expansion is not dependent on the health of its export markets, because it is driven by domestic investment and consumption.

But other analysts were more pessimistic, noting the fall in bond prices signalled higher interest rates in the near term.

In addition, the market worries that the Bank of Japan would step in to raise its key interest rate as a way to head off the inflationary impact of rising oil prices.

The drop in the yen's value against the dollar of more than two yen in the past two trading sessions on the Tokyo Foreign Exchange added to these fears, analysts noted.

The stock market's losses were broad, as the only buying interest was among bargain hunters looking for stocks with low price-equity ratios, market watchers noted.

Elsewhere in Asia, stock prices on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange plummeted in volatile trading amid reports that Iraqi troops were massing on the Saudi Arabian border prompting a wave of selling.

Losses were recorded across the board.

The closely-watched Hang Seng Index, which fell 53.46 points Thursday, plunged 53.23 points or 1.7 percent to end the week at 3,356.65.

Among the narrower market gauges, industrials dropped 60.88 points, utilities tumbled 99.18, financial lost 11.57 and interest sensative properties plunged 83.59 points.

Volume amounted to around 1.88 billion shares, down slightly from 1.90 billion shares changing hands Thursday.

The market opened the day sharply lower, diving more than 31 points in the first hour of trading.

Midmorning buying cut the early losses, but profit-taking in the final minutes of the morning session sent stocks spiraling, analysts said.

''All the selling pressure is coming from what is happening in the Middle East, said David Lavington, a manager with Morgan Grenfell.

''There were reports in the late morning that Iraq was massing troops on the border with Saudi Arabia and that led to a big drop.

''I don't think the institutions are selling too aggressively - it is more trade-orientated and retail clients.''

Iraq invaded its Arab neighbor Kuwait Thursday after talks between the two nations broke down over oil and border disputes.

''There was a bit of panic selling in the secondary issues in the morning '' said an analyst with Chin Tung Investments. ''Everyone is extremely cautious at the moment.''

The wave of selling was cut short in the afternoon amid passive bargain hunting, but profit-taking in the final few minutes of action killed the short rally, market watchers said.

In Singapore, stock prices on the Singapore Stock Exchange nosedived in brisk trading following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and its negative impact on overseas markets.

The closely-watched Straits Times Industrial Index, which fell 25.26 points Thursday, fell another 21.45 points to 1,511.05.

The narrower All Singapore Index, which fell 8.09 points Thursday, lost 4.55 points to 430.30.

An estimated 82.7 million shares changed hands, compared with 94.2 million shares Thursday.

Analysts said local investors were concerned about the prospect of the Kuwait Investment Office dumping its sizable holdings in Singapore and Malaysian counters to raise cash to counter attacks.

Following the plunge in Tokyo, brokers said blue chips were particularly hard hit but there was no panic selling.

On the trading floor, Singapore Airlines foreign shares paced the declining issues followed by National Steel Ltd and NST Press.

Fraser and Neave ordinary paced the advancing issues followed by Haw Par and Shell ordinary shares.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - The U.S. civilian jobless rate jumped to 5.5 percent in July from 5.2 percent in June in the worst showing in two years the Labor Department reported Friday.

The number of non-farm jobs plunged by 219,000 in July to 110.7 million, with the largest job losses coming in the services sector of the economy, including 162,000 temporary census workers.

The construction industry also suffered heavily as did manufacturing, but the pace of factory job losses was slower than in recent months, according to the report compiled by the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

''July losses were essentially limited to electrical equipment and the industries that produce materials used in construction,'' the Labor Department said.

A government spokesman said July's 5.5 percent civilian jobless rate was the highest since 5.5 percent in July 1988. In April, the jobless rate hit 5.4 percent, but fell to 5.3 percent in May.

Excluding the layoffs of the temporary census workers, employment in the service industries was essentially unchanged in July and health services - which have been rapidly expanding in recent months - posted only a moderate gain. There were also more jobs added in the retail trade industry, but employment held study in wholesale trade, finance, insurance and real estate.

The Labor Department also said there was little change in the payrolls of transportation companies and public utilities.

There was also a bit of a bright spot in the industrial sector of the economy with job increases in the fabricated metals and textiles industries, but the total number of U.S. factory jobs has plunged by more than 300,000 since March, 1989.

The July average weekly workweek held steady at 34.7 hours for the second consecutive month, while the manufacturing workweek fell to 40.9 hours in July from 41 hours in June. July overtime averaged 3.7 hours, down from 3.8 hours in June.

Including military personnel, the July jobless rate increased to 5.4 percent from 5.1 percent.

For blacks, the July jobless rate soared to 11.3 percent from 10.4 percent while the July jobless rate for teenagers leaped to 16.3 percent from 14.1 percent.

The jobless rate for hispanics jumped to 7.9 percent last month from 7.1 percent in June.

MIAMI (AUG. 3) UPI - Two accused Colombia cocaine traffickers, one of them a member of the Cali drug family, were extradited to Florida to face drug charges Friday, , the U.S. Marshals Service said.

David Posada, 44, and Martin Alonso Gil, 24, who were charged in separate indictments, arrived in Miami from Bogota, Colombia, at 4:58 a.m., said K. Michael Moore, director of the U.S. Marshals Service.

The defendants will be held in a federal prison pending their arraignment.

Posada, who was indicted in September, was a member of the Cali drug family, supervising cocaine smuggling and distribution in south Flordia. He is accused of importing more than 3,000 pounds of cocaine to Florida from June 1985 to October 1986.

The Colombian native, who is also known as Humberto Vega, was arrested by Colombian police in February in Bogota.

In 1989, Gil, also a native of Colombia, was indicted with his brother, Jose Fernando Gil, for possession with intent to distribute 11 pounds of cocaine.

When the indictment was returned, the brothers were living in nearby Hialeah but fled the United States. Both men were arrested by Colombian authorities in Medellin in January. Jose Fernando Gil was extradited to Miami on July 18.

Twenty-two suspects have been returned to face charges since the Colombian government began extraditing suspected drug traffickers to the United States in August 1989, Moore said.

TOKYO (AUG. 3) UPI - Paced by a swollen trade imbalance, Japan's current account surplus in June surged 12.2 percent over a year ago to $4.782 billion, the Finance Ministry said in a preliminary report Friday.

Compared with the previous month, the June surplus was up 327.3 percent over $1.461 billion, the ministry said.

The June figure brought Japan's current account surplus for the first half of this year to $20.55 billion, down 32.0 percent from the like period last year, the ministry said.

The current account covers both merchandize and service trade.

The ministry said the trade surplus in June soared to $7.054 billion, up 270.0 percent from $2.615 billion in May and up 8.0 percent from $6.534 billion a year ago.

In yen terms, the surplus amounted to 735.3 billion yen, up from 224.3 billion yen in May and 613.0 billion yen a year ago.

Japan's exports grew 3.3 percent over a year ago to $23.106 billion while imports rose 1.4 percent to $16.052 billion, the Ministry said.

Exports in May declined 1.3 percent from a year ago to $21.103 billion while imports soared 13.9 percent to $18.488 billion.

''There are ups and downs from month to month and it's too early to conclude that Japan's surplus has begun to increase again,'' a ministry official said.

''Generally speaking,'' he added, ''the recent pattern characterized by shrinking exports and growing imports remains unchanged.''

The official said exports of automobiles and ships increased in June while imports of raw materials declined.

Government officials earlier expressed concern that the recent weakness of the Japanese yen against the U.S. dollar may generate an export drive, rekindling criticism against Japan's huge trade and current account surplus.

The U.S. dollar ranged from 152.17 yen to 155.62 yen in June, compared with 140.18-148.70 yen in the same month last year.

A weak yen makes Japanese products more competitive on overseas markets but makes imported goods more expensive.

The invisible trade account, covering such items as tourism and service trade, posted a deficit of $2.105 billion, up from $1.078 billion in May and $2.073 billion a year ago, the ministry said.

The long-term capital account showed a $7.821 billion deficit, up from $5.557 billion in May and $1.922 billion in June 1989.

The overall balance of payments posted a surplus of $3.008 billion, down from $8.891 billion in May and $8.808 billion a year ago.

LONDON (AUG. 3) UPI - Stock prices were slightly higher in moderate trading at midday Friday on the London International stock exchange amid some bargin-hunting following Thursday's selloff.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which measures the value of Britain's largest 100 companies in terms of market capitalization, was ahead 2.7 points to 2,307.2. The closely watched index fell 34.5 points Thursday.

The narrower top 30 industrial average was ahead 3.4 points to 1,814.8.

Volume amounted to around 290 million shares compared with 340 million shares traded during the same period Thursday.

Analysts said prices edged higher as some institutional investors, heavy with cash, were buying in the market despite the invasion of Kuwait by Iraqi forces on Thursday.

On the trading floor, British Petroleum a major component of the Financial Times Index was ahead 7 cents to $9.

Elsewhere in the closely-watched oil patch, Enterprise Oil climbed 25 cents to $12.42, London & Scottish Marine Oil climbed 30 cents to $8.60 and Hardy Oil climbed 25 cents to $3.83.

Among some of the day's other widely traded stocks, Imperial Chemical Industries gained 9 cents to $18.40 and Barclays bank PLC slipped 13 cents to $6.75.

TOKYO (AUG. 3) UPI - The government has agreed to a Kuwaiti request to freeze its assets in Japan and prepared to impose sanctions against Iraq in protest against the Iraii invasion of Kuwait, government officials said Friday.

Foreign Ministry spokesman Taizo Watanabe told reporters the government decided to freeze Kuwait's assets in Japan in response to a request made Thursday by acting Kuwaiti Ambassador to Japan Adel Hasan.

Watanabe said Japan would consider taking further measures after hearing reports on the outcome of deliberations on the Iraqi military action at the U.N. Security Council later Friday.

Watanabe estimated Kuwait's assets in Japan at $20 billion to $30 billion.

The Finance Ministry, meanwhile, asked commercial banks and brokerage houses to freeze Kuwait's financial assets, officials said.

A government spokesman earlier Friday said Japan will take actions against Iraq in cooperation with the United States and other countries.

The United States imposed a sweeping trade embargo, halting imports of oil and other goods from Iraq and banning nearly all U.S. exports to the Gulf nation.

Foreign ministry officials said measures under review by the Japanese government include a freezing of a $2.7 billion aid commitment to Iraq and a halt to bilateral trade, including suspension of Japanese oil imports.

In December last year, Japan agreed to resume providing Iraq with a total of $2.7 billion in yen credit and government-insured export loans, suspended during the eight-year Iran-Iraq war.

Iraq supplies about 6.0 percent of crude oil imported Japan annually.

Government officials disspelled concern about a possible oil crisis arising from the flareup, citing Japan's dependence on Iraqi supplied oil is small and the country can find substitute suppliers to make up for the loss.

''I don't see any possibility that the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait will cause panic or a serious oil crisis in Japan in the short-run,'' said Ryozo Hayashi, director of the International Energy Policy Division at the Natural Resources and Energy Agency.

''Even if the imports from Kuwait should stop completely, the loss would be made up by increasing imports from other exporting countries,'' Hayashi said, citing Japan has enough crude oil reserves equivalent to a supply of 124 days.

Kuwait also supplies about 6.0 percent of Japan's total crude oil needs. Japan's imports of Kuwaiti oil amounted to 220,000 barrels per day for the first half of this year.

Japan has promoted development of alternate energy sources since the 1973 Arab oil embargo. It also has diversified oil supply sources.

Oil imports from the Middle East now account for about 70 percent of Japan's total oil needs, down from over 80 percent in the past.

Saudi Arabia, the world's largest oil producer, the United Arab Emirates and Indonesia are major oil suppliers to Japan.

Japan's trade with Iraq recovered after the end of the Persian Gulf war. In 1989, Japan's exports soared 20.9 percent over the preceding year to $490.6 million while its imports, mostly crude oil, surged 46.6 percent to $1.21 billion, according to government statistics.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - President Bush, facing his biggest crisis yet in the volatile Middle East, considered stepped-up retaliation against Iraq Friday for its invasion of Kuwait - and awaited word on eight missing Americans.

Having consulted with allies around the globe, Bush refused to rule out military intervention in the Persian Gulf, but he seemed willing to give Arab leaders time to find a peaceful solution, ''an Arab answer.''

Bush met early Friday with national security advisers at the White House to again review the situation and a spokesman said he may confer again later in the day with foreign heads of state.

''We have many options,'' Bush said Thursday after he turned the economic screws on Iraq for its early morning raid of oil-rich Kuwait.

He banned all U.S. trade with Baghdad - including oil imports - froze its assets in the United States and helped drum up condemnation of Iraq's ''naked aggression.''

A State Department official said Friday, ''One of the U.S. oil companies in Kuwait has reported that eight of its workers in the oil fields near the Iraqi border in northern Kuwait are missing. Our embassy in Baghdad has asked the government of Iraq for information on the whereabouts of these American citizens, reminding the government of Iraq of its commitment to respect the security and welfare of U.S. citizens.''

The official declined to identify the company, but said, ''We haven't gotten an answer yet'' from Iraq.

Bush told reporters if Americans were rounded up by Iraqi forces, ''it would affect the United States in a dramatic way. I view as a fundamental responsibility of my presidency protecting American citizens.''

The president spoke with several Arab leaders Thursday about the lightning attack by a massive Iraqi force that rolled over Kuwait, a small nation closely identified with U.S. interests in the area.

''I am somewhat heartened by the conversations I had with (Egyptian President Hosni) Mubarak, and with (Jordan's) King Hussein and (President) Salih (of Yemen) - all of whom I consider friends of the United States,'' said Bush, who also spoke with King Fahd of Saudi Arabia.

''All of them are trying to engage in what they call an Arab answer ... working diligently behind the scenes to come to an agreement that would satisfy the United Nations and the rest of the world,'' Bush said.

A White House official said the administration was waiting for a proposal from Arab leaders. ''They would like to settle this themselves. We certainly expect the proposal to be non-military.''

Prior to an emergency meeting at the White House early Thursday with top aides, Bush told reporters he was not ''contemplating'' military intervention.

But later in the day, following a previously scheduled talk in Aspen,

Colo., with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, Bush said, ''We're not ruling any option in, we're not ruling any option out.''

The Pentagon said a U.S. Navy task force of an aircraft carrier and six other ships were steaming outside the Persian Gulf but had no plans to enter the strategic waterway. Eight other U.S. warships already are in the gulf.

''We are concerned about this naked aggression,'' Bush said, ''and hopeful that a peaceful solution will be found that will result in the restoration of the leaders of Kuwait to their rightful place.''

Thatcher repeatedly referred to possible action by the United Nations under Chapter 7 of its charter.

That language allows the U.N. Security Council to impose economic or military sanctions - short of armed force - against any country that refuses to abide by its resolutions.

Bush had planned to return to Washington late Friday, but due to the Persian Gulf crisis he arrived shortly after 2 a.m. EDT so he would be in a better position to monitor developments.

The president welcomed word that the Soviet Union - long a backer of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein - had cut off arms shipments to Baghdad. But he responded cautiously to a plea for military intervention from Kuwait.

''We're considering what the next step'' for the United States, the Arab states, and the United Nations should be, Bush told reporters when asked about the appeal.

Bush, in an executive order, froze all Iraqi assets in the United States and also locked up Kuwait assets to prevent an Iraqi-backed puppet government from appropriating them.

EAST JORDAN, MI (AUG. 3) UPI - A white farmer wants to donate 40 acres in northern Michigan to help establish a settlement of black families in a region where they are a rare sight.

Albert J. Legato, 68, who moved to the area in 1959 from metropolitan Detroit and has not been involved in civil rights activities, said he thinks his unusual plan would benefit both blacks and whites.

He said it would give blacks an opportunity to get away from the city and its urban problems and would expose whites to a different culture.

The rolling, mostly tree-covered acreage is 8 miles southeast of East Jordan in Antrim County, a rural area in northwest Lower Michigan. The property is valued at $20,000.

The 1980 Census recorded only 15 blacks in Antrim County, population 16,194.

Neighboring counties also have few blacks. Charlevoix County, with a population of 19,907, has 15 blacks; Crawford County has 56 out of a population of 9,465; and Kalkaska County has only three out of 10,952.

In Grand Traverse County, the region's most populous county, there are 163 blacks in a population of 54,899.

''I got the idea in June when I attended my grandson's graduation from East Jordan High School,'' Legato said. ''I didn't see one black person.''

Legato said he discussed the idea of donating 40 acres of his 160-acre dairy farm with his wife and son and then wrote the Detroit News in an effort to put his idea before black groups in the Detroit area. The newspaper ran a front-page article on Legato's offer Friday.

''I will give this land to an organization that has at least 1,000 black families or more, with children,'' Legato wrote the newspaper. ''I do not want any money. All I ask is that they establish residency here, by living on this property for 10 years, after which it will be theirs, free and clear.''

He suggested that any organization interested in his proposal visit the property this summer and perhaps investigate employment opportunities.

Legato said he did not have a definite idea of how many families would be able to build on the land, but he spoke of between 10 and 25. But a large black group would have to sponsor them, he said, to make the settlement a success.

''They have been discriminated against so much,'' he said. ''Why not try something like this? There has to be a homogenization of people. People need to get to know each other.''

Antrim County Commission Chairman Conrad Friedemann said he found the proposal curious.

''I don't have any official reaction. How could I?'' he said. ''If he wants to do it, that's his prerogative. I'm sure that if blacks move to Antrim County they would be welcomed like any other new residents.''

The Rev. James Holley, pastor of Little Rock Baptist Church, one of Detroit's largest black churches, said a lack of well-paying jobs in northern Michigan probably would work against Legato's plan.

''We need to be moving people to jobs rather than from them,'' Holley said. ''I'm sure he's sincere, but I don't think we can get all that excited about moving.''

But Holley said he would welcome a year-round campground in northern Michigan for inner city children. ''That's been one of my dreams for a long time. It's beautiful up there,'' he said.

BONN (AUG. 3) UPI - West German soccer fans wanting a souvenir from last month's World Cup championship now can buy a tuft of grass from the Rome Olympic Stadium field on which the final match was played.

''We noticed that soccer fans are crazy about everything that is remotely connected with the sport,'' said grass salesman Harald Pigall, who runs an advertisement agency in Hamburg. ''There have been cases in the past where people tore down goalposts after matches and took home bits of them. So why not sell the grass?''

Pigall said his company has chopped up the World Cup field into 306,000 pieces. Sales of the grass patches officially will be launched next week.

Fans can buy their souvenir patch of pitch in two forms. A model of the Olympic Stadium, with a patch of grass measuring 13 by 20 centimeters, sells for 160 marks ($100).

Labelled ''Evergreen,'' the patch comes either ''conserved'' in an authentic green color or ''alive'' for the fan to water and mow.

In a limited edition, an acrylic block housing a patch of grass measuring 6.5 by 5 centimeters will be sold for 285 marks ($178).

Both the model and the block will be accompanied by a certificate stating the grass is genuine and an insurance policy covering fire, theft and destruction of the souvenir.

From every piece sold, 10 marks ($6.25) will go to German Sports Aid, a public fund-raising institution to support West German sports.

A month after West Germany's World Cup triumph, the fanaticism which gripped the country throughout the tournament still rages, resulting in record season-ticket sales for Bundesliga teams and soaring demand for souvenirs.

Among the first to be snapped up was shirts and jogging outfits in the German team colors, which sold out nationwide within a week of the final.

Pigall said he went to Italy after the World Cup final and secured the rights to sell the grass from the Olympic Stadium.

He bought the whole field and will launch a worldwide sale, though the biggest part of the pitch will stay in West Germany.

''We had to fight hard to get the rights for the penalty spot from which Andreas Brehme scored the winning goal against Argentina,'' Pigall said.

The penalty spot, preserved in its entirety, will be sold at a special auction for the benefit of German Sports Aid.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - America's civilian jobless rate jumped to 5.5 percent in July from 5.2 percent in June in the worst showing in two years the Labor Department reported Friday.

DRI/McGraw Hill economist Cynthia Latta said the report confirms the economy is ''teetering'' on a recession.

''It finally brought the employment picture into line with all the data we've been seeing,'' Latta said from her office in Lexington, Mass. ''There's just not a lot of strength here.''

The number of non-farm jobs plunged by 219,000 in July to 110.7 million, with the largest job losses coming in the services sector of the economy, mainly 162,000 temporary census workers.

The construction industry also suffered heavily as did manufacturing, but the pace of factory job losses was slower than in recent months, according to the report compiled by the department's Bureau of Labor Statistics.

''July losses were essentially limited to electrical equipment and the industries that produce materials used in construction,'' the Labor Department said.

The government said July's 5.5 percent civilian jobless rate was the highest since 5.5 percent in July 1988. In April, the jobless rate hit 5.4 percent, but fell to 5.3 percent in May.

''The nation's job market weakened in July,'' said Janet Norwood, a Labor Department official. ''The civilian jobless rate, which had showed little movement for nearly 2 years, increased by 0.3 percentage point.''

In an interview on the Financial News Network, analyst Peter Cardillo of Jesup, Josephthal & Co. said the sharp decline in non-farm payrolls reflects a rapidly falling economy.

Excluding the layoffs of the temporary census workers, employment in the service industries was essentially unchanged in July and health services - which have been rapidly expanding in recent months - posted only a moderate gain.

There were also more jobs added in the retail trade industry, but employment held steady in wholesale trade, finance, insurance, real estate transportation and public utilities.

There was a bit of a bright spot in the industrial sector of the economy with job increases in the fabricated metals and textiles industries, but the total number of U.S. factory jobs has plunged by more than 300,000 since March 1989.

The July average weekly workweek held steady at 34.7 hours for the second consecutive month, while the manufacturing workweek fell to 40.9 hours in July from 41 hours in June. July overtime averaged 3.7 hours, down from 3.8 hours in June.

Weekly earnings, meanwhile, headed up by 0.6 percent in July.

Including military personnel, the July jobless rate increased to 5.4 percent from 5.1 percent.

For blacks, the July jobless rate soared to 11.3 percent from 10.4 percent while the July jobless rate for teenagers leaped to 16.3 percent from 14.1 percent.

The jobless rate for Hispanics jumped to 7.9 percent last month from 7.1 percent in June.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - A jury Friday began its first full day of deliberations on 14 cocaine and perjury counts against Mayor Marion Barry.

The identities of the jurors - 10 blacks and two whites - were revealed Thursday from a pool of 18 jurors and alternates sequestered since they were picked June 18. The nine women and three men deliberated for 40 minutes Thursday afternoon and resumed at about 9:30 a.m. Friday.

''I'm rather anxious, obviously, with the fate of Marion Barry's guilt or innocence in the hands of 12 people, but that's the way it ought to be,'' said the three-term mayor, who could face prison time if convicted.

In his instructions to the jury, U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson said the use of alcohol before using cocaine is not a defense, nor is addiction a defense for cocaine use. He also said the jurors could not consider race and the cost of the federal investigation that led to Barry's arrest.

Barry, 54, is charged with three felony counts of perjury, 10 misdemeanor counts of cocaine possession and a single misdemeanor count of conspiracy to possess cocaine. If convicted of all counts, he could be sentenced to a maximum 26 years in prison and fined $1.85 million.

After a nine-week trial, Barry's lawyer admitted in closing arguments that the mayor lied to his constituents while using cocaine but said the federal government used an unfair standard in targeting Barry.

''He's being prosecuted because he is the mayor,'' lead defense attorney R. Kenneth Mundy said Thursday. ''The government has indicated that if he were a common man, he wouldn't be here for these offenses ...''

The jury watched a videotape of Barry smoking crack and heard 10 government witnesses testify that he used cocaine in 20 homes, 15 hotels, four boats and two government offices.

Mundy acknowledged that Barry secretly used cocaine while publicly leading an anti-drug fight.

''Despite all the denials, Mr. Barry was an occasional user of cocaine,'' Mundy said. ''(But) I don't want you to divine from this ... that we are pleading guilty or admitting to any of these charges.''

Margaret Batson, one of the six dismissed jurors, said, ''I almost fell out of my seat when I heard the man say that because I didn't expect that from the defense.''

Mundy contends the government never proved Barry used cocaine on the dates and times charged and asked jurors to acquit him on those grounds. Jackson said evidence need not point to a specific date.

Mundy said Barry was entrapped in the Jan. 18 sting at the Vista International Hotel. Jackson said even if Barry was induced to use crack, he could be found guilty if it was shown he had a ''predisposition'' to use drugs through prior conduct.

''The sad fact is that Marion Barry was out to get himself,'' Assistant U.S. Attorney Richard Roberts said in rebuttal of the defense arguments. ''Can the defense seriously argue that Marion Barry did not have a predisposition to using drugs?

''Look at all these witneses,'' Roberts said. ''Think how many times he did these drugs. ... Marion Barry is asking you to forget the truth, to ignore it. ... He is particularly insulting your intelligence when he says he was an occasional drug user.''

Mundy said the government wanted to ''hold (Barry) up for scorn and ridicule for his apparent hypocrisy,'' but said Barry was morally right in denouncing drug use in talks to young people even while he was involved with drugs himself.

''Is it consciousness of guilt if I do something wrong and tell my son not to do it? Is it wrong to walk along the ice and fall in and then tell someone following me to turn back, the ice is treacherous?'' Mundy asked. ''Is it wrong if an ill wind blows out my light, if I try to light a candle for another?''

In their closing arguments, prosecutors focused mostly on the three perjury charges, which under federal sentencing guidelines carry an almost certain prison term. They said Barry lied before the grand jury on Jan. 19, 1989, by denying drug involvement with key prosecution witness Charles Lewis.

Lewis, the central figure in seven of the 14 counts, testified as part of a plea bargain stemming from drug charges in Washington. He still faces sentencing on a drug conviction in the Virgin Islands.

''Charles Lewis is kept captive by the government, holding the key to his freedom so long as he will testify against Mr. Barry,'' charged Mundy, who said many government witnesses were compromised by plea agreements or grants of immunity.

(AUG. 3) UPI - There's fighting in Kuwait City today between bands of loyalists and Iraqi invasion forces. The fighting is coupled with reports that as many as eight American oil workers have been captured by Iraqi soldiers. Sources say the troops are now advancing toward Kuwait's border with Saudi Arabia. Saudi Arabia and Iraq have a NON-aggression pact, but there is said to be concern in the Saudi capital.

President Bush met today with national security advisers to review the tense situation in the Middle East. The talks came as the administration awaits word on eight missing Americans. The White House says a U-S oil company reported that eight of its workers are missing from oil fields near the Iraqi border in northern Kuwait. The State Department says it has asked Iraq for information on the Americans... but- quoting here- ''we haven't got an answer yet.''

It appears as if a unified Germany will become a reality ahead of schedule. West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl agreed today with East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere's proposal for German unification to take place in the early fall... instead of December. The plan also calls for all-German elections to be held on October 14th. The process is being speeded up to aid East Germany's rapidly crumbling economy.

The Labor Department says the nation's civilian jobless rate jumped to five-and-a-half percent in July, from five-point-two percent in June. The department says the service sector of the economy was the hardest hit, with construction and manufacturing also suffering heavily. A government spokesman says the jobless figures mark the worst showing in two years.

(AUG. 3) UPI - The House is scheduled to take action this week on Senate-passed oil spill legislation. Senators say the tough new bill will make major improvements in federal and industry efforts to prevent future spills and ensure effective clean-up. The Senate passed the measure yesterday on a 99up of major accidents... and increases the liability of those responsible eight-fold.

People in Astoria, Oregon, probably won't be watching the movie ''Jaws'' on their V-C-R's this weekend... with a shark fishing tournament scheduled today and tomorrow off the mouth of the Columbia River. Opponents failed in a legal attempt to stop the hunt, which they say will lure sharks dangerously close to beaches and increase the likelihood of attacks on humans.

DETROIT (AUG. 3) UPI - Chrysler Corp. negotiators have asked the United Auto Workers this week to try a ''pay-for-performance'' system at two unspecified assembly plants, hoping it could eventually be adopted throughout the automaker.

Chrysler detailed the plan to the union Thursday afternoon, asking the UAW to form a joint study group on the porposal. The union had no immediate official response.

Chrysler first publicly proposed what it called ''gain sharing'' July 20, the opening day of labor talks between the No. 3 carmaker and the union. They are bargaining to reach a new contract covering about 55,000 Chrysler workers to replace the current pact that expires Sept. 14.

But such a plan, described as a system where workers would get extra annual compensation for reduced absenteeism, higher productivity or quality gains, has been regarded skeptically by the union because it seems to put a portion of the worker's pay at risk.

''I don't think you can take this system,'' one UAW official who asked not to be identified told the Detroit News. ''You've still got too many people in our system that are from the old school and this concept would be a drastic change.''

Chrysler has had a gain sharing program in place at its Acustar parts-making subsidiary plant in Dayton, Ohio, that is not organized by the UAW. That plant, which has 900 employees who produce heating and air conditioning systems, paid workers an average $1,300 last year in gain sharing.

The UAW is also bargaining with industry giant General Motors Corp. and second-ranked Ford Motor Co. for new contracts that also expire Sept. 14. In all, about 500,000 U.S. auto workers are covered by the current three-year agreements.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - Just before the House debated the Civil Rights Act Friday, lawmakers booed Rep. Fortney ''Pete'' Stark, D-Calif., for calling Health Secretary Louis Sullivan, who is black, a ''disgrace to his ... race.''

''I find this attack as bizarre as it is deplorable,'' said House Republican leader Robert Michel of Illinois.

''Coming as it does in the midst of a debate on civil rights as the majority is telling us of its undoubted sensitivity on racial matters, this attack must sadden the majority as it does the rest of us. To gratuitously drag in Secretary Sullivan's race in a dispute over policy brings discredit upon this institution,'' Michel said, drawing applause. He called on Stark to apologize to Sullivan.

Stark, a white liberal, then admitted to his colleagues he ''blew it'' by bringing up race when he said at a Thursday news conference Sullivan ''is a disgrace to his profession and his race.'' Stark is distressed that Sullivan opposes abortion and national health insurance. He contends the secretary has modified or changed his personal views so they coincide with those of President Bush.

But Stark did not apologize for the content of his objection to Sullivan's policies and those of the Bush administration.

''I should not have brought into the discussion his race, because it obscures the fact that he is carrying on a bankrupt policy for an administration who inadvertently has been impacting the poor and the minorities in this country by denying them decent medical care,'' Stark said to a barrage of boos.

Stark continued in his one-minute speech that Sullivan is being led ''down the path of darkness'' by budget director Richard Darman and White House chief of staff John Sununu on an anti-abortion stand and opposition to national health insurance.

Rep. Vin Weber, R-Minn., called Stark's initial comments about race ''nakedly racist,'' and Rep. Jim Kolbe, R-Ariz., said, ''No person should be subjected to remarks degrading their race.''

Meanwhile, Rep. Robert Dornan, R-Calif., an outspoken conservative, pulled out of his pocket a plastic replica of a 12-week-old fetus and, denouncing Stark's pro-abortion views, spoke about the sanctity of life.

Sullivan, who usually maintains a cool decorum while under attack, exploded Thursday when told of Stark's comments, which he took as deeply personal and insulting. He called them ''paternalistic and frankly racist'' and demanded an apology.

JERUSALEM (AUG. 3) UPI - Israel, vowing to protect its security interests following the Iraqi takeover of Kuwait, warned Baghdad Friday it will view the movement of Iraqi forces toward Jordan as a direct threat to the Jewish state.

Foreign Minister David Levy told Army Radio that Israel had to be stronger following Thursday's incursion and must coordinate its activities closely with the United States and Western nations.

In the lengthy interview, Levy repeated the established Israeli position that Israel would not tolerate Iraqi troops in neighboring Jordan.

''An Iraqi movement in the direction of Jordan will present a real and immediate danger to Israel,'' Levy said. The foreign minister would not elaborate on what actions Israel would take if Iraq took such a step.

''Israel will do what is necessary to defend its vital security interests '' he said. ''Israel is not threatening, it is being threatened. ... Israel has announced more than once that it has no intention to attack Iraq. On the contrary, it is prepared for peace with any Arab state that wants peace.''

Levy also confirmed that the United States and Israel, its closest ally in the Middle East, were consulting during the crisis. Levy is scheduled to make his first visit to the United States as Israel's foreign minister next week and to meet with U.S. Secretary of State James Baker.

Assessing the consequences of the Iraqi invasion, Israeli leaders and commentators said Friday that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein did not pose an immediate threat, but warned his aggressive intentions would grow if he was permitted to consolidate his hold on the oil-rich Gulf state.

''It will take time for Iraq to digest its takeover of Kuwait, but if Baghdad emerges from its invasion with great profit and minimal loss, there is no doubt that Saddam Hussein's appetite will grow,'' respected military analyst Ze'ev Schiff wrote in the newspaper Ha'aretz.

Israel is 260 miles from Iraq, separated by Jordan and Syria, but within range of medium-range missiles that Iraq has the capability of equipping with chemical warheads.

Chief of Staff Lt. Gen. Dan Shomron said Saddam knew he would pay a heavy price for attacking Israel, especially with non-conventional weapons.

''I cannot say that Saddam Hussein is crazy,'' Shomron told the newspaper Yediot Ahronot. ''He is an impulsive, violent and radical man. But even a madman knows to be careful of harsh retaliatory blows against him.''

Shomron said a war between Iraq and Israel would not be decided by chemical weapons and warned Israel would not tolerate a high number of casualties due to chemical weapons.

''Our responses to missiles are not only in the realm of defense. One of them, maybe the most important, is deterence,'' he said, but declined to elaborate.

Ha'aretz reported that Defense Minister Moshe Arens recently conveyed a message to Iraq stating that Israel had no intention of attacking the Arab state as long as Israel's security was not threatened.

Many Israeli leaders said the invasion would shift international attention away from the Palestinian uprising in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip to the Gulf. But Rabin warned that a stalemate in the Middle East peace process would lead to Palestinians and Arabs looking to Baghdad for inspiration.

Palestinians in the territories followed the events in the Gulf closely, and many said they admired Saddam for his resolve in toppling the rich Kuwaiti ruling family.

''Instead of invading Kuwait or any Arab country, Iraq must invade Israel '' said Naim Abdel Rahman, 60, of Gaza City. ''Saddam is a brave leader and isn't afraid of anybody. But in general this situation doesn't interest us as much as our (Palestinian) question does.''

CAIRO, EGYPT (AUG. 3) UPI - Egypt called on Iraq Friday to withdraw its troops from Kuwait immediately and stop all attempts to alter Kuwait's political system by force.

Egypt is allied to Iraq in the Arab Cooperation Council and the government of President Hosni Mubarak had previously withheld any official response to the invasion by Baghdad Thursday.

The statement by the Foreign Ministry did not specify what action Cairo may consider if Iraq did not heed its warning, but appeared timed to coincide with the opening in Cairo of a meeting of foreign ministers from the 22-nation Arab League.

The Foreign Ministry said President Saddam Hussein's attack had taken Cairo by surprise because it followed intense efforts by Arab nations to mediate an end to the Iraq-Kuwait land and oil dispute that preceded the invasion.

''The current situation in the (Persian) Gulf requires taking three steps immediately and without delay,'' the statement said.

''The withdrawal of the Iraqi forces from Kuwaiti territory, stopping the attempt to change the ruling system in Kuwait by force, and leaving it up to the brotherly Kuwaiti people to determine their own internal affairs freely and independently,'' it said.

Egypt is one of the largest military powers in the Middle East.

BRUSSELS, BELGIUM (AUG. 3) UPI - The United States told its NATO allies Friday it is considering contingency plans and will ''not stand by'' if Iraq extends hostilties beyond the invasion of Kuwait, sources said.

All 16 NATO countries also agreed at a special meeting of NATO's political committee not to supply arms to Iraq. Most countries said they have frozen Iraqi or Kuwaiti assets or are in the process of doing so, the sources said.

The United States on Thursday urged its NATO allies to join a larger trade embargo against Iraq but other countries said they could not act until after an emergency meeting of European Community foreign ministry officials in Rome Saturday.

Ireland is the only member of the 12-nation EC that is not also a member of NATO.

''The United States informed its allies it is considering contingency plans, contingency actions, in the event Iraq expands the hostilities beyond Kuwait,'' the NATO source said.

''Those plans were not outlined in detail, but it was made clear the United States would not stand by, and the allies expressed appreciation of that,'' the source said.

The NATO allies meanwhile expressed ''broad and strong support'' for a concerted U.N. action, after Iraq ignored a resolution passed unanimously on Thursday by the U.N. Security Council, which called for an immediate withdrawal of Iraqi troops.

''Some countries are eager to move rather quickly toward some action,'' the NATO source said.

NATO's political committee scheduled another meeting for Monday, but was prepared to meet over the weekend if necessary.

BONN (AUG. 3) UPI - West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and East German

Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere agreed Friday that their nations will unite in time to hold all-German elections Oct. 14.

The decision to speed-up the merger of the two German states after 41 years of division was seen as a bid to prevent the total collapse of East Germany's rapidly crumbling economy, which is beset by soaring unemployment, sinking productivity and crippling strikes.

''For the historically significant first all-German elections I propose October 14,'' de Maiziere told reporters in East Berlin, adding that the two states will have to merge before that date.

A few hours later, Kohl gave his full backing to the suggestion.

''The proposal reflects the wishes in the GDR but also (of) the Federal Republic of Germany,'' Kohl said in a statement he delivered from his vacation home in the Austrian town of St. Gilgen.

The two governments had earlier agreed that elections should be held Dec. 2. Although no date had been fixed for unification, it was assumed the merger would take place shortly before the elections.

The two conservative leaders will still need parliamentary approval, will have to seek constitutional changes and will require formal agreement with the four victorious World War II allies - Britain, France, the Soviet Union and the United States.

If the proposal is adopted, it will mean the two German states will unite one year after popular unrest shook East Germany and brought down the Stalinist leadership, paving the way for unity.

Kohl and de Maiziere expressed confidence that the wartime allies will formally approve the early merger when their foreign ministers meet with their German counterparts in Moscow, Sept. 12 for negotiations on the external aspects of unification - known as two-plus-four.

Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev removed the major obstacle to unification last month when he told Kohl during a meeting in the Soviet Union that he no longer objected to Germany's membership in NATO.

''My agreements with President Gorbachev have opened the outlook for a successful conclusion of the two-plus-four negotiations already in September,'' Kohl said.

He also said that Bonn and East Berlin were moving rapidly toward agreement on a unification treaty.

''Both are important preconditions for an early election date,'' Kohl said.

He said that the two German governments will now be able to hold ''thorough and responsible talks over the realization of this proposal with all those involved.''

He said people in East and West Germany feel that ''a swift unification process will now reduce the adaptation difficulties and financial burdens.''

The call for early unification followed growing discontent over the East German government's handling of West German funds and its failure to cope with the economic crisis after the strong West German mark replaced the weak East mark July 1.

''We want a rapid improvement of the climate for investments, to crank up the economy in the GDR as well as create and secure jobs,'' Kohl's Chancellery Minister Rudolf Seiters said.

De Maiziere said that early elections will bring ''political clarity and thus economic security.''

''The quicker this happens, the better for the rehabilitation of existing companies, for new investment and for the creation of new jobs,'' he said.

The West German opposition Social Democratic Party said they will challenge the decision saying it is unconstitutional.

SPD spokesman Horst Ehmke claimed that de Maiziere ''is moving from quiet grandeur to quiet delusions of grandeur.''

Officials of the SPD's East German sister party, the second largest in the government coalition, also rejected the proposal, claiming that de Maiziere was afraid to face the full electoral consequences of the economic crisis he brought about.

DETROIT (AUG. 3) UPI - General Motors Corp. said Friday it suspended participation in a project to build a vehicle assembly plant near Baghdad that was slated to produce Oldsmobile cars and Chevrolet trucks by as early as next year.

The decision to suspend any involvement in the 10-year project was because of an order by President Bush that halted any participation by any American business in Iraq because of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait this week, GM spokesman Jack Harned said.

GM did not have any financial participation in the assembly plant project, for which no ground has been broken yet. Instead, the Iraqi State Enterprise for Automotive Industry had agreed in May 1989 to pay GM for technical support and a license to build Oldsmobile Ciera cars and Chevrolet S-10 pickup trucks and Blazer sport utility vehicles.

The agreement was unique because it is one of the few instances where North American-designed vehicles would be built overseas, Harned said.

GM has also during the past two years sold about 15,000 North American-made cars to Iraq under a deal valued at aboyut $200 million.

''We regret the developments in Kuwait, a country in which GM has done business for many years,'' GM said in a statement, adding that it has two dealers there who sell North American-built cars at an annual rate of about 10,000 units a year.

Harned said it was too early to tell how those dealers, both Kuwaiti nationals, would be affected in the long-term, saying GM has been unable to contact them. All shipments now enroute have been redirected.

GM has no dealers in Iraq.

(AUG. 3) UPI - Iraq now has troops massed along Kuwait's border with Saudi Arabia... as well as on the Iraqi-Saudi dividing line. One Western diplomat says Saudi Arabia has NOT even put its troops on full alert because it does NOT want to provoke Iraq. Iraqi invasion forces are still battling Kuwaiti loyalists in Kuwait City.

President Bush is considering increased retaliation against Iraq for its invasion of Kuwait. Bush says he wants Arab leaders to come up with a solution to the problem... but he's NOT ruling out U-S military intervention in the Persian Gulf. The president reviewed the situation again today during a meeting with national security advisers.

The Labor Department says the nation's civilian jobless rate had its worst showing in two years last month. The rate jumped to five-and-a-half percent in July from five-point-two percent in June. One economist says the report confirms that the economy is ''teetering'' on the brink of a recession.

TYRE, LEBANON (AUG. 3) UPI - Car bombs triggered in southern Lebanon killed 13 people and wounded a number of others, hospital sources and police said Friday.

A booby-trapped car packed with 220 pounds of explosives blew up late Thursday in front of an office of the Syrian-backed Shiite Amal militia in the port city of Tyre, 46 miles south of Beirut, police said.

Medical sources said 12 people were killed and at least 15 others wounded. Among the dead were three Amal militiamen, the sources said, adding that three children from the same family suffered severe wounds.

Ten minutes earlier, an explosion rocked the same area. No one was killed, however. The second explosion occurred as rescue workers and a number of people began to gather to inspect the damage from the first, police said.

Another car bomb blew up in the Amal-controlled market town of Nabatiyeh, killing one person and wounding four others, authorities said.

Police said the auto, laden with 66 pounds of explosives, blew up near the crowded government house in Nabatiyeh, 33 miles southeast of Beirut.

Amal militiamen cordoned off the area and barred civilians from approaching.

Later, a large funeral was held for the dead in Tyre, during which the crowd chanted anti-Iranian slogans.

Amal has been engaged in a 19-day battle against the Iranian-funded Shiite Hezbollah militia in the mountainuous district of Iqlim Al Tuffah east of the port city of Sidon, 24 miles south of Beirut.

The fundamentalist Hezbollah, with reported backing by Iranian Revolutionary Guards, appears bent on expanding its presence in southern Lebanon.

in Lebanon.

An Amal statement accused Hezbollah of ''standing behind these sabotage operations which aimed at harming our people in southern Lebanon.''

PAINESVILLE, OH (AUG. 3) UPI - Another cult member accused in the April 1989 slaying of a family of five pleaded guilty Friday in an arrangement with prosecutors to testify against other defendants.

Susan Luff of Independence, Mo., was to go on trial Monday to face five charges each of conspiracy to commit aggravated murder, complicity to commit aggravated murder and kidnapping in the shootings of members of the Kirtland family, who were part of the cult.

She pleaded guilty to the conspiracy charges and, in exchange for her testimony, prosecutors agreed to consider dropping the other 10 charges. If convicted of all 15 charges, she could have been sentenced to life in prison, but probation is now a possibility.

Luff is the fifth cult member to plead guilty in Lake County Common Pleas Court in arrangements with prosecutors.

Alice Lundgren, the wife of cult leader and alleged triggerman Donald Jeff Lundgren, was convicted Wednesday of conspiracy, complicity and kidnapping charges. Sentencing is pending.

Murder charges against three others cult members have been dropped and four cult members, including Donald Lundgren, still face aggravated murder charges. They could be sentenced to death if convicted.

Donald Lundgren's trial is to begin Aug. 13 and son Damon Lundgren is to go on trial Aug. 20. Ronald Luff, Susan's husband, is to go on trial Sept. 17 and Daniel Kraft is to go on trial Oct. 1.

Thirteen members of the cult, a group which had broken away from the Reorganized Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints, were indicted Jan. 5.

The slayings are said to have taken place April 17, 1989, but the bodies were not discovered in a Kirtland barn east of Cleveland until authorities received a call from a tipster in early January.

The group moved from Kirtland to Davis, W.Va., in April 1989 and then on to Chilhowee, Mo., in October before breaking up.

Arrests were made near San Diego, Independence, Mo., and Bay City, Mich.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - An outbreak of the Mediterranean fruit fly has been squelched in Florida, the government said Friday in announcing removal of an agricultural quarantine in Dade County.

The Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, which has conducted intensive trapping surveys, said no Medflies have been found in Florida since May 21.

''We now feel confident that the pest has been eliminated and that this quarantine is no longer necessary,'' said James Glosser, head of the inspection service.

The Medfly is one of the world's most destructive agricultural pests, attacking 260 kinds of fruits, vegetables and nuts. In countries where the fruit fly is well established, crop losses of 25 percent to 50 percent are not uncommon.

Officials said 23 Medflies were discovered in Dade County between April 12 and May 21. State and federal officials eradicated the pest with a bait that contained the insecticide malathion.

Agricultural officials continue to battle Medflies in California.

Under an agricultural quarantine, shipment of produce is restricted unless there is proof the food is not contaminated.

PANAMA CITY, PANAMA (AUG. 3) UPI - The operation of the Panama Canal could become seriously compromised if the Panamanian government delays planning for its takeover of the waterway at the end of the decade, a key canal official said Friday.

They said the 7-month-old government of President Guillermo Endara has yet to address the issue of how the canal will be run or how to fill key jobs with qualified Panamanians at the end of 1999, when the United States turns the canal over to Panama.

''There is still quite a way to go before (Panamanian government officials) are ready to take over,'' said Richard Wainio of the Panama Canal Commission, the U.S. government agency that currently operates the canal.

''When you talk about the actual operation of the canal, I don't think the government has a lot of knowledge,'' said Wainio, director of executive planning for commission.

With as many as 40 ships a day easing through its lock and dam system, the Panama Canal is a rare symbol of stability in a country that has been rocked by political turmoil and by the U.S. invasion that ousted military ruler Manuel Noriega.

Although much of the fighting during last December's invasion took place adjacent to the canal, it closed for just 29 hours and backed-up traffic was cleared within a few weeks.

For the past decade, 11,000 to 14,000 ships a year have crossed the isthmus between the Pacific and Atlantic oceans, generating about $300 million a year in tolls. The canal accounts for 10 percent to 15 percent of Panama's gross national product and provides 7,600 jobs.

Opened in 1914 under U.S. control, the canal became a focus of nationalism in the 1960s and 1970s as Panamanians clamored for sovereignty over the central strip across their country.

Under the Panama Canal Treaty, signed in 1977, Panama will assume control of the waterway at noon on Dec. 31, 1999. A second treaty calls for the canal to remain neutral while the U.S. military's Southern Command is charged with defending the canal until the turnover.

But some shippers worry that canal services could suffer once the Panamanian government takes over, said Wainio, an American who grew up in the former Canal Zone.

He pointed out the state-run railroad and ports, which the United States turned over to Panama in 1979, have gone to seed.

''Look what they did to the ports. Look what they did to the railroad. Look what happened to the infrastructure. Everything is falling apart and the grass hasn't been cut,'' said Wainio, paraphrasing complaints he has heard from shippers.

The canal already faces increased competition from rail transit and other shipping routes, and Wainio warned that glitches in operating the canal could scare away longstanding customers.

Many businessmen think a joint venture between the government and private contractors would mean better service than a state-run canal next century, Wainio said.

A commission on privatization, named by Endara, has recommended some private involvement in operating the canal with the government retaining ownership, according to Fernando Manfredo Jr., acting administrator of the Panama Canal Commission.

Miguel Antonio Bernal, a law professor at the University of Panama, said an international board of directors would help to maintain the canal's neutrality.

Manfredo favors an international board, but says it would be a controversial move after Panama's long struggle to sign the canal treaty with the United States and win sovereignty.

Labor troubles could also hurt the canal. Manfredo and others fear an exodus of canal workers to other jobs if wages drop dramatically once Panama takes over. Workers are currently paid U.S. government-scale wages.

Only 72 of the 230 pilots who guide the ships through the canal are Panamanian. Training pilots can take up to 10 years.

Capt. F.W. Skouggard, an American who heads the Panama Canal Pilots Association, said the transition process is going smoothly and that enough Panamanians will be trained by 1999 to fill almost all pilot slots.

Endara spokesman Louis Martinez said the government is busy with more pressing issues than the canal, such as trying to rebuild the economy and to mold a credible police force out of Noriega's former army.

LONDON (AUG. 3) UPI - Stock prices closed broadly lower in moderately active trading Friday on the London International stock exchange as investors reacted to Wall Street's sharp plunge and unconfirmed rumors of an Iraqi threat to Saudi Arabia.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which measures the value of Britain's largest 100 companies in terms of market capitalization, fell 19.9 points to 2,274.0. The closely watched index fell 34.5 points Thursday.

The narrower top 30 industrial average lost 18.0 points to 1,793.4.

Volume amounted to around 525 million shares compared with 562 million shares changing hands on Thursday.

Analysts said stocks opened higher as some institutional investors, heavy with cash, were buying in the market despite the invasion of Kuwait by Iraqi forces on Thursday.

Investors grew jittery around midday on rumors Iraqi troops were moving into Saudi Arabia.

Analysts said prices were further shaken by Wall Street's 70-point plunge following a weaker-than-expected U.S. jobless report for July.

On the trading floor, oil and related stocks continued to rise on the Gulf situation.

Elsewhere among some of the day's other widely traded stocks, British Aerospace gained 22 cents to $10.36 and Vickers added 5 cents to $4.20 on hopes that tension in the Middle East would translate into higher arms sales.

Barclays Bank PLC fell 16 cents to $6.73 after the bank announced a 2 percent increase in pre-tax profits to $1.11 billion in its report for the half-year.

Berisford International, the troubled food and property group, lost 14 cents to 60 cents a share on bid uncertainties.

Bakery group Rank Hovis McDougall slipped 18 cents to $5.61 after an analyst reduced profits forecasts.

Elsewhere in Europe, in Frankfurt stock prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange fell 1.5 percent in a market racked by uncertainty surrounding the volatile state of affairs in the Middle East.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which lost 23.51 points Thursday, plunged 28.44 points or 1.5 percent to 1,840.94.

Analysts said prices also fell in light trading as investors worried about the mushrooming East German government deficit.

NEW YORK (AUG. 3) UPI - Burn victim David Opont, in his first interview since he was set afire by a neighborhood bully March 7, said Friday the biggest lesson he learned from his ordeal was ''to say no to drugs.''

In an interview on ''CBS This Morning,'' Opont, dressed in a neat suit and bow tie, smiled pleasantly but kept his answers short and to the point.

When asked about his biggest lesson since a 13-year-old foster child tied him up and set him on fire, David said, ''I learned to say no to drugs.''

Initial reports said Opont's attacker, described by police as a neighborhood ''bully,'' tried to get him to take drugs.

David, who turned 12 the day after the youth set him on fire in the basement of an abandoned Brooklyn building, was treated at New York University-Cornell Medical Center and later transferred to Jamaica Hospital for rehabilitation.

On the show, a videotaped message from former President Reagan was shown.

Reagan said, ''David, we were pleased to be able to see you and I hope that our paths cross again one day in the not-too-distant future. Please know that you're still in our thoughts and prayers.''

David quickly responded, saying, ''Thank you a lot.''

During the first days of his hospital stay, the list of notables visiting the thinly framed boy included Jesse Jackson, Mayor David Dinkins and Mets pitching ace Dwight Gooden.

The brave youngster said it was painful for him to walk at first, but added that his skin grafts did not hurt but were very ''itchy.''

PITTSBURGH (AUG. 3) UPI - The New York investment group Japonica Partners has reached agreement with creditors to take control of bankrupt Allegheny International by Aug. 15, a plan that requires U.S. Bankruptcy Court approval.

Attorneys for AI's 18 creditor banks announced the proposal Thursday at a bankruptcy court hearing. AI's board of directors was scheduled to meet Friday, but an executive committee already recommended approval of the plan.

Japonica, the banks and other AI creditors have been trying to negotiate a deal for weeks that would give Japonica a stake in the company when it emerges from bankruptcy. The latest plan would allow Japonica to own 90 percent of stock in the reorganized firm.

Japonica said it would rename the company Sunbeam/Oster Companies and would keep its headquarters in Pittsburgh.

Under the deal, creditor banks would receive a total of $127 million, or $6.60 a share, for their claims. Unsecured creditors and equity shareholders would get $7 a share of common stock, or $1.53 a warrant. Creditors could elect to retain their shares in the reorganized firm instead of receiving cash.

Japonica would combine $270 milliion of AI's existing cash with equity commitments of $97 million to pay off the banks and creditors of AI's Sunbeam subsidiary.

Japonica must also post a letter of credit to insure creditor payments and provide $100 million in working capital to cover administrative expenses for the company.

The deal would allow William Webber, a former Sunbeam executive, to become president of the reorganized company. Paul Kazarian, a Japonica principal, would be chairman.

James Milligan, the current Sunbeam president targeted by AI to become the next chairman, would be given a $1.5 million severance payment.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - One result of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait was the addition to a Senate defense bill Friday of a requirement that the United States import no more than half its energy needs.

Sen. Frank Murkowski, R-Alaska, authored the amendment that would require the president to submit an ''energy production and security action plan'' if exports exceeded 50 percent of the U.S. oil supply for six months.

It was adopted without opposition on a voice vote, and now must be approved by the House.

Under the proposal, the oil action plan, which would be subject to Congressional approval, would detail specific steps to get imports back under the 50 percent ceiling.

The oil plan would list federal lands - both on and off shore - now off limits to drillers but that have the potential for oil and gas discoveries. It also would require drawing up a leasing schedule for such tracts. Parklands would be exempted.

In addition, the plan would call for energy conservation measures like better auto fuel economy and use of alternative fuels.

And in a step that would be a boon to oil states, the oil plan would have to include production incentives for domestic oil and gas. The incentives would have to include recommendations on oil import fees, royalty reductions, tax and other incentives for stripper well production.

The incentives also would have to cover the production of offshore, frontier and other oil produced with advanced recovery techniques.

In the first six months of this year oil imports hit a record high of 49.9 percent of U.S. consumption, just below the trigger point in Murkowski's bill.

The Energy Department says that during the period January to May 1990, the United States imported an average of 610,000 barrels of oil from Iraq daily, accounting for about 8 percent of net oil imports and 3.6 percent of total U.S. demand.

Kuwait supplied approximately 120,000 barrels a day during the same period representing slightly more than 1 percent of net imports and less than half a percent of U.S. consumption.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - Nine days after Congress failed to override President Bush's veto of his family and medical leave legislation, Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., reintroduced the measure Friday, hoping to ''broaden the base of support'' for the plan.

The measure would require all businesses with at least 50 employees to provide up to 12 weeks of unpaid leave per year for childbirth, adoption or serious illness to the employee or an immediate family member, such as a child or parent.

The measure was passed by the House May 10 and by the Senate June 14, but was vetoed June 29 by Bush, who said he favored a voluntary leave system. The House failed to override the Bush veto July 25.

Dodd said he already has 25 Senate co-sponsors for the measure. But he said he is not optimistic the legislation will see much action in the waning months of this session, saying he is hoping ''to broaden the base of support and having the bill in (the Senate) helps keep people aware that we haven't dropped the issue.''

Dodd admitted ''great frustration'' over having to start over with the bill, but he said he is ''confident that the president will respond to the needs of working families'' by eventually backing the legislation.

''Too many workers across the nation lose their jobs when they must care for a newborn or must be home when an adopted child joins the family or when a child is seriously ill,'' Dodd said in a speech on the Senate floor. ''Similarly, in the absence of a national standard for job protection, too many workers lose their jobs when they must care for their elderly parents or when they themselves are ill.''

PITTSBURGH (AUG. 3) UPI - Pittsburgh Mayor Sophie Masloff, concerned about possible legal challenges, vetoed legislation Friday that would have banned cigarette vending machines in most public places. Instead, Masloff proposed new legislation in which such machines could be operated only with tokens purchased by adults.

"Without fairly balancing the needs of owners of publicly used commercial establishments with the need to protect the health of our children, this bill could only be implemented after serious delays," the mayor said in a letter to the council urging that they sustain her veto.

The city council gave final approval to the vending machine ban on a 7-1 vote last week. Its intent was to stop minors from being able to purchase cigarettes. State law already bans the sale of cigarettes to those under 18 years of age.

The controversial measure faced almost certain legal action from tobacco lobbying groups, vending companies and retailers. There were some fears that the ban would hurt smaller mom-and-pop grocery operations and possibly lead to an increased number of cigarette thefts from such stores. The likely litigation would delay the real goal of the legislation, to protect the health of children, Masloff said.

New legislation proposed by Masloff calls for the modification of all cigarette vending machines to accept tokens rather than currency. The only exception, as was the case in the vetoed legislation, would be in establishments licensed by the Pennsylvania Liquor Control Board, private clubs or work places not accessible to the general public.

"This new legislation will accomplish our goal of keeping cigarettes out of the hands of minors while hopefully avoiding the lengthy court battle, which has been threatened since the original legislation was proposed," Masloff said. Councilman Eugene Ricciardi cast the only no vote against the measure last week.

"I believe the bill would have hurt the small neighborhood grocery stores in the city of Pittsburgh," he said Friday, adding he does not think the council will override Masloff's veto.

Masloff said she is writing representatives of the vending and tobacco industries urging them to support the revised measure. "With their help, Pittburgh can lead the way to a solution without violating the competing rights of our citizens."

Cigarette vending machine sales were banned last year in Utah. And the city council of Takoma Park, Md., imposed a ban last month on cigarette vending machines in places accessible to children. The Houston, Texas, City Council recently passed an ordinance banning such machines from all city buildings but rejected a move to ban them from all public buildings.

(AUG. 3) UPI - The United States and Soviet Union Friday jointly condemned Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, while Japan and West Germany joined U.S. allies freezing Kuwaiti assets to protect them from Iraq and the Arab League huddled in search for a solution.

President Bush consulted with allied leaders on additional concerted action against Iraq after taking the lead in banning all U.S. trade with Iraq, including oil purchases.

''Some countries are eager to move rather quickly toward some action,'' a NATO source said.

The Soviet Union and France, Iraq's two main arms suppliers, have halted weapons shipments, and all 16 NATO countries agreed Friday at a special meeting of the Western alliance's political committee to do the same.

In an unprecedented joint statement, Secretary of State James Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shavardnadze in Moscow demanded Iraq's immediate withdrawal from Kuwait and called on all countries to halt arms shipments to Iraq.

Japan said it would consider economic sanctions after discussions at the U.N. Security Council, which unanimously condemned Iraq on Thursday hours after it invaded its southern neighbor Kuwait and demanded its immediate withdrawal.

West Germany imposed a government authorization requirement on all exports to Iraq, civilian as well as military.

In addition to Japan and West Germany, other U.S. allies such as Italy and Belgium joined the United States, Britain and France in freezing Kuwaiti assets to protect them from Iraqi forces occupying Kuwait.

France said it will maintain two warships in the Persian Gulf and will act in concert with its allies in response to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

''There is a warship present (in the Gulf) that was to be replaced. We will leave it there and the replacement ship will join it,'' France's interim Prime Minister Pierre Beregovoy said in a French radio interview. Beregovoy is acting head of government while Prime Minister Michel Rocard is on vacation.

Arab nations were divided over the response to the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, which followed a collapse in talks on Iraqi oil and territorial claims against its southern militarily inferior neighbor.

Egypt took a tough stance, calling on Iraq Friday to immediately withdraw its troops from Kuwait, where it said Baghdad should cease all attempts to alter the invaded nation's political system by force.

The statement by the Egyptian Foreign Ministry did not specify what action Cairo may consider if Iraq did not heed its warning, but appeared timed to coincide with the opening in Cairo of a meeting of foreign ministers from the 22-nation Arab League.

Along with Egypt, Algeria, Morocco and Lebanon condemned the invasion but Iraq has been openly supported by Libya, Jordan and Yemen, and privately backed by Sudan and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Delegates of the 22-nation Arab League tentatively agreed to hold an emergency summit in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, Saturday.

Israel, vowing to protect its security interests following the Iraqi takeover of Kuwait, warned Baghdad Friday it will view the movement of Iraqi forces toward Jordan as a direct threat to the Jewish state.

Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy told Army Radio that Israel had to be stronger following Thursday's invasion and must coordinate its activities closely with the United States and Western nations.

In the lengthy interview, Levy repeated the established Israeli position that Israel would not tolerate Iraqi troops in neighboring Jordan.

The United States told its NATO allies it is considering contingency plans and will ''not stand by'' if Iraq extends hostilties beyond the invasion of Kuwait, NATO sources said.

The 12-member European Community considered a commercial embargo against Iraq and the freezing of Iraqi assets, announced by the United States hours after the invasion.

The International Olympic Committee said it was ''deeply shocked'' at the death of Sheikh Fahad al-Ahmad al-Sabah, the president of Kuwait's National Olympic Committee. The youngest brother of Kuwait's ruler was reportedly shot Thursday when trying to prevent invading Iraqi troops from entering the royal palace.

GENEVA (AUG. 3) UPI - Reported cases of AIDS rose by 7,327 or 2.75 percent in July to a total 273,425 as of Aug. 1, the World Health Organization said Friday.

WHO said the United States accounted for nearly half of the increase with 3,496 additional cases and a new total of 137,385 - 50.25 percent of the world total.

There are now 156 countries reporting one or more cases of acquired immune deficiency syndrome, WHO said.

Officials cautioned as always that the actual number of AIDS cases is at least two times and probably three times higher because of inadequate or late reporting by developing countries.

WHO this week also reported a surge in people and especially sub-Saharan Africans infected with the AIDS-causing HIV or Human Immunodeficiency Virus.

It said it now estimates there are eight to 10 million people infected with HIV instead of its previous estimate of six to eight million.

That is because the number of sub-Saharan Africans carrying HIV are put at five million instead of the previous 2.5 million, and around one in every 40 adult African men and women are now infected, WHO said.

BURLINGTON, VT (AUG. 3) UPI - A man and woman wanted for a $1.5 million Louisiana art heist were in custody Friday because a suspicious art dealer alerted police.

FBI Special Agent John Markey said Michael R. Moskaluk, 43, and Ramona E. Arnold, 33, were held on charges of unlawful flight to avoid prosecution.

Markey said the pair face numerous charges in the theft of works from the Louisiana State Museum in New Orleans last month.

Agents said the pair left a trail of stolen artwork with dealers in a number of states.

Police were alerted to the couple's presence in Vermont when an art dealer in Stowe grew suspicious over their offer to sell him a rare Audubon print for a fraction of its value.

''They were living in an abandoned home that they had indicated an interest in purchasing,'' Markey said.

Markey said the pair offered no resistance when police moved in on them on Wednesday.

They appeared before Judge Franklin Billings in federal court in Rutland on Thursday and were held Friday at the Chittenden Community Correctional Center in South Burlington pending an extradition hearing, Markey said.

The artwork stolen in New Orleans also included Japanese woodcuts and prints by Spanish artist Francisco Goya.

Officials said all of the stolen artwork was located and will be recovered.

GALVESTON, TX (AUG. 3) UPI - Environmentalists Friday disputed claims that Galveston Bay escaped serious damage from a 500,000-gallon crude oil spill, saying evidence that the slick is spreading proves oil remains suspended in the water.

Coast Guard officials contended much of the oil had apparently evaporated, since large patches can no longer be spotted during flyovers of the bay and tests show it is not on the bottom. They rejected allegations that they could not account for 300,000 gallons of the oil that leaked from two damaged barges after a collision with a Greek tanker.

The Houston Ship Channel, which had been closed since the Saturday afternoon collision, was reopened to outbound ship traffic early Friday after a crippled barge was moved out of the way.

Twenty-seven ships had been stranded at Houston docks and 43 were anchored in lower Galveston Bay or the Gulf of Mexico.

The Coast Guard Friday said a shift in winds pushed some of the oil farther north, endangering additional sensitive breeding grounds for birds and saltwater fish.

Some coastal residents said reports of oil washing ashore at Point Houston on the northwest side of the bay proved the oil remains in the water, threatening at least 100 species of birds, 75 types of fish, shellfish, oysters and other marine life.

''As with most disasters, one has to look beneath the surface and, in that sense, our governor is critically lacking in those skills,'' said Ted Eubanks, a spokesman for the Houston Audubon Society.

Gov. Bill Clements, the founder of Dallas oil field equipment company Sedco Inc., reported Thursday that damage was less than expected. He had declared the bay a disaster area on Wednesday, but after a flyover Thursday said the spill could have been much worse.

''My impression, basically, is that we are blessed,'' Clements said. ''It could have been far worse because ... the evaporation has been very rapid.''

Eubanks believes much of the oil remains in the water.

''Oil can move underneath the surface, where it's not visible, and that's one of the difficulties. We have navigational specialists, engineers and government officials heading up the cleanup, where we need wildlife people that are sensititve to the ecological system heading it up. We got the wrong guy driving the train,'' Eubanks said.

He also criticized the Coast Guard for not testing the water between the surface and the bay bottom for oil.

Coast Guard Petty Mark Sedwick said 11 floor samples showed no evidence of oil, adding he was uncertain if officials planned to test the water column. Oil from the spill has stained Houston Point, Redfish Island, Eagle Point, the Texas City Dike and Pelican Island.

David Roberts of the Texas General Land Office agreed with Eubanks that, environmentally, the spill is far from over.

''It (spill) was so ugly a few days ago and so vast and so black. Now, if they see just a sheen, they think it's all past,'' Roberts said. ''But the problem is when it gets into areas like Houston Point. Then you're seeing the real effect of the oil spill.''

During a visit to East Beach Thursday, Eubanks said his hands became covered with oil when he ran his fingers through sand and shells.

''The long-term negative environmental effects on the lower end of the food chain, invertebrates and crustaceans, will have implications over the next several years. The web of life which includes the Galveston Bay will be damaged for a long period of time,'' said Gary Clark, president of the Houston Audubon Society.

Texas Water Commission Chairman B.J. ''Buck'' Wynne Friday awaited water sample tests results to determine the effectiveness of oil-eating microbes sprayed onto Pelican Island beaches late Thursday.

The process known as bioremediation was being used where conventional oil-collecting equipment could not. Crews sprayed the beach at Pelican Island Thursday and planned to spray areas at Houston Point Friday.

Clements vetoed aerial spraying of microbes over the entire spill, saying it had become too fragmented for bioremediation to work.

The owner of the two barges, Apex Towing Co. of St. Louis, Thursday handed over to the Coast Guard responsibility for the remaining cleanup. A Coast Guard official immediately sought $1 million for the job.

Coast Guard Capt. Tom Greene said federal funds would be used for the job, but the bill will be passed on to Apex's insurer for reimbursement.

LOS ANGELES (AUG. 3) UPI - Media giant Times Mirror Co., capitalizing on the growth of Southern California's Hispanic community, Friday said it would purchase 50 percent of La Opinion, the nation's largest Spanish-language daily newspaper.

La Opinion and Times Mirror, publisher of the Los Angeles Times as well as other major newspapers, did not disclose the terms of the deal, but said both papers would continue to operate separately.

The Times is the nation's largest daily metropolitan paper, with a daily circulation of 1.22 million. La Opinion has a daily circulation of more than 100,000 and has posted circulation gains of 16 percent in 1988 and 17 percent last year.

Analyst James Goss of Duff & Phelps in Chicago said the move makes sense for Times Mirror because of the continued growth in the numbers of Hispanics now living in Southern California, estimated at four million. "There's a significant group of Hispanics to whom La Opinion has appealed," Goss said. "This is an assertive way for Times Mirror to reach them."

Goss said the acquisition is typical of continuing efforts by the Times to go after new readers in the competitive Southern California market. He cited the newspaper's aggressive campaign to attract readers of the defunct Los Angeles Herald Examiner, which was shut down by the Hearst Corp. last November, and expanded operations in Ventura County, northwest of Los Angeles.

The Times began publishing a bilingual supplement, Nuestro Tiempo, in February with a current distribution schedule of 15 times a year. Nuestro Tiempo is distributed in areas with large Hispanic populations and has a circulation of about 441,000. Times Mirror spokeswoman Suzanne Hovdey said the Times will continue to publish Nuestro Tiempo.

La Opinion was founded in 1926 by the grandfather of current publisher Jose Lozano and has remained controlled by the Lozano family since then. Under the agreement with Times Mirror, editorial policy will remain under Lozano's control and the Lozano family will continue having a majority representation on the board of directors.

"La Opinion remains fully committed to the Spanish-language format which has made our newspaper so successful," Lozano said. "We enter this partnership with the intent of strengthening our newspaper, expanding its coverage and making it even more relevant to the lives of our readers."

Robert F. Erburu, chairman and chief executive officer of Times Mirror, said, "This is an opportunity for our company to make an important investment in a newspaper with a tremendous future, serving a vital community that is increasing in size and significance in Southern California."

Times Mirror has posted earnings declines this year largely as a result of advertising declines at its Eastern newspapers. For the first six months, it earned $93 million, or 72 cents a share, off from $153.8 million, or $1.19 a share, for the year-ago period. Revenues were $1.78 billion, up from $1.7 billion.

(AUG. 3) UPI - U-S Secretary of State Baker is in Moscow where he arrived today for urgent talks with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze on Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. The United States and Soviet Union are joining together to condemn yesterday's attack that's responsible for about 500 casualties. Baker and Shevardnadze are expected to issue a landmark joint statement denouncing what Baker termed the ''outlaw action.''

The Arab world remains divided over its response to the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. Jordan's King Hussein traveled to Baghdad, where he and Iraqi President Saddam Hussein agreed on an emergency meeting of Arab leaders in the next few days. The Jordanian leader says the Iraqi invasion is an Arab problem and foreign countries should NOT intervene in the oil and land dispute.

Israel is looking at the bigger possible picture in the wake of Iraq's takeover of Kuwait. Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy warned Baghdad today that it would view Iraqi troop movements toward Jordan as a direct threat to the Jewish state. In an interview today with Israel's Army Radio Levy said Israel will NOT tolerate Iraqi soldiers in neighboring Jordan.

The National Hurricane Center in Miami says Tropical Storm Cesar chugged along today over the open waters of the Atlantic Ocean. The storm was centered about one-thousand miles west of the westernmost Cape Verde Island, and was moving at about 50 miles an hour. Forecasters said the storm is days away from any land... but has the potential of strengthening during the weekend.

(AUG. 3) UPI - The Senate is trying to finish work on a 287-BILLION-dollar defense budget so lawmakers can take a summer vacation. Senators today rejected a proposal to cut U-S troop levels in Europe even further in debate that is expected to drag into tomorrow afternoon. There also is a dispute simmering about a proposal to boost the size of the National Guard as active duty forces are reduced.

California Democrat Fortney Stark admits he ''blew it'' in bringing up race while criticizing the policies of Health Secretary Sullivan. But Stark told the House today that he's standing by his view that Sullivan is carrying out White House policies that are hurting minorities and the poor. UNITED NATIONS (AUG. 3) UPI - The United States urged the U.N. Security Council Friday to punish Iraq with broad sanctions as that country showed no sign of pulling its invading troops out of Kuwait.

The U.S. initiative, which U.S. Ambassador Thomas Pickering said was a call for ''all-encompassing sanctions,'' prompted the council's 15 members to go into several rounds of consultations expected to continue through the weekend.

Pickering told reporters that he briefed the council's members and urged them to quickly adopt sanctions ranging from a trade embargo to a freeze on exports of military products to Iraq.

''More than 24 hours have already passed (since the invasion),'' Pickering said, pointing out that the council is ''deeply disturbed'' that Iraq has ignored the U.N. pullout call.

''We are beginning consultations for broad sanctions,'' he said.

He said U.N. sanctions will complement action taken by President Bush Thursday to freeze Iraqi assets in the United States and ban nearly all imports from Iraq.

Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar said he met Friday morning with Iraqi U.N. Ambassador Abdul Amir Al-Anbari and ''appealed for the full implementation'' of the Security Council resolution, which demanded ''immediate and unconditional'' withdrawal of Iraqi forces that invaded Kuwait in a pre-dawn attacks Thursday.

Perez de Cuellar, who has been mediating peace talks between Iran and Iraq was trying also to save the negotiations from breaking up after the Iraqi invasion.

Iran and Iraq ended their 8-year war with a U.N.-negotiated cease-fire Aug. 15, 1988. However, peace talks for a comprehensive settlement stalled because of long-standing differences.

Perez de Cuellar also met with representatives from the United States, the Soviet Union, China, France and Britain Friday to discuss the Iraqi invasion.

''We are interested in putting teeth in the present resolution,'' the ambassador told reporters as he entered the Security Council chambers to brief the body's 15 members on the U.S. policy toward Iraq.

''If the Iraqis are not responsive to the move of the Security Council, we want to move rapidly with sanctions,'' he said.

''We are interested in all encompassing sanctions, military, financial, anything you can think of, we would like to do it.''

The Security Council is the highest political body in the United Nations, charged with maintaining peace and security around the world. Its decisions are binding.

U.N. diplomats said Pickering was in Washington Thursday afternoon to discuss with White House officials imposing strong measures to force Iraq to abide by the Security Council resolution, which demanded that Iraqi troops be pulled out of Kuwait ''immediately and unconditionally.''

The council voted 14-0 to adopt the resolution, which called also on Kuwait and Iraq to hold ''intence negotiations'' to resolve their dispute on oil production and borders.

The 15th member of the council, Yemen, did not participate in the vote.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein ordered his forces, backed by tanks and artillery, into Kuwait before dawn Thursday, one day after talks between the two nations to iron out their differences failed.

Iraq's U.N. Ambassador Abdul Amir Al-Anbari, who met with Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar Friday morning, declined to comment on the meeting.

''It was a total occupation of Kuwaiti territory,'' said Kuwait's U.N. permanent representative, Mohammad Abulhassan. ''The world community should exert pressure on Iraq to halt its invasion and withdraw'' according terms of the resolution.

Abulhassan said the next step should be to apply sanctions against Iraq, but he proposed to give that country ''ample time'' to meet the Security Council's demands before other measures should be imposed.

PHILADELPHIA (AUG. 3) UPI - A New York branch of a Yugoslav bank Friday was fined $50,000 for its part in an international money laundering operation that turned out to be a federal sting.

U.S. District Judge Jan DuBois imposed the fine on LBS Bank of New York Inc. The bank was convicted last September of filing inaccurate currency transaction reports in connection with the operation. The principals in the scheme, Hubert Francis Cole, 45, and Vjekoslav Spanjol, 43, both of Dallas, were sentenced Thursday in the case.

Cole, a self-described tax protestor, was sentenced to five years in prison despite his testimony for the prosecution. Cole had pleaded guilty to conspiracy and money laundering and spent more than a month on the stand during the trial.

Spanjol, a businessman, was sentenced to six years and five months in prison. He was convicted of conspiracy, seven money-laundering-related counts, and smuggling two restricted underwater breathing devices into West Germany.

The bank was convicted of falsifying on reporting forms information including the identities of Cole and an undercover Internal Revenue Service agent who deposited $135,000 and immediately withdrew cashiers checks.

"The important false information was they did not identify the people who were conducting the transaction," said Assistant U.S. Attorney Paul Sarnousakis.

"The bank officers let Cole, in violation of the bank's compliance program prepare the CTRs (currency transaction reports)," Sarnousakis said. "They knew that the names given were not Cole or the undercover agent."

The conviction is the first of its kind against a bank in the Eastern District of Pennsylvania, Sarnousakis said. Prosecutors had asked for the maximum fine in the case, $500,000.

Cole and Spanjol were arrested in December 1988 at Philadelphia International Airport after a meeting with undercover customs agents they believed to be criminals.

"It was represented by the undercover agents that they were organized crime types, underworld characters, and some of the money (to be laundered) were from profits made by the export of prohibited items on the munitions and warfare lists," said Sarnousakis.

Also charged in the case were Bahurdin Bijedic, former Yugoslav counsel general in Chicago, and Vinko Mir, a former Yugoslav trade official. They were acquitted.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - Saying there has been evidence of profiteering, Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., called Friday for a presidential task force to monitor whether U.S. oil companies are using the invasion of Kuwait as an excuse to raise gas prices.

''On Thursday, Iraq invaded Kuwait. Today, less than 24 hours later, there are troubling signs that the oil industry may be invading the pockets of consumers,'' Lieberman said.

''The American people have enough trouble with Saddam Hussein. We don't need oil companies making matters worse.''

Lieberman said he has received ''widespread'' reports of price increases in his home state since the invasion, and added that there have been reports of Midwest gas stations hiking prices between 5 cents and 22 cents a gallon.

Lieberman said there is ''no reason'' at present for higher prices for gasoline and heating oil because of a glut on world oil markets.

He sent a letter to President Bush asking him to set up a task force on oil prices with representatives from the Energy and Justice departments, the Federal Trade Commission and the Commodity Futures Trading Commission.

Lieberman said the group's purpose would be to ''shine a bright spotlight on the oil industry, to let importers and refiners know we're watching,'' and thereby enable Congress to respond to any potential problems.

Lieberman said he also was writing to the American Petroleum Institute asking it to ''pass on to its members this request: don't use Saddam Hussein's madness as a cover to raise prices on consumers. Do you patriotic duty.''

MONTREAL (AUG. 3) UPI - Mohawk Indians and Canadian government officials are close to an agreement that would permit talks aimed at ending two lengthy armed standoffs between Mohawks and Quebec police, a federal government representative said Friday.

''(The talks are) moving along nicely,'' said Helen Fisher, a federal Indian Affairs representative, who said the agreement to open negotiations may be announced soon.

Mohawk representatives and the federal and Quebec governments had each set conditions before starting further talks to bring down barricades at the Kanesatake and Kahnawake Indian reserves near the U.S.-Canadian border.

''I believe they're very close to signing an agreement (on the three preconditions),'' said Susan Oak, a member of the Kanesatake Mohawk radio station. ''It's a matter of words.''

The conditions demanded by Mohawks include installing members of international groups such the International Federation of Human Rights or the United Nations as independent observers and free movement of food, supplies and Indian advisers across the barricades. The Mohawks want the agreement in writing.

A policeman was killed July 11 in an abortive police raid on a roadblock erected four months ago by Kanesatake Mohawks on a golf course expansion site on Oka land they claim is theirs.

Meanwhile, the federal government has restarted negotiations with Oka's municipal council to buy for $3.3 million the 67 acre golf course expansion site from Oka.

The Canadian government hopes to use 67 acres of land in Oka, which includes 14 homes and forest, along with another 30 acres purchased from a developer last week, as a bargaining chip with Mohawks to end the three-week standoffs.

Many of the Mohawk Warriors guarding the barricade at Kanesatake and the bridge barricade are members of the Warriors Society from the troubled St. Regis Indian reserve that straddles the U.S.-Canada border near Massena, N.Y.

The St. Regis Mohawk Warriors sided with pro-gambling forces and against traditional chiefs when pro and anti-gambling factions clashed in May, leaving two dead. Canadian government officials have accused the Warriors of being criminals who are holding the reserves hostage.

(AUG. 3) UPI - Gasoline prices were up as much as 14 cents a gallon Friday - prompting cries of price-gouging from certain quarters - as station operators passed on to motorists sharp hikes in wholesale costs following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Nationwide, self-serve unleaded gasoline was averaging $1.115 a gallon - a rise of four cents in two days, according to a spot check of 1,400 gas stations conducted by the American Automobile Association. Retail price increases ranged from four cents to 14 cents a gallon and further hikes were expected this weekend, AAA said.

Alarmed by reports of sudden hikes in gasoline prices, Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox established a special task force to investigate and prosecute price-gouging in his state.

"I began receiving calls (Thursday) night at my home from people who are angry and suspicious about sudden hikes in gasoline prices," Mattox said. "In one day's time, there is no way that Iraq's invasion should translate into higher prices at the pump." Citizen Action, a Washington consumer group, said gas prices would rise a total of 15 cents to 20 cents a gallon over the next few weeks.

The United States gets less than five percent of its crude oil from Iraq and Kuwait - and currently has a three-to-four month oil reserve - but spot oil prices have skyrocketed as world markets fear a crisis in the Middle East may threaten supplies. Gas stations typically pass on the entire amount of wholesale gas price increases to consumers.

Higher prices sparked numerous outcries from industry and consumer groups who claim oil companies should not charge higher prices for gasoline that is already in tanks, ready to be pumped.

The head of the Illinois Gas Dealers Association, Robert Jacobson, said it should take at least ten days for any wholesale price increase to be felt at the pump. Major U.S. oil companies have "aided and abetted" OPEC in raising the price of a barrel of oil in their own "self-interest," he said.

Norm Sather, president of the Washington Oil Marketer's Association, said hiking prices immediately isn't based on reality since there is so much gas in storage. "I think prices are increasing because oil companies see an opportunity to make additional profits."

Don Herring, a spokesman for Pittsburgh-based Marathon Oil Co., which raised its wholesale prices eight cents a gallon Friday, said market conditions dictate the company's prices. "Prices go up and prices go down and it isn't always related to the cost of material you bought last month " he said.

Motor club AAA urged the public to "not succumb to panic buying in an effort to avoid perceived future price hikes."

In California, where prices at the pump rose five cents a gallon earlier this week when a voter-approved hike in the gasoline tax went into effect, the latest wave of increases was especially hard felt.

In Florida, some gas stations were raising prices even though their suppliers had not yet begun charging them more, a spokesman for AAA charged. "They're collecting an increase that they haven't yet suffered. ... I'm sure some people might call it gouging," said William Dodd.

But in Pontiac, Ill., two radio stations celebrated their 25th anniversary by selling gas for 65 cents a gallon - or at 1965 prices - in an event planned a month ago. "If we had had time, we could have had Arab outfits made up," said WPOK-WJEZ General Manager Kevin Anfield.

BEIJING (AUG. 3) UPI - China Friday accused Taiwan of ''murdering'' 25 mainland Chinese who suffocated on a sealed fishing boat that Beijing said was towed to sea and set adrift by Taiwan authorities.

The official Xinhua news service said fishermen from the mainland coastal province of Fujian discovered a boarded-up fishing boat on July 22 that contained 25 corpses and one gravely ill passenger, who survived to tell a gruesome account of what China called an act of ''inhumane repatriation.''

The survivor, identified as Lin Licheng, reportedly told authorities the group of 26 castaways entered Taiwan illegally aboard a fishing boat in mid-July on a ''business trip,'' Xinhua said.

China is technically at war with Taiwan, where the defeated Chinese Nationalist government fled following its defeat by the Communists in 1949.

On July 21, Taiwan authorities ''seized'' the illegal immigrants in the northeast coastal town of Ilan, blindfolded them and forced them into two small cabins on board their fishing boat, Lin reportedly said.

The cabins, measuring a mere 32 square feet, were ''sealed by long nails and covered with timber and other heavy materials,'' Xinhua said. Taiwan gunboats then towed the fishing boat to waters near the mainland and set it adrift, the report said.

By the time the boat was discovered the next day near the village of Guangyu on Pingtan island, approximately 77 miles from the Taiwan coast, all but one of the 26 passengers aboard had died from lack of oxygen.

''The mainlanders were suffocated and Lin had a narrow escape by finding a small hole in the wall of the cabin,'' Xinhua said.

Over the years, mainland Chinese have occasionally defected to Taiwan by air and by sea. The Taiwanese government has generally welcomed the defectors as a propaganda gesture to embarrass the neighboring communist regime.

The most recent case of forced repatriation was carried out by the Chinese side and involved double defector Hou Dejian, a Taiwanese pop singer who defected to the mainland in 1983.

Chinese authorities shipped Hou back to his native Taiwan by fishing boat in July following the singer's calls for the release of political prisoners and a more tolerant government.

BEIJING (AUG. 3) UPI - China's bid to establish diplomatic ties with Singapore accelerated Friday with word that Premier Li Peng would hold an ''in-depth exchange'' with the city-state's prime minister, Lee Kuan Yew, during a visit next week.

China announced Wednesday that Li would spend three days in Singapore Aug. 11-13 following a five-day visit to Indonesia, where he and President Suharto formally will restore diplomatic ties after 25 years of enmity.

But China's Foreign Ministry added weight to the Singapore leg of the trip in Friday's announcement, saying Li would spend not three but eight days in the Southeast Asian nation and would hold a summit with its longtime leader.

The statement, reported by the official Xinhua news agency and quoting Assistant Foreign Minister Xue Dunxin, seemed to assure that the Chinese and Singaporean leaders would act to establish diplomatic ties.

''Xue said he believes the Chinese premier's visit to Singapore will deepen mutual understanding, increase common points of view and promote the development of the two countries relations,'' Xinhua said.

''Li will take the opportunity to visit old friends and get acquainted with the new generation of Singapore's leaders,'' Xue said.

Singapore has said for more than a year that it desired full diplomatic relations with China, but said it would await the results of negotiations between Beijing and Jakarta. Indonesia severed ties with China in 1967 following an abortive communist coup attempt that Jakarta alleged was backed by Beijing.

China and Indonesia last month removed the remaining obstacles to restoring bilateral ties and announced that Li would visit Jakarta Aug. 6, prompting renewed rounds of negotiations between Beijing and Singapore.

China's Foreign Ministry confirmed the talks Wednesday, saying the two sides ''have started their negotiations on establishing diplomatic relations.''

A key issue for Singapore is its cherished economic and cultural ties with capitalist powerhouse Taiwan, the Nationalist Chinese enclave that has been ''at war'' with the Chinese Communists for 45 years.

A model could be found in the formula accepted last week by China and Saudi Arabia, a key Taiwan ally, under which Riyadh's ties with Taipei will remain virtually unchanged save for the lack of an ambassador.

Indonesia agreed to a similar arrangement with China.

China and Singapore have enjoyed growing trade and cultural relations despite their lack of formal diplomatic ties. Singapore is China's fifth largest export market and bilateral trade in 1989 was $3.2 billion - more than five times the figure in 1980.

(AUG. 3) UPI - There are fears that Iraqi forces may do to Saudi Arabia what they did to Kuwait yesterday. U-S sources say the Iraqis are consolidating their position in Kuwait and are heading toward the Saudi border. One Western diplomat says the Saudis have NOT even put their troops on full alert because they don't want to run the risk of antagonizing Baghdad.

Secretary of State Baker and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze today joined a global chorus of protest by issuing an unprecedented joint statement demanding Iraq immediately withdraw from Kuwait. They also called on all nations to stop arms shipments to Baghdad.

In Brussels, the United States told its NATO allies today that it will NOT simply stand by if Iraq extends hostilities beyond Kuwait. Sources say all delegates from all 16 NATO countries agreed to cut off arms shipments and many of the countries have already frozen Iraqi or Kuwaiti assets that Iraq might use.

The Senate today rejected a proposal to increase the number of U-S troops cut in Europe now that Cold War tensions have eased. Senators voted 59-40 against the proposal offered by North Dakota Democrat Kent Conrad. Lawmakers are still working on the 287-BILLION-dollar defense budget that's being delayed by debate on several other issues.

There's more evidence the economy is slowing down. The Labor Department reports today that the nation's civilian unemployment rate jumped to five-point-five percent in July... the worst showing in two years. Economists agree that the jobless increase is in line with other data and suggests that a recession looms ahead.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - Edward J. DeBartolo Corp.'s move to end its real estate partnership with Campeau Corp. may affect Campeau's efforts to sell shopping malls in New Jersey, Massachusetts and Washington state, a Campeau spokesman said Friday.

Representatives from the two companies were discussing DeBartolo's approval rights for such sales, an issue that has been complicated by DeBartolo's desire to break a current agreement, Campeau spokesman Patrick Howe said.

Campeau disclosed in a Securities and Exchange Commission filing this week that DeBartolo, a Youngstown, Ohio, real estate developer, had sent Campeau a letter dated June 21 that "purportedly ends (their) partnership arrangements."

Campeau is currently trying to sell its 50 percent stake in properties developed by the two companies, presumably to reduce its heavy debt load. At the same time, Robert Campeau, the company's embattled chairman and chief executive officer, is seeking new equity investments to shore up his company, according to the SEC document.

Campeau is the Toronto-based parent of the U.S. retail chains Allied Stores Corp. and Federated Department Stores Inc., both of which filed Chapter 11 federal bankruptcy petitions earlier this year.

Allied controls several department store chains, including Jordan Marsh, Maas Inc. and Stern's, while Federated holdings include the Bloomingdale's and Burdines chains. All of Campeau's U.S. operations are grouped under Campeau's Federated Stores Inc. unit.

The DeBartolo/Campeau partnership owns 15 percent of the capital stock of Federated Holdings Inc., parent of Federated Department Stores and part owner of Allied Stores Corp.

In addition, the two partners each have a 50 percent interest in certain shopping malls, including: Northshore Mall in Peabody, Mass.; Bergen Mall in Paramus, N.J.; and, in Washington state, Tacoma Mall in Tacoma, Northgate Mall in Seattle and Columbia Shopping Center in Kennewick.

The five malls, which were acquired from Allied by Campeau in a 1986 merger, have a total combined area of 4.87 million square feet and house approximately 605 retail stores and services.

The Campeau/DeBartolo partnership was set up to handle future acquisitions and the development of shopping centers and malls, although Campeau has no new projects planned.

Each company under the partnership was to make certain real estate decisions, such as strategic planning for new store locations, loans taken to develop new projects and the administration and management of the U.S. real estate holdings.

The two companies have an agreement that said real estate connected to Allied and Federated could only be sold by mutual consent, but it was not clear whether these conditions pertained to the partnership's primary real estate holdings.

A factor in the partnership's breakup may be Campeau's repeated payment defaults on $480 million owed to DeBartolo, which has already given Campeau at least four extensions when payments were due.

DeBartolo has notified Campeau that its defaults have caused the acceleration of payments due but has agreed not to exercise remedies against secured assets it holds until this Monday.

NEW YORK (AUG. 3) UPI - The Rev. Bruce Ritter, founder of Covenant House, spent the last 20 years engaged in sexual misconduct with young men living at the nationally renowned charity's shelters for runaway youths, it was charged Friday.

A report, the result of a four-month investigation ordered by Covenant House's board of directors, concluded that had Ritter not resigned last February, the board would have been required to fire him.

The probe also found that Ritter should have informed the board about a $300,000 trust the priest established with the charity's monies as well as loans he made to two senior staff members.

An earlier investigation into Covenant House finances conducted by the Manhattan district attorney last February cleared Ritter of any wrongdoing but a separate state inquiry into the trust and loans is still underway.

A lawyer for Ritter, who has consistently denied allegations of sexual misconduct, issued a statement condemning the board for releasing the report, asserting that the disgraced priest had already paid his debt to society.

''In light of Father Ritter's resignation in February, revisiting these allegations now is wholly unnecssary, either for Covenant House or for the public,'' the lawyer, Stanley Arkin, wrote in the statement.

Some 150 Covenant House staffers, former employees and ex-residents were questioned about the allegations against Ritter during the investigation headed by former New York City police chief Robert McGuire.

Five former residents told the investigators they had engaged in sexual activity with Ritter. A sixth claimed the priest made advances to him that the young man rebuffed.

Similar claims by at least four other former residents could not be confirmed because one of the men had reportedly died, while the three others could not be tracked down by the investigators.

The report concluded that while none of the allegations could be proved ''beyond any question,'' Ritter had ''exercised unacceptably poor judgment in his relations with certain residents'' over a period of time from 1970 to 1989.

''It is our opinion that if Father Ritter had not resigned, the termination of the relationship between him and Covenant House would have been required,'' the report said.

Ritter, who was believed to be living in New Jersey, refused to cooperate with the investigation. The 63-year-old priest was said to be considering leaving the Franciscan order.

BONN (AUG. 3) UPI - East and West German leaders hope their decision to bring forward German unification and elections will forestall a major economic disaster in East Germany and stop growing discontent in West Germany over the costs of unity, analysts said Friday.

Announcing the decision Friday, East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere and West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl admitted their decision to hold elections on Oct. 14, and unification before that, was partly prompted by the grim conditions in East Germany.

Soaring unemployment, dwindling productivity and collapsing industrial sectors have plagued the East German economy ever since the strong West German mark replaced the virtually worthless East mark July 1.

Government officials and analysts said foreign investors remained suspicious of what is largely viewed as a weak East German government torn by frequent divisions and whose ministers largely lack political experience.

Some West Germans directly blame the East German ministers.

Privately, officials in Bonn admit they were worried by a series of articles this week in the mass-circulation Bild daily, which claimed the ministers were wasting West German taxpayers' money.

''East Germany: The people in despair - the ministers on vacation'' the paper flashed on a front page.

Even the staid conservative Frankfurter Allgemeine criticized the East German government's economic policies, saying that ''Prosperity can only grow and social misery can only dwindle where there is successful management.''

Although there are no official estimates of the overall costs, the West German government has already provided billions of marks to help rebuild the East German economy.

Several government officials in Bonn have privately argued that only swift unification and elections could slow down the erosion of the East German economy by putting it under the control of a strong government with a full electoral mandate.

Analysts in Bonn said these arguments prompted Kohl and de Maiziere to announce their decision - which still needs parliamentary backing.

A new, united German government will face a formidable task in trying to come to grips with the East German economy.

Obsolete equipment, decaying infrastructure and old-fashioned management teams, trained under the former Stalinist leadership have contributed to the economic problems.

Formerly state-owned companies had to lay-off tens of thousands of workers to save money. Every week about 30,000 East Germans, out of a total population of 16 million, lose their jobs.

Massive strikes slowed down output in almost every sector of the economy in recent weeks. Workers complain that their wages have not been adjusted to higher prices that followed the introduction of the West German mark.

In the agricultural sector, farmers have dumped record harvests, because East German stores, flooded with imports would not buy their produce.

Some of the much-praised small-scale joint ventures between West German companies and East German entrepreneurs collapsed after their East German clients began to claim insolvency.

Equipped with brand-new machines from the West, financially backed by a West German partner and heavily indebted, many of the small new firms will face bankruptcy if they don't find a booming market.

Konrad Weiss, spokesman for the small East German Democracy Now party dubbed the decision for early elections ''a bankruptcy declaration by the East German government.''

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - American apparel manufacturers were handed Friday their second major defeat in two weeks in their struggle to keep cheaper Asian sweaters out of the U.S. marketplace.

The Commerce Department's International Trade Administration made a final determination that South Korea sells man-made fiber sweaters in the U.S. marketplace with an average dumping margin so low - 1.3 percent - as to render countervailing duties unlikely or meaningless.

There is dumping, and a product is sold at less than fair market value, if a product's country of origin price - or its price on a third nation market used as a benchmark - is higher than its price on the U.S. market.

"The ITA data prove that Koreans have not engaged in dumping practices," claimed Donald Zarin, a lawyer with the Washington firm Reid & Priest, which represents the South Korean Knitwear and Garment Exporters Association. "Any rate below four percent does not indicate dumping."

The New York-based National Knitwear and Sportswear Association, which last year complained to the ITA that man-made fiber sweaters from South Korea, Hong Kong, and Taiwan were dumped on the U.S. marketplace, voiced its hope that the Commerce Department "will find reason to impose higher margins during subsequent annual reviews." Last year imports of man-made fiber sweaters from South Korea reached $476.1 million.

On July 20, the ITA triggered an outcry from the NKSA by ruling that imports of man-made fiber sweaters from Hong Kong, which reached $208.8 million in 1989, were sold at only 5.86 percent below their fair market value.

At the time, representatives of Hong Kong textiles manufacturers predicted that the International Trade Commission, an autonomous agency, would not find that the Hong Kong sweater imports injure U.S. industries.

Zarin said the low dumping margin calculated for South Korean sweaters should "facilitate" a similar decision by the ITC. The commission now has 45 days to determine if the Korean sweater imports injure U.S. industries.

If the ITC determination is affirmative in either case, the Commerce Department will order Customs to collect anti-dumping duties. Meanwhile, the ITA asked Customs to require a cash deposit or bond equal to the respective dumping margins.

NKSA Executive Director Seth Bodner said the association remains confident "that the ITC will find that the domestic industry has indeed been hurt by this unfair trade activity."

The Commerce Department's International Trade Administration will make its final determination on the import of man-made fiber sweaters from Hong Kong on Aug. 17. Such imports reached $485.5 million in 1989.

In April, the ITA made a preliminary determination that Hong Kong sweaters are sold in the U.S. marketplace with a 25.2 percent dumping margin. The administration then calculated higher dumping margins for both Hong Kong and South Korea.

PORT-OF-SPAIN, TRINIDAD (AUG. 3) UPI - A week after a failed but bloody coup attempt by black Moslem rebels, Trinidadians said Friday they were bewildered, angry and concerned about the virtual paralyzation of the twin-island nation.

The government said the coup attempt sparked violence and widespread looting and destruction in the capital that claimed at least 30 lives and caused billions of dollars worth of damage and left hundreds without a job.

Unofficially, it was reported that more than 300 died and about 1,000 were injured in the failed coup.

Authorities were moving fast to rush in emergency supplies and to solve sanitation problems caused by piling up of garbage and bodies still left rotting on the streets.

There were scenes of near-total chaos Friday as crowds lined up for food, gasoline and other basic supplies. Most supermarkets and banks remained closed.

With a state of emergency and a curfew in force, industry and commerce were at a standstill, but Acting Prime Minister M. Winston Dookeran announced Friday that plans were being made to reopen banks on Sunday,

The rebels stormed the Parliament and television station the night of July 27, taking captive Prime Minister Arthur Robinson and some 45 others, demanding Robinson resign and calling for new elections.

Rebel leader Yasin Abu Bakr and 68 others surrendered about 1 p.m. Wednesday after releasing 29 hostages from the television station. The rebels inside the Parliament building, including Abu Bakr's second in command, Balil Abdulah, surrendered a few hours later and released the 17 remaining hostages, including Cabinet members and legislators.

Hundreds of troops from other East Caribbean nations were heading to Trinidad and Tobago to assist security forces, and the rebels who tried to oust the government will be prosecuted for treason.

In the wake of the rebels' surrender, the political situation is confusing. Robinson has not spoken to the nation since his release. There also have been reports of wrangling in the government over the handling of the affair after the rebel surrender.

The Daily Express newspaper said military hardliners had ruled out any deal with the rebels.

Government public relations officer Gregory Shaw said there had been an emotional reaction among the population that the rebels should have been shot but that ''this is a democratic country and these people will be tried by law''.

The Express said the police and defense force had refused to sign any agreement giving amnesty to the insurgents.

Shaw also said in a press briefing Friday that Robinson was resting comfortably and will speak on the radio Sunday.

Two shipments of emergency supplies arrived from Venezuela Friday and more are enroute from the United States, Canada and other countries.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - More negotiations between the White House and Congress are in store as the two sides try to reconcile their differences on a major civil rights bill soon to be headed for President Bush's desk.

The bill passed by the House Friday is similar to one passed two weeks ago by the Senate and the two chambers should have little trouble working out their differences after the August recess. More important is the question of whether administration concerns can be resolved.

Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass. who led the fight for passage in the Senate, said in a statement after the House vote, ''There is still time to negotiate a satisfactory compromise and avoid a veto battle. I urge the administration to abandon its insistence on a watered-down bill as the price of the president's signature.''

The bill is intended to reverse or modify five Supreme Court decisions last year that made it more difficult for women or minorities to prove job discrimination, and also restricted the remedies available to them.

Opponents argued that it goes beyond the court decisions and will result in hiring quotas and many more lawsuits.

The bill passed the House on a 272-154 vote, which would be enough to override a veto if the votes hold firm.

Ralph Neas, of the Leadership Council on Civil Rights, said after the House action, said he was ''very confident'' there would be a two-thirds majority in both chambers for the final version of the bill.

But he stressed, ''we hope the president is going to be part of this'' and not veto the bill.

Bush, in a letter House Republican leader Robert Michel, of Illinois, urged approval of a subsitute plan, saying it ''represents a sound, practical compromise that my administrtion can and will support.'' But the amendment was rejected by the House, 238-188.

The House adopted two Democratic amendments intended to make clear that quotas are not required and to set a limit on monetary damages that can be awarded, but Bush said the changes ''would not result in a bill I can sign.''

The bill already has been the subject of extensive negotiations with the White House and Neas said, ''I'm sure that there will be more discussions.''

Supporters ''are willing to make clarifications consistent with the intent of the legislation ... but there are not going to be any compromises on principle.''

A statement by the U.S. Chamber of Commerce charged that the House had ''voted against true civil rights, and instead voted for quotas and litigation.'' The business group said ''it is now inevitable that the president will veto this bill.''

The bill, in addition to dealing with the Supreme Court decisions, also, for the first time, allows the award of compensatory and punitive damages for victims of job discrimination based on sex, religion or national origin. Such awards have long been available to victims racial job discrimination.

MOSCOW (AUG. 3) UPI - The Soviet Union and the United States Friday demanded Iraq's immediate withdrawal from Kuwait, and Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said Baghdad has assured Moscow it will pull out the troops ''very shortly.''

The unprecedented joint statement issued by Shevardnadze and Secretary of State James Baker also called on all countries of the world to stop arms shipments to Iraq.

''Governments that engage in blatant aggression must know that the world community cannot and will not tolerate such aggression or assist it,'' the statement said.

Baker cut short a visit to Mongolia, concluding a 12-day Asia tour, and flew to the Soviet Union for the urgent talks with Shevardnadze on the Middle East crisis. After the two men issued the joint statement at a brief news conference, Baker left Moscow for Washington.

Shevardnadze told reporters at Moscow's Vnukovo Airport, where he met Baker, that the Soviet Union has had contact with Iraq about the Kuwait invasion.

''We have not had any official answer, but in Baghdad we have had contacts at various levels, and we have been assured that the troops will be withdrawn very shortly,'' he said.

Baker said the U.S.-Soviet statement was ''not just rhetoric, but concrete '' but it did not describe any specific steps the two superpowers might take. Moscow on Thursday stopped arms shipments to Iraq and Washington slapped a trade embargo on Baghdad and froze Iraqi assets in the United States.

''The Soviet Union and the United States reiterate our call for the unconditional Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait,'' the joint statement said.

''Today we take the unusual step of jointly calling on the international community to join with us in ceasing all arms deliveries to Iraq,'' it said.

Shevardnadze said he did not believe some 7,000 to 8,000 Soviet citizens in Iraq were in danger, but he warned of ''very very serious consequences'' if their security was threatened.

At a news conference in Ulan Bator, Mongolia shortly before he cut short a visit to fly to Moscow, Baker called Iraq's invasion of Kuwait an ''outlaw action,'' saying the United States was considering a range of responses and refusing to rule out military action.

The secretary of state said Iraq was believed to have 50,000 to 100,000 troops in Kuwait and was consolidating its grip on the country.

''There are indications that the occupying power is setting up a puppet government,'' Baker said.

He said there were no reports of American casualties and ''the integrity of foreign embassies seems to have been preserved so far'' in the occupied nation.

''What you have here clearly is naked aggression by a strong and powerful country with a major military machine against a smaller and much weaker neighbor,'' Baker said. ''This can only be characterized as an outlaw action.''

Asked about the possible U.S. response, Baker said Washington was considering ''a number of different possibilities and options,'' and he would not rule out the use of force.

''I'm not going to run through all those here or get into answering questions about any that would have a military connotation,'' he said.

Baker appeared at the briefing with Mongolian Foreign Minister T. Gombosuren, who announced that Mongolia had also condemned the Iraqi invasion. Baker said this indicated ''Iraq's invasion should be condemned in the strongest terms, and Iraq should withdraw.''

''The international community should draw together and make it clear it will not tolerate such action.''

The Kuwait crisis forced Baker to end his Mongolia visit at the close of its official schedule, which lasted about 26 hours. He had to skip a planned weekend hunting, camping and fishing trip in the Gobi Desert.

The visit was the first by an American secretary of state since the United States and Mongolia established relations in January 1987, but it was overshadowed by Kuwait.

Baker signed agreements during the visit to give Mongolia Peace Corps volunteers, to solidify consular relations and to improve trade and commercial links.

LONDON (AUG. 3) UPI - Amnesty International said Friday it has received reports that hundreds of Iraqis living in Kuwait and suspected of opposing the Iraqi government have been arrested since Iraq's invasion.

The London-based organization, which monitors human rights abuses worldwide, said the reports indicate some of the detainees may have already been taken back to Iraq, where they face imprisonment or are at risk of torture or execution.

The arrests allegedly occurred after Iraqi troops moved into Kuwait early Thursday.

''The Iraqi government has a record of brutal ruthlessness with its opponents,'' Amnesty International said in a prepared statement. ''We fear for the safety, and the lives, of those arrested in Kuwait.''

''Those arrested apparently include members or supporters of the Iraqi Communist Party and Shiite Moslems with links to the opposition group al-Da'wa al-Islamiyya (Islamic Call), membership of which is a capital offense in Iraq,'' Amnesty said.

Many of the arrests reportedly took place in the predominantly Shiite Moslem district of Bnaid al-Gar in Kuwait city, where Amnesty said security forces apparently carried out house searches and arrested suspected opponents.

Amnesty said the Iraqi government has long been interested in Iraqi political opponents living in Kuwait.

It said the Kuwait government is believed to have handed Iraqi nationals over to Iraqi authorities in the mid-1980s.

The group said it was concerned about the alleged arrests because of Iraq's poor human rights record.

Iraq has held thousands of political prisoners without charge or trial, detaining some after unfair trials and torturing others. Hundreds of Iraqi Kurds have ''disappeared'' and others executed after surrendering to Iraqi officials under recent amnesties, Amnesty said.

The Kuwaiti Embassy in Belgium reported that about 200 Kuwaitis were said to have been killed during the invasion, according to Amnesty, which said the circumstances of the killings remained unclear.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - First Dog Millie is recovering after licking paint remover used to renovate the White House, the presidential spokesman said Friday.

Slightly modifying word the day before from President Bush that Millie was suffering from lead poisoning, press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the family pet had somehow waded into the solvent and licked it off her paws. The solvent is being used to remove old paint from the South Side of the White House.

''Blood tests have shown that Millie had acute lead exposure, which is not the same as lead poisoning,'' the spokesman said in answer to a flurry of questions from a concerned public.

''According to the veterinarian, the condition has already corrected itself through the natural cleansing process.''

He did not elaborate.

Lethargy in the friendly, 4 1/2-year-old English springer spaniel prompted concern in the first family and Bush disclosed the condition Thursday in Aspen, Colo., calling it a ''terrible thing.''

''It has all been removed so that neither Millie nor anyone else can be exposed to it,'' Fitzwater said of the offending solvent.

''Millie is fine,'' he added. ''Millie is in good shape and back performing her functions as first dog.''

MOSCOW (AUG. 3) UPI - Here is the text of the joint U.S.-Soviet statement on Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, as read by Secretary of State James Baker at a news conference with Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze:

''The Soviet Union and the United States, as members of the United Nations Security Council, consider it important that the Council promptly and decisively (has) condemned the brutal and illegal invasion of Kuwait by Iraqi military forces.

''The United States and the Soviet Union believe that now it is essential that the Security Council resolution be fully and immediately implemented. By its actions Iraq has shown its contempt for the most fundamental principles of the United Nations charter and international law.

''In response to this blatant transgression of the basic norms of civilized conduct, the United States and the Soviet Union have each taken a number of actions, including the Soviet suspension of arms deliveries and the American freezing of assets.

''The Soviet Union and United States reiterate our call for unconditional Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait. The sovereignty, national independence, legitimate authorities and territorial integrity of the state of Kuwait must be completely restored and safeguarded.

''The United States and the Soviet Union believe the international community must not only condemn this action, but also take practical steps in response to it. Today we take the unusual step of jointly calling on the rest of the international community to join with us in an international cut-off of all arms supplies to Iraq.

''In addition, the Soviet Union and the United States call on regional organizations, especially the League of Arab States, all Arab governments as well as the non-aligned movement and the Islamic Conference to take all possible steps to ensure that the United Nations Security Council resolution is carried out.

''Governments that engage in blatant aggression must know that the international community cannot and will not acquiesce in or facilitate aggression.''

(AUG. 3) UPI - Families and co-workers anxiously pleaded for news Friday on a dozen or more employees of U.S. oil companies who are missing and believed to have been taken prisoner by Iraqi troops during the invasion of Kuwait.

''The main thing I'd like right now is for (the Iraqis) to let him call us '' said Marjorie Walterscheid of Jacksboro, Texas, whose husband, Rainard, was missing from a Sante Fe Drilling Co. facility in northern Kuwait.

''I'd like to hear his voice,'' she said. ''If I could just talk to him a minute, I could tell by listening that everything is fine. I can tell if anything is wrong.''

A State Department spokesman said in Washington that 14 American citizens - all employees of three American oil companies in fields near the Iraqi-Kuwaiti border - were known to be missing and believed to be in the custody of Iraqi troops.

But three U.S. companies said they had a total of 12 employees unaccounted for in Kuwait, of whom nine are Americans, one is Canadian and two are British.

The State Department said it was pressing Iraq for more information and had a commitment from the Iraqi government to safeguard Americans.

The U.S. government did not identify the missing workers or their employers, but Santa Fe Drilling Co., an Alhambra, Calif., subsidiary of Sante Fe International Corp., said eight of its employees were taken: six Americans, one Canadian and one British citizen.

Halliburton Co. of Dallas, an oil field services company, said it had not been able to account for one American and one British employee out of 16 workers in Kuwait.

Chevron Research and Technology Co., a Richmond, Calif., subsidiary of Chevron USA Inc., said two of its engineers - both East San Francisco Bay residents - also were missing.

John Mika, a spokesman for Sante Fe International - a subsidiary of the Kuwaiti state petroleum company - said the company did not know where the employees were being held.

''All we have is information that they have been detained,'' he said. ''The information is very sketchy. It is a sensitive issue and at this stage we can't comment any further.''

Mika declined to identify any of the missing Sante Fe employees, but relatives identified two of them as Walterscheid, 52, and Charles Amos, 59 of Harmony, Texas.

Walterscheid had been expected to return from Kuwait Aug. 17, said his daughter, Paula Czap of Lawton, Okla.

''He was talking on the phone to an official from Santa Fe Drilling Co. when he looked up and said, 'The soldiers are here.' Then the line went dead,'' she said.

Santa Fe Drilling officials tried repeatedly to call back and finally reached an Iraqi soldier, she said.

''The Iraqi soldier said they were putting them in a car and taking them away,'' Czap said.

Marjorie Walterscheid said her husband, a drilling superintendent at an exploration site near the Ahmadi in northern Kuwait, had worked in that country since March.

''The main thing I'm worried about is, what if we go in?'' she said, referring to the prospect of U.S. military intervention.

Walterscheid said she doesn't want the United States to attack ''until I get my husband home. Then let them have it.''

The family of Amos awaited word on his whereabouts at the family home in Harmony.

''We are holding out for whatever information we can get,'' said Amos's son, David. ''We just know he was one of eight being led by Iraqi troops toward the border.''

''We're just concerned for our friends there and Charles,'' said Sarah Amos, wife of the missing oil worker. ''We'd just like to hear from someone to tell us where he's at.''

Halliburton spokesman Guy Marcus said most of his company's employees in Kuwait had escaped to Saudi Arabia by land, but one American and one Briton remained unaccounted for.

''They could be anywhere,'' he said. ''We are in the process of trying to locate them, but the progress is slow with all the turmoil.''

Marcus said he could not identify the workers, nor give details of those who had their families with them.

A Chevron spokesman in San Francisco said that company's two missing engineers had been finishing up a three-week consulting trip to Kuwait when the invasion occurred.

''Neither the company nor their families have had any contact with them since the invasion,'' spokesman Sandy Mackie said. ''Their families are obviously concerned and anxious. ... We don't know whether they've been detained or just unable to contact us.''

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - In an unintentional irony, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee voted Friday to confirm career diplomat Edward William Gnehm as the new U.S. ambassador to Kuwait.

Gnehm, 45, of Carrolton, Ga., is now the deputy assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern and South Asian affairs. He joined the Foreign Service in 1969 and has served in Vietnam, Nepal, Jordan, Saudi Arabia, Yemen and Syria.

Committee staffers said it was coincidental the nomination came up Friday. Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., joked that someone should tell the nominee ''the good news is he's been confirmed; the bad news is he's going to Kuwait.''

Gnehm will replace W. Nathaniel Howell, the ambassador since July 1987, who remains in Kuwait, State Department officials said.

Also confirmed on a voice vote were the nominations of Townsend Friedman of Illinois as ambassador to Mozambique, Kenneth Peltier of Texas as ambassador to Comoros and Genta Holmes of California as ambassador to Namibia.

NEW YORK (AUG. 3) UPI - Uncertainty about Iraq's next move in the Persian Gulf continued to give the dollar support Friday in thin, nervous New York trading, even though most traders wanted to sell the currency because of a report of higher U.S. unemployment.

Currency traders said rumors and conflicting reports about a possible Iraqi incursion into Saudi Arabia, the world's leading oil producer, kept up buying of the dollar as a safe haven from global turmoil.

But they unhappily eyed a Labor Department report that nonfarm employment, excluding 162,000 temporary U.S. census workers, fell by 57,000 jobs in July, with the jobless rate ticking up to 5.5 percent from June's 5.2 percent. "Without Mideast tensions, the dollar would have come off this morning," said Jack Griffin, a Banque Indosuez assistant vice president.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 1.5925 German marks, up from 1.5908 marks Thursday, and at 149.90 Japanese yen, up from 149.25.

Barry O'Sullivan, chief trader at Union Bank of Switzerland, said trading was "real nervous, real thin." Griffin said players "seemed to want to stay out of it. ... There was just too much of a chance for it to go either way."

Griffin added that if the Mideast political situation calmed down, the dollar was likely to be sold heavily on ramifications of higher oil prices which would drive up inflation and slow economic growth.

Other New York dollar rates: 1.35 Swiss francs, off from 1.3520; 5.3425 French francs, up from 5.3300; and 1,163 Italian lire, off from 1,164.50. The British pound moved up to $1.8550 from $1.8540.

In Europe, the dollar closed lower against all major currencies as the disappointing U.S. employment figures and a reassessment of the dollar's value led to erosion of Thursday's gains spurred by the turmoil in the Gulf.

Only unconfirmed rumors of Iraqi troops threatening Saudia Arabia prevented a greater drop in the dollar, dealers said. "The market is very skittish about the dollar," said Andy Baxter of Bank of America's London office.

Baxter said that, with the United States on the verge of a recession and oil prices boding higher inflation, the dollar is vulnerable: "Recession and inflation doesn't add up to a very attractive economy."

The dollar fell in both Frankfurt, to 1.5930 German marks vs. 1.6035 Thursday, and Zurich, to 1.3500 Swiss francs vs. 1.3650.

In London, the pound closed higher at $1.8560 against $1.84975. Dealers said the pound, helped by high British interest rates, advanced on short-covering before the weekend.

The U.S. unit also closed lower in Paris, Brussels and Milan, to, respectively, 5.3365 French francs from 5.4270, 32.75 Belgian francs from 32.99 and 1,166.10 Italian lire against 1,185.20.

Earlier, the dollar continued to rise in Tokyo against the yen. The dollar closed at 149.35 yen, ahead from 148.90 yen. "We were run ragged today by various new reports of Iraq's invasion," said Sumitomo Bank chief dealer Tetsuya Taura.

In Zurich, gold closed at $379 an ounce, down $1.50 from Thursday's close of $380.50. In London, gold closed at $378.125 an ounce, off from $378.75.

Silver was unchanged in Zurich at $4.90 an ounce but fell in London to $4.86 an ounce from $4.87.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.855 an ounce, down from $4.86. Comex silver ended at $4.842 an ounce, up from $4.835.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - Justice Thurgood Marshall was admitted to the hospital Friday following a fall he suffered while attending a Bar Association convention in Chicago, a Supreme Court official said.

Marshall, at 82 the oldest member of the high court, was admitted to Naval Medical Center in Bethesda, Md., for observation, court spokeswoman Toni House said. His condition was stable.

Marshall had flown to Chicago Thursday to participate in the annual American Bar Association convention. He stumbled and fell about dinnertime in the lobby of the hotel where he was staying, and flew back to Washington Friday, House said.

House said the justice decided to return to Washington because he wanted to see his doctor. She declined to describe the nature of Marshall's injuries.

However, House said the accident would prevent the justice from returning to Chicago, where he was scheduled to address an ABA dinner Monday night.

With the departure last month of liberal Justice William Brennan, Marshall became the leading liberal voice on the conservative-dominated court.

As an NAACP laywer, Marshall gained national prominence as lead attorney when he won the 1954 Brown vs. Board of Education case that led to nationwide school desegregation.

He served as U.S. Solicitor General - the government's chief representative before the Supreme Court - before being selected as the first black member of the high court by Lyndon Johnson in 1967.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell introduced legislation Friday to ensure that states retain the right to regulate the disposal of low-level radioactive wastes.

Mitchell's proposal was in reaction to a policy statement by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, which said last month it would allow the deregulation of some radioactive waste.

''The NRC decision is a short-sighted attempt to reduce disposal costs at the expense of the public health,'' Mitchell said. The result of the NRC policy would be more people facing a higher cancer risk.''

The proposed measure by the Maine lawmaker would prohibit the NRC from proceeding with its policy of deregulating low-level radioactive wastes.

Nine senators signed the bill as co-sponsors.

The National Research Council of the National Academy of Sciences recently said the risks of exposure to low-level radiation are three to four times greater than previously estimated, Mitchell said in a statement.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - President Bush said Friday that if Iraqi troops drive through conquered Kuwait into Saudi Arabia, ''I would be inclined to help in any way we possibly can. It's that serious.

''The integrity of Saudi Arabia, its freedom, are very, very important to the United States,'' a grim-faced Bush said after a meeting with national security advisers at the White House and a series of telephone talks with world leaders.

Saudi Arabia is the major Middle East exporter of oil to the United States and is on tiny Kuwait's southern border at the hear of the Persian Gulf. The State Department said Iraqi troops had moved with miles of the border.

The United States and Saudi Arabia have had close ties for more than a half century and in the past decade U.S. officials have cultivated relations with the Saudis by supplying advanced military equipment, such as AWACS reconnaissance planes.

The White House responded skeptically to a report by the semi-official Middle East News Agency. It quoted a spokesman from Iraq's ruling Revolutionary Command Council as saying Iraqi troops would start withdrawing from Kuwait Sunday in accordance with an unspecified timetable. The official did not mention an Iraqi-backed government that Baghdad claimed it was helping install in Kuwait.

''We want an immediate and unconditional withdrawal,'' an administration official said. ''We'll have to wait and see (about the report). There are still many questions. If there are strings, we need to see what they are.'' the United States told allies Friday that it is developing contingency plans to counter any further Iraqi aggression, and ''it was made clear the United States would not stand by'' if world oil supplies are further endangered.

With U.S. warships near the gulf but U.S. military options limited, the White House pushed for a U.N.-sponsored worldwide economic boycott of Iraq and joined the Soviet Union in calling for a cutoff all arm sales to Baghdad.

Bush met at the White House Friday with Prince Bandar, the Saudi ambassador to the United States. Late Thursday, he spoke by telephone with Saudi King Fahd.

''When you look at vital interests to the United States, the relationship with Saudi Arabia and its independence and its freedom, come under the heading of very, very important,'' Bush said before leaving the White House for a weekend visit to his Camp David retreat.

Asked how he would respond to an Iraqi thrust toward Saudi Arabia's rich oil fields, the president said, ''If they ask for specific help, it depends obviously what it is, but I'd be inclined to help in any way we possibly can.''

''It's that serious,'' Bush said. ''All you have to do is look at the energy requirements of the world, plus the direct violation of international law'' by Iraqi forces directed by President Saddam Hussein.

Bush, who said he would meet with top advisers again Saturday, told reporters, ''The status quo is unacceptable and further expansion would be even more unacceptable.''

''All options are open - economic and otherwise,'' he said.

As for reports Saddam would withdraw the troops within a few days, Bush snapped, ''Well, let's see him haul them out right now, then.''

The State Department said it had heard reports that Iraq promised to pull out of Kuwait Sunday, but had not been able to confirm it independently.

Just hours after the Kuwait invasion Thursday, Bush imposed a trade embargo against Iraq and froze all Baghdad assets in the United States. As a precautionary measure, he also froze Kuwaiti assets.

Reminded Friday that economic sanctions have had little effect in resolving other trouble spots, such as Panama, Bush said, ''I didn't say they would work, but we are putting them out there, and we're going to do everything we can to see that they do work.''

The Persian Gulf crisis is certain to have economic repercussions in the United States. White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater predicted gasoline pump prices may jump in the short term by six to seven cents a gallon due to disruptions in supply.

Fitzwater said it is difficult to make long-term predictions on the impact on consumers. But he said, ''The possibility of extreme damage is great. It is a large concern. It is a growing concern.''

About half of the oil used in the United States comes from the Persian Gulf, although the Energy Department said Friday that current U.S. and worldwide supplies are high.

Compounding U.S. concerns was the disappearance of 14 American oil workers in Kuwait. The administration said it could not confirm reports they had been seen with Iraqi forces, but pressed Baghdad for answers.

Bush said, ''We have no reports of Americans being held against their will '' but, ''that is a matter of importance to us.''

On the second day of Iraq's occuputation of Kuwait, Iraqi troops moved within five to 10 miles of the border of Saudi Arabia.

''We don't know what their intentions or motives are,'' Fitzwater said. ''But clearly the actions of Iraq, at this point, indicate a ruthlessness and disregard for international law that must make us concerned about all the countries in the region and their security.''

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - The jury in the trial of Mayor Marion Barry completed its first full day of deliberations Friday and planned to meet again Saturday in an effort to reach a verdict on 14 cocaine and perjury counts.

The jurors deliberated 6 1/2 hours Friday after getting final instructions and meeting for about 40 minutes Thursday afternoon.

The panel of nine women and three men, sequestered since June 18, opted to deliberate for four more hours on Saturday rather than take the weekend off, said U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson.

The identities of the jurors - 10 blacks and two whites - were revealed Thursday from a pool of 18 jurors and alternates who sat through more than six weeks of testimony.

Barry spent Friday afternoon at Catholic University with high school students from across the city who serve as representatives of the Marion Barry Youth Leadership Institute.

''I feel fantastic,'' said Barry, who refused to comment further on the case.

Jurors sent a note to Jackson late Friday asking to review an exhibit concerning government witness Doris Crenshaw, whose testimony dealt with the 12th of the 14 counts.

He also said jurors could come into the courtroom to look at a large magnetic chart on which prosecutors had detailed dates of Barry's alleged drug use with 10 government witnesses, who said during the nine-week trial that Barry used cocaine or obtained the drug in 20 homes, 15 hotels, four boats and two government offices in the District of Columbia, Atlanta, the Virgin Islands and the Bahamas, dating to 1983.

Barry, 54, is charged with three felony counts of perjury, 10 misdemeanor counts of cocaine possession and a single misdemeanor count of conspiracy to possess cocaine. If convicted of all counts, he could be sentenced to a maximum 26 years in prison and fined $1.85 million.

Defense attorney R. Kenneth Mundy said he believed jurors would be relocated after a federal drug sting operation Thursday night went awry in the suburban Maryland parking lot of the hotel where the jurors secretly had been sequestered.

Law enforcement officials, using helicopters and police on the ground, searched around the hotel for three hours Thursday night and Friday before calling off the search.

The target of the sting, a man wanted in a drug case, was not captured.

Peter Gruden, a special agent with the Drug Enforcement Administration, said the location of the sting was ''purely coincidental.''

Jackson said he had been assured jurors were ''oblivious'' to the activities, but Mundy said he feared it could have prejudiced the jury.

One of the counts against Barry stemmed from a Jan. 18 FBI drug sting at a Washington hotel.

NEW YORK (AUG. 3) UPI - The Dow Jones industrials averted disaster Friday but still fell sharply to cap a volatile week of trading, with the lion's share of the losses coming in the final two days after Iraq invaded Kuwait.

The Dow industrial average plunged 54.95 Friday to close at 2809.65, losing 88.86 points, or 3.1 percent, on the week.

It was the second largest weekly loss this year. Similarly, the Dow's intraday plummet of more than 100 points Friday marked the second time this had happened since last October's ''mini-crash.''

Of the broad market indexes, Standard & Poor's 500-stock index lost 8.58 to end the week at 344.86 and the New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 4.51 to close the week at 188.82.

Declines pounded advances 1,389-595 among the 2,183 issues traded this week. Big Board volume totaled 1,042,535,030 shares, compared with 858,623,940 a week earlier and 912,113,600 shares a year ago.

Stocks closed mixed Monday and Tuesday and slightly lower Wednesday. The finaltwo days, however, saw prices plunge in the heaviest trading since the aftermath October after news broke that Iraq's troops invaded Kuwait before dawn Thursday.

Baghdad seized control of its smaller neighbor hours after talks between the two Persian Gulf nations collapsed over Iraq's oil and territorial claims.

The news sent prices for oil, the dollar and gold - a traditional safe haven for money - surging. But Treasury bonds and stocks tumbled because of the inflationary implications of higher oil prices.

The Dow seemed headed for a debacle at mid-afternoon Friday but managed to claw its way back from a loss of more than 123 points at 2 p.m. to close down 55 points. But the average ended the week at its lowest point since May 11, when it stood at 2801.58.

The average turned sharply downward amid rumors that Iraqi troops in Kuwait were within miles of the Saudi border, but prices rebounded when Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze said Baghdad had assured Moscow it would pull out the Iraqi troops ''very shortly.''

The Dow's plunge triggered a new NYSE ''circuit-breaker'' that went into effect Tuesday. It requires traders to refrain from using computerized program selling that would destabilize the market when the Dow falls 50 points or more.

Analysts also blamed stocks' weakness on news released Friday morning that the U.S. civilian jobless rate jumped to 5.5 percent in July from 5.2 percent in June - the worst showing in two years. The number of non-farm jobs plummeted.

Some analysts, after examining the data, said the economy may be on the verge of falling into a recession.

''The real fear is that we'll be caught between higher oil prices and a slowing economy,'' said Tom Gallagher, managing director in charge of capital commitment at Oppenheimer & Co.

The invasion of Kuwait ''could have serious implications for oil prices. You just can't tell. That's the scary part about it. He's like a current day Hitler,'' said Gallagher, referring to Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein.

Gallagher said that for now, at least, it seems the bears have won: ''It's hard to make a case for a bull market when you have to be concerned about oil, the economy and a business slowdown.''

Other analysts agreed the market has plenty to worry about.

''If you're trying to think of a hard combination for the market to handle high inflation and interest rates on the one hand and a slow economy and earnings on the other are about as good a one-two punch as you could imagine,'' said Hugh Johnson, chief economist at First Albany Corp. in Albany, N.Y.

Johnson said the anemic job data mean that weakness in the economy and incorporate earnings that characterized the second quarter has ''moved into the third quarter.

''It means the rise in oil prices, the troubling rate of inflation and high long-term interest rates are going to persist into August and September. We can expect a high producer price and consumer price index for both of those months.''

Johnson did not downplay the events in the Mideast, however, saying that they obviously overshadowed even the dramatic economic news released Friday.

On the trading floor this week, Chevron was the most active issue, up 1 1/2 to 78 3/4 as oil stocks rallied on the sharp rise in oil prices.

Wal-Mart Stores followed, off 1 1/4 to 30 3/8. Exxon was third, rallying 3 7/8 to 53 1/8.

Among the other blue chips, AT&T was off 1/4 to 36, IBM tumbled 3 1/4 to 108 1/8, Texaco jumped 3 1/8 to 64 5/8 and Boeing sank 5 1/4 to 54.

On the American Stock Exchange, the Amex Market Value index fell 8.86 to close Friday at 346.63. Declines led advances 633-232 among the 1,013 issues traded.

Amex volume totaled 80,982,455 shares, compared with 68,855,845 traded a week earlier and 66,827,135 traded in the same week a year ago.

Echo Bay Mines led the Amex actives, up 3/4 to 13 5/8.

25.13 to end the week at 417.46.

MILWAUKEE (AUG. 3) UPI - A jury Friday awarded Philadelphia Phillies infielder Randy Ready and his family $24.7 million, ruling a physician prescribed diet pills that caused the player's wife to have a disabling heart attack.

The ruling in the eight-week trial involving the former Milwaukee Brewer is believed to be the largest personal injury award in Wisconsin history.

Ready's attorney, Dean Laing, said the largest judgment previously was $16.9 million regarding personal injury and $9.9 million in medical malpractice.

The lawsuit against Vincenta Yap of Milwaukee alleged that Dorene Ready, now 27, in 1986 sought help in losing weight from the doctor, who prescribed ionamin, an appetite suppressant. She later suffered a heart attack and now is a spastic quadriplegic with permanent brain damage.

''The money will really be able to help Dorene,'' Laing said. ''They want to give her therapy. She's at a point in her life where she needs this.''

Yap's attorney, Sam Lieb, declined comment and didn't say whether an appeal would be filed. In addition to Yap, the defendants were St. Paul Fire & Casualty Insurance Co., and Wisconsin Patients Corp. Fund.

Laing said Yap still was practicing in Milwaukee, but would be reviewed by the Medical Examining Board. He said the review might not take place ''for a couple years'' and he said he doubted an appeal would be filed.

Yap could not be reached for comment. Ready, who played for the Brewers in 1986, was not immediately available for comment. Dorene Ready was in Milwaukee for the trial, but returned to a nursing home in Del Mar, Calif. Friday.

The jury, which heard eight weeks of testimony in the trial that began June 1, awarded the Readys $19.48 million for medical costs; $4.26 million to Randy Ready for loss of companionship and child care; and $1 million to the couple's three boys.

The jury chose not to award punitive damages.

The Readys received a settlement in a similar case in January against a former Wauwatosa pharmacist over the distribution of the diet pills. They received $160,000 from R. James Bohn, who pleaded guilty earlier in January to unrelated charges involving prescription drugs. Bohn has surrendered his pharmacist's license.

(AUG. 3) UPI - The Pentagon says President Bush is reviewing U-S military options amid growing concern that Iraqi troops will invade Saudi Arabia. Possible U-S responses include tactical air strikes in Kuwait, bombing runs in Iraq or blockading Iraqi oil exports in the Persian Gulf. On Capitol Hill, House Armed Services Committee Chairman Les Aspin... a Wisconsin Democrat... urged Bush to- in his words- ''draw a line'' in the sand and warn Iraq that an attack against Saudi Arabia ''means war'' with the United States.

The U-S Customs Service today followed through on presidential orders by confiscating Iraqi oil and other imports. A shipment of 312-thousand gallons of Iraqi oil bound for Corpus Christi, Texas, was seized yesterday in the first few hours after Bush ordered the embargo. A customs official says the office is under strict orders to make NO exceptions.

The Iraqi raid has triggered economic as well as political shockwaves around the globe. U-S oil prices jumped up as much as 14 cents a gallon as station operators strapped with skyrocketing wholesale costs passed the buck to motorists. The triple A Motor Club is warning against panic buying amid speculation that prices could climb higher yet.

(AUG. 3) UPI - Connecticut Senator Joseph Lieberman, a Democrat, says there's evidence that the U-S oil companies are engaging in profiteering. Lieberman wants a presidential task force to monitor whether the companies are using the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait as an excuse to raise gas prices. He says that less than 24 hours after the invasion there were troubling signs of the oil industry ''invading the pockets of consumers.''

A report based on a four-month investigation into New York-based Covenant House says that if the charity group's founder had NOT resigned last February, the board of directors would have been required to fire him. The report says the Reverend Bruce Ritter engaged in sexual misconduct with young men living at the charity's shelters for the last 20 years. The probe was ordered by Covenant House's board.

A Canadian government representative says officials are close to a preliminary agreement in their standoff with Mohawk Indians at two reserves in Quebec. The representative says an agreement that would pave the way for talks aimed at ending the lengthy armed standoff may be announced soon. Both sides in the dispute had set conditions to be met before any talks began.

(AUG. 3) UPI - Iraqi invasion forces in Kuwait approached the border with Saudi Arabia Friday and reportedly secured Kuwait's vital oil-shipping facilities, but Iraq sought to dampen fears of further military action by claiming it will begin pulling troops from the conquered Persian Gulf emirate by Sunday.

Iraq also indicated it would ensure the new regime it installed in Kuwait would remain in place and warned other countries not to interfere.

Egypt's semi-official Middle East News Agency, in a dispatch from Baghdad, quoted a spokesman from Iraq's ruling Revolutionary Command Council as saying ''the Iraqi troops would start withdrawing from Kuwait as of Sunday in accordance'' with an unspecified timetable.

''We warn against the intervention in the affairs of either Iraq or Kuwait. Any group, no matter how big or small it is, would be firmly confronted,'' the spokesman said. ''The relationship between Iraq and Kuwait in the future will be determined only by the people of Iraq and Kuwait.''

The official did not directly mention an Iraqi-backed government Baghdad claimed it was helping install in Kuwait.

The White House said it would ''wait and see'' if Iraq would actually follow through with the withdrawal.

''There are still many questions,'' White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said. ''If there are strings, we need to see what they are.''

Asked about reports that Baghdad may leave behind an Iraqi-backed government, Fitzwater said, ''We want an immediate and unconditional withdrawal.''

Earlier, Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze told reporters in Moscow Iraq had assured the Kremlin that it would pull out the troops ''very shortly.''

U.S. officials said 14 American oil company employees were missing from their posts near the Kuwaiti-Iraqi border and were believed to be under Iraqi control.

In Washington, Iraq's ambassador to the United States, Mohamed al-Mashat, denied allegations that Iraqi troops were massing to attack Saudi Arabia or that his country held any of the missing Americans.

The Arab world remained divided over Iraq's action, but the United States and the Soviet Union issued an unprecedented joint condemnation after the invasion, and called on all nations to stop arms shipments to Baghdad.

''The Soviet Union and the United States reiterate our call for the immediate Iraqi withdrawal from Kuwait,'' said a statement released by Shevardnadze and Secretary of State James Baker, who cut short a visit to Mongolia to travel to Moscow.

King Hussein of Jordan met with Saddam in Baghdad and said the Iraqi strongman agreed to a mini-summit Sunday with him, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, the deposed emir of Kuwait and Saudi Arabian King Fahd bin Abdul Aziz.

Hussein said he hoped the meeting would lead to an Arab solution to the crisis without outside interference. ''I believe that it would be terribly wrong and the results could be devastating for them (the United States) if they intervene,'' he said.

World leaders imposed various retaliatory economic measures to censure Saddam's action, which caused panic-buying of oil, sent U.S. dollars and precious metals soaring and caused precipitous drops on stock exchanges. The price of crude oil surged above $25 a barrel, the level oil-dependent Iraq had sought in diplomatic skirmishes with Kuwait and other Arab countries before the invasion.

The United States redeployed eight warships, including an aircraft carrier from the Indian Ocean to reinforce seven vessels in the Persian Gulf. President Bush said Friday: ''All options are open.''

A NATO source in the Belgian capital said: ''The United States informed its allies it is considering contingency plans, contingency actions, in the event Iraq expands the hostilities beyond Kuwait.''

The State Department said it believes Iraq's troops are within 5 to 10 miles of Kuwait's border with Saudi Arabia. British and U.S. oil sources also reported the Iraqi invasion force had advanced toward the Saudi border.

A Western diplomat in Cairo reported that Baghdad was also mustering a force of an unspecified size along its own border with Saudi Arabia.

The superior Iraqi invasion force swept aside Kuwait's outgunned 20,000-strong military, and on Friday moved beyond Kuwait city to secure ports and oil-shipping facilities. Initial casualty reports from Kuwaiti diplomats indicated about 500 fatalities, among them the emir's brother.

Egypt's Middle Eastern News Agency said there was some resistance Friday morning by forces loyal to Kuwaiti Emir Sheikh Jaber al Ahmad al Sabah, who has fled to Saudi Arabia. It said intense fighting had occured around Kuwait city's Shuwair district and the Defense Ministry in the Ahmadi area.

Explosions were reported near barracks on the city's outskirts, but reports indicated a one-way barrage of fire from Iraqis equipped with armor and backed by air strikes.

The news agency and diplomats based in Cairo reported combat at the two key oil tanker ports of El Shwaikh and El Ahmatty, which apparently had fallen into Iraqi hands.

Egyptian Foreign Ministry sources said Iraq was massing troops at el Ahmadi, a Persian Gulf port that is about 50 miles from the border of a neutral oil-extraction zone administered by Kuwait and Saudi Arabia.

Off the battlefield, Iraq faced mounting diplomatic opposition.

Fourteen of the Arab League's 22 member nations meeting in Cairo condemned Iraq's aggression against Kuwait and called for an immediate withdrawl of Baghdad's invasion force, officials said.

Hundreds of Kuwaitis had gathered outside the site of the Arab League meeting in Cairo. They cheered and chanted ''Death to Saddam'' when they heard of the statement issued after more than four hours of talks.

The crisis rendered open the underlying divisions of the Arab world.

Earlier Friday, Egypt - Iraq's most powerful ally in the region - broke its silence and issued a call for an immediate Iraqi pullout.

In addition to Egypt, Algeria, Morocco and Lebanon have condemned the invasion, but Iraq has been openly supported by Libya, Jordan and Yemen, and privately backed by Sudan and the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Western nations sought a collective effort to ban trade with Iraq and bring punitive sanctions against the Middle East's greatest military power. A U.S. package proposes forbidding all exports to Iraq except medical supplies, and banning Iraqi oil.

Japan, Italy and West Germany joined Britain, France and the United States in freezing the offshore Kuwaiti assets to protect them from Iraq.

Bush said that if Iraqi troops drive through conquered Kuwait into Saudi Arabia, ''I would be inclined to help in any way we possibly can. It's that serious.''

Saudi Arabia is the major Middle East exporter of oil to the United States and is on tiny Kuwait's southern border along the Persian Gulf.

A State Department spokesman said 14 Americans - employees of American oil companies in fields near the Iraqi-Kuwaiti border - were known to be missing and believed to be in the custody of Iraqi troops.

Bush has said if Americans were rounded up by Iraqi forces, ''it would affect the United States in a dramatic way. I view as a fundamental responsibility of my presidency protecting American citizens.''

Two of the missing Americans were reported as Charles Amos, 59, whose family is in Harmony, Texas, and Rainard Walterscheid, 52, of Jacksboro, Texas. Both men worked for Santa Fe International Corp.'s Alhambra, Calif. subsidiary.

Walterscheid's daughter, Paula Czap, of Lawton, Okla., said her father ''was talking on the phone to an official from Santa Fe Drilling Co. when he looked up and said, 'The soldiers are here.' Then the line went dead.''

Santa Fe Drilling Co. officials calling back finally reached an Iraqi soldier who ''said they were putting them in a car and taking them away.''

Amos's son, David, said in interviews that witnesses saw the workers ''being led by Iraqi troops'' across the border, and said, ''At that time, they didn't appear to have been abused or any real force used to force them across.''

Telephone links to Kuwait city were severed overnight Thursday and Iraqi occupation forces closed the nation's news service, stopped newspaper deliveries and took over state-run radio and television stations.

At least two radio stations remained in the hands of Kuwaitis, who broadcast clandestine messages calling on all patriots to resist and asked how the rest of the Arab world could refuse their appeals for assistance.

Baghdad Radio said the Iraq-backed provisional government of Kuwait had seized the assets of Kuwait's royal family, which it accused of ''plundering'' the wealth of the people.

In Damascus, Syria, Kuwaiti Ambassador Abdel Aziz al Jassem said a government-in-exile had been created that would have its Foreign Ministry inside the Kuwaiti Embassy in Riyadh.

Kuwait's ambassador to the United Nations, Mohammad Abulhasan, said, ''There is only one government for Kuwait,'' referring to the emir's rule from outside the country.

Iraq's dispute with Kuwait began with Saddam's demands that the emirate reduce its production of crude oil to allow higher oil prices, which Iraq requires to rebuild an economy left cash-strapped after an eight-year war with Iran.

He then demanded $2.4 billion in compensation for oil he claimed Kuwait stole from a disputed border reserve.

Kuwait has considerable oil reserves and extensive facilities to ship the commodity through the Persian Gulf. Compared to Saudi Arabia's 7.5 million barrels a day production capacity, a combined Iraq-Kuwaiti production would reach an estimated 5.4 million barrels.

Iraq moves its oil through overland pipes across Saudi Arabia and Turkey, and has not been able to revive its gulf port at Basra because Iran is refusing to redredge a vital waterway until a formal cease-fire is signed.

The United States and Saudi Arabia have had close ties for more than a half-century and U.S. officials have cultivated relations with the Saudis by supplying advanced military equipment, such as AWACS reconnaissance planes.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 3) UPI - The Treasury Department Friday night lifted a ban on Iraqi oil already bound for the United States but said other shipments from the renegade state would be seized by the U.S. Customs Service.

The action also cleared the way for Kuwaiti oil already on the high seas to be imported, but appeared to provide a way for the government to block oil Iraq may attempt to export from Kuwaiti fields seized in the military strike.

The department's decision follows the seizure Thursday of 312,000 barrels of Iraqi crude oil from the Liberian-registered Hellespont Dignity by customs agents in Corpus Christi, Texas.

Federal authorities had also planned to board three ships waiting to enter the Port of Houston believed to be carrying Iraqi oil.

''That (oil) will now be permitted to be offloaded,'' said Cheryl Crispen, a Treasury Department spokeswoman.

Earlier Friday, the Customs Service said the trade embargo, ordered by President Bush in the hours after the invasion, applied to all Iraqi oil, including that already under contract and bound for the United States.

''No exception will be made,'' the agency said in a terse statement.

But the Treasury Department later announced Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil loaded before 5 a.m. EDT Thursday - when the embargo took effect - and ''intended for ultimate delivery to the United States'' can be imported before Oct. 1 at 11:59 a.m. EDT. The same applies for oil for which a formal ''bill of lading'' was applied for prior to the start of hostilities.

The Treasury Department also said that ''any balance not yet paid to Iraq or Kuwait for (these shipments of oil) must be paid into a blocked account in the United States.''

Iraq is the sixth largest supplier of oil to the United States, according to Energy Department statistics.

In the first five months of the year, it provided 8 percent of all oil imports. In 1989, it provided 6 percent of oil imports, or about 450,000 barrels per day, the Energy Department said.

The government said the United States currently has adequate supplies of oil and petroleum products and that inventories are high worldwide.

After Bush established the trade embargo and froze Iraqi assets, the Customs Service said ''ordered that inspectors seize all imports and allow no entry of goods or services of Iraqi origin, including crude and refined petroleum products.''

The Hellespont Dignity ''happened to be in port with the oil when the crisis hit,'' Coast Guard Capt. Anthony Alejandro said in Corpus Christi. ''Since this vessel's oil originated in Iraq, customs made the decision ... to just let them transfer the cargo ashore.''

The government also said that all Iraqi, as well as Kuwaiti, ships and cargo are nonetheless subject to inspection.

''If oil comes in from Kuwait we want to make sure its from Kuwait and not Iraq,'' said Edward Kittredge, a spokesman for the Customs Service. ''We want to make sure Iraq is not putting its oil on Kuwaiti ships.''

In retaliation for Bush's order, Iraq stopped interest payments on billions of dollars in U.S. government loans to protest the ''unjust decision,'' its acting finance minister, Mohammed Mehdi Saleh, said Thursday in Baghdad.

The Customs Service also said it instructed its field offices nationwide to block U.S. exports to Iraq, with the exception of emergency relief supplies, medical supplies and published materials.

In addition to penalizing Iraq, Bush's order froze all Kuwaiti government assets in the United States to prevent Iraq from gaining control. Other nations, including Britain, France and Japan, have taken similar steps.

NEW YORK (AUG. 3) UPI - Oil price increases resulting from Iraq's invasion of Kuwait could appreciably boost the U.S. inflation rate, slow economic growth even further and handicap the Federal Reserve in its effort to keep the country out of a full-blown recession, economists said Friday.

They said the full economic impact will depend, though, on how high the price of oil rises as a result of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's rampage. That, in turn, depends on how soon the crisis is defused and how oil output is affected.

In other words, all bets are off.

''It certainly throws everything into a cocked hat, doesn't it?'' said Jerry Jordan, chief economist for Los Angeles-based First Interstate Bank.

''Before, I would have said with conviction (that) inflation, interest rates will be lower in 1991 than in 1990, with unemployment moving down,'' said Jordan. ''This event could screw that up.''

Oil prices had settled late Friday at around $24.60 a barrel, up from about $20 a barrel before the Kuwait invasion.

But Iraq's new role as the policeman ready to enforce price hikes dictated by the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries raised the specter of an oil shock like those seen in 1973-74 and 1979. The first followed the Arab-Israeli war of 1973, the second the shah of Iran's overthrow.

In 1974, oil prices quadrupled to $12 a barrel. In 1979, they doubled to $36 a barrel. Jordan said the first oil shock added about 4 points to the inflation rate, driving it up to 12 percent.

''We cannot at this time rule out that we're in the beginning of another politically initiated oil shock, a supply disruption,'' said Jordan. The United States is better prepared today, having built up a strategic oil reserve, but a period of price instability could still result.

''An oil shock,'' Jordan said, ''gives us the worst of all worlds - both higher inflation and higher unemployment than we would have had.''

Some economists tried to quantify the increased inflation that could result.

Senior economist Michael Englund of financial researchers MMS International said a $23-a-barrel oil price would mean a 0.7 percent inflation rise in August and an increase at nearly that rate in September, producing a year-end rate of 5.8 percent.

Englund said he and his colleagues had expected inflation to come in at just above 5 percent for 1990, assuming that oil prices would end up a little above $20 a barrel, so a $3 increase would translate into 1/2 percentage point more inflation.

Taking a worse-case scenario, Englund said that if Iraq managed to push oil prices up to $30 a barrel U.S. inflation could top 6 percent.

He said it was harder to estimate how the economy's growth could be affected.

''We would expect the economy would be hurt by higher energy prices,'' he said. But this could also spark a resurgence of activity in the oil-dependent states of Texas, Louisiana and Alaska, Englund said.

Economist Roger Brinner of DRI/McGraw-Hill in Lexington, Mass., calculated a slightly different inflation response.

''All told, you might get another 0.5 percent inflation out of a $2 (a barrel) increase,'' Brinner said. ''Right now, you're for $5 - if it doesn't settle down, that's the burden the economy will have to bear.''

But Brinner minimized the effects of costlier oil on a soft economy in which the jobless rate rose in July - well before Saddam started rattling his saber - to a national rate of 5.5 percent, against June's 5.2 percent.

''Right now, there's a kind of hysteria prevailing,'' he said, noting the main damage would be a loss of purchasing power due to higher energy costs. Thiscould take 1/4 percentage point off the national growth rate, according to Brinner.

''There is no need for panic to set in over a $5 increment per barrel for oil,'' Brinner said. ''This is the equivalent of a 12 cent (a gallon) gasoline tax.''

But the Iraqi threat could condition consumer and business attitudes and sharply curtail their spending and investment.

If the situation deteriorated and there was a quantum leap in oil prices, the 1970s oil-shock scenario could be repeated, Jordan said.

Energy-intensive basic industries and transportation would be affected most. ''Boeing gets hit, McDonnell-Douglas gets hit, all the airlines, recreation, travel, tourism - they all get hit,'' Jordan said.

But, once again, the final impact would depend on how high oil prices go. Escalation to $30 a barrel ''could knock us negative,'' Jordan said, meaning that the gross national product would start contracting rather than expanding.

Higher oil costs would exacerbate the U.S. trade deficit. ''We import more than half our oil,'' Jordan said, ''so this means we have to export more bushels of wheat to pay for the same amount of oil.''

They would also make things trickier for Federal Reserve Chairman Alan Greenspan, who has been trying to reconcile lower interest rates for economic growth with persistent inflation.

''If the Fed would otherwise have been inclined to ease (credit policy), I think that they'll (now) be in a go-slow, steady-as-you-go mode - no sudden moves, but err on the side of tightness'' to avoid unleashing inflation, Jordan said.

David Hale, chief economist of Kemper Financial Services in Chicago, was of a slightly different opinion. ''My impression of the Fed is that there was a bias toward ease before the Kuwait events,'' he said. ''The bias is still there, but there is a cloud because of inflation.''

(AUG. 3) UPI - Iraq says it will begin withdrawing troops from Kuwait on Sunday. But in the meantime, Iraqi troops are approaching the border of an increasingly nervous Saudi Arabia. Iraq's U-S ambassador denies allegations that the Iraqi troops are massing for an attack on the Saudis. He also denies charges that 14 U-S oil workers have been taken prisoner in Kuwait.

The United States is taking its battle against Iraq to the United Nations. U-S Ambassador Thomas Pickering asks that the world body pass what he calls ''all-encompassing sanctions'' against the Iraqis. That would include a trade embargo and and a freeze on military shipments. President Bush has already moved to freeze all Iraqi assets in the United States and to ban all Iraqi imports.

White House and congressional negotiators need to settle their differences to avoid a veto battle over a civil rights bill that cleared the House today. The chamber's version would reverse a series of Supreme Court rulings that narrowed job protections for minorities. The Senate approved a similar measure two weeks ago. The White House opposes the legislation on grounds it contains quotas.

The Senate today voted to reduce U-S military forces stationed in Europe, but to limit those reductions until arms talks clear the way for deeper cuts. The Senate's 1991 defense budget now calls for 50-thousand troops to return home from Europe. The body voted 59-40 to reject an amendment that would have called for a cut of 80-thousand troops.

Government authorities say they're rushing emergency aid to Port-of-Spain to relieve serious food and supply shortages. Texas health officials say they plan on re-opening Galveston Bay this weekend, more than one week after the bay was closed because of a 500-thousand gallon oil spill. (AUG. 4) UPI - The American Bowl series which sends NFL teams to Europe and Asia often has been viewed as a distraction by coaches and players. But this year, the Los Angeles Raiders say they are looking forward to their New Orleans Saints matchup at Britain's Wembley Stadium.

''Its nice. We've had a great time out here,'' Raiders defensive tackle Bob Golic said. ''It's a great chance to break the monotony of training camp day after day.

''We have an opportunity to come out here and work against somebody besides our friends. You start feeling guilty slapping your buddy in the head all the time.''

Raiders Coach Art Shell said he looks upon the game as ''a positive.''

''It an extra game for us,'' Shell said. ''If you check the record of the teams which have played these extra games they have gone on to do well.''

Six of the previous eight teams that have played exhibition games in London have gone on to make the playoffs. The only exceptions have been the 1986 Dallas Cowboys and the 1988 Miami Dolphins.

A near sellout 75,000 crowd is expected Sunday for the game, which will be shown on British television and beamed back to the U.S. by NBC.

At Canton, Ohio, Tom Landry and six players will be inducted Saturday into the Football Hall of Fame.

Landry, who guided the Dallas Cowboys to 20 straight winning seasons and two Superbowl victories, will become only only the fifth modern-era coach to be enshrined into the Hall of Fame.

Landry introduced the ''flex'' defense, multiple offenses, reintroduced the shotgun and spread offense, and helped perfect situation substitutions. Until last year the only coach the Cowboys ever had, Landry won 270 games, more than any other coach except for George Halas and Don Shula.

''When I developed the flex defense (as an assistant with the New York Giants), it was Paul Brown's offense in Cleveland that I was trying to stop,'' Landry said. ''By the time I took over the Cowboys (in 1960), the 4-3 defense was pretty well entrenched. I knew the way to beat it was with multiple sets and motion.''

Bob Griese, Jack Lambert, Franco Harris, Bob St. Clair, Buck Buchanan, and Ted Hendricks will join Landry for induction honors. The Chicago Bears and Cleveland Browns will play in the Hall of Fame game in Fawcett Stadium following the ceremonies, which are scheduled to begin at 10 a.m EDT.

At Tampa, Fla., Buccaneers rookie linebacker Keith McCants returned to practice Friday after nursing a knee injury and plans to participate in a controlled scrimmage Saturday against the Miami Dolphins.

''My knee feels real good,'' said McCants, a 6-foot-3, 255-pounder from Alabama.''I have to catchup now on the physical part. I'm learning the mental parts of my assignments.''

At Kirtland, Ohio, Brian Holloway, a three-time Pro Bowl offensive lineman with the New England Patriots who retired two years ago, is talking to the Cleveland Browns about making a comeback at the age of 31.

''He's still only 31 years old and he was a great player at one time,'' Browns General Manager Ernie Accorsi said, ''so we decided to give him a look.''

Holloway, who was vice president of the NFL Players Association, was traded by the Patriots to the Los Angeles Raiders in 1987 one day after speaking out against Patriots' management on national television.

At Wilmington, Ohio, the Cincinnati Bengals have a glut of linebackers despite losing long-time starter Reggie Williams to retirement.

The list includes Carl Zander and Joe Kelly, 1989 starters on the inside; first-round draft pick James Francis of Baylor and third rounder Leon White from Miami; Leo Barker, Kevin Walker, Chris Chenault, Craig Ogletree Dan Murry and Ed Brady.

At Austin, Texas, third-round draft pick Jimmie Jones ended his 15-day holdout when the defensive tackle from Miami signed a three-year contract with the Dallas Cowboys.

(AUG. 3) UPI - Iraq is mopping up after its takeover of Kuwait while trying to ease the fears of an increasingly anxious Saudi Arabia. Iraqi troops are reported to be in control of Kuwait's oil-shipping facilities. But as the troops neared the Saudi border, Iraq also issued claims that it will begin withdrawing the troops Sunday. The White House repeated its demand for an immediate withdrawal and reacted with skepticism to the Iraqi promise of a withdrawal from Kuwait.

President Bush appeared grim after meeting with national security advisers today. He said any Iraqi moves into Saudi Arabia could bring the United States directly into the fray. Bush said he would be- in his words- ''inclined to help in any way we possibly can'' to stem additional Iraqi aggression.

The top leaders of West and East Germany say their decision today to move up German unification was made in part to offset growing concern about the trouble-plagued East German economy. East German Prime Minister de Maiziere and West German Chancellor Kohl say they hope the earlier October 14th all-German elections will improve employment and productivity in the East.

(AUG. 3) UPI - 21 survivors of the Greek cargo ship the S-S Corazon arrived in Portland, Maine, today. They were aboard a Soviet merchant vessel that rescued them three days ago after Hurricane Bertha forced them to abandon their ship in the Atlantic. A new satellite monitoring system is helping the Coast Guard crack down on illegal fishing. Britain's opposition Labor Party seems to be gaining ground against the ruling conservative government of Prime Minister Thatcher. Pittsburgh Mayor Sophie Masloff has vetoed legislation to ban cigarette vending machines from public places. The bill is an attempt to keep cigarettes out of the hands of children, but Masloff says it would create more problems than it would solve. The ban faced a legal battle from tobacco companies, vending companies and retailers. In place of the ban, Masloff suggested such machines be re-rigged to accept tokens only adults can buy.

(AUG. 3) UPI - Iraq today warned foreign governments considering military action they risk retaliation if they doN'T mind their own business. Egypt's semi-official Middle East news agency quoted an Iraqi spokesman as saying any military moves would be- in his words- ''firmly confronted.'' The spokesman also said Iraq plans to take extra precautions to make sure the provisional government it is helping to install in Kuwait remains in place.

Washington softened its stance on the Iraqi economic embargo today by announcing it would lift a ban of Iraqi oil that is already en route to the United States. The action clears the way for oil already on the high seas to be imported and allows 312-thousand gallons of Iraqi oil seized yesterday by customs agents in Texas to be offloaded. The Treasury Department says Iraq WON'T be paid for the oil until Baghdad withdraws its troops from Kuwait.

House and Senate negotiators reached agreement today on legislation calling for chloro-fluorocarbons and other ozone-destroying chemicals to be phased out. BAGHDAD, (AUG 4) - Iraq announced Saturday that the provisional government installed in Kuwait following Thursday's invasion was headed by Colonel Ala'a Hussein Ali.

The announcement was made by the official INA news agency in a dispatch dated from Kuwait.

Col. Ali was named commander-in-chief of Kuwait's armed forces, minister of defense and acting interior minister, the agency said.

The new government includes eight other members, all military figures.

The new provisional government, which Iraq said had been installed Thursday, anounced the overthrow of Kuwait's ruling Al Sabah family headed by Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmad al-Sabah, which it denounced and accused of corruption and mismanagement.

Iraqi troops invaded Kuwait at dawn Thursday after the collapse of Iraqi-Kuwaiti talks in Saudi Arabia on Wednesday over a bitter dispute about oil production quotas and border markings.

TEL AVIV, (AUG 4) - Iraqi military units reportedly crossed Saturday into Saudi Arabia, advancing into an oilfield in a demilitarized zone, according to Israel's army radio quoting senior Kuwaiti government officials.

Several neutral zones exist along the borders between the Arab oil producing states. The zones are very rich in oil and have long been disputed between the adjoining states.

These countries have therefore agreed to demilitarise such zones and share the petroleum profits from these areas.

By advancing into a neutral oil producing zone, Iraq was said to have for the first time violated Saudi interests.

The Egyptian news agency Mena reported from Baghdad that the Iraqi News Agency had denied reports of Iraqi troops advancing into Saudi Arabia.

BAGHDAD, (AUG 4) - Iraq on Saturday denied an Egyptian newspaper report that 120 Iraqi officers had been executed for refusing to take part in the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

An official spokesman, quoted by the Iraqi News Agency, said the report was "without foundation" and based on "dubious sources that want to harm the image of Iraq and its leader, Saddam Hussein."

The semi-official Egyptian daily Al-Ahram, citing its Baghdad correspondent, reported that the executions were carried out Friday after being ordered by a military court and approved by President Hussein.

The officers had refused to join the Iraqi invasion force on Thursday, saying nothing could justify an attack on "brother Arab countries," according to Al-Ahram.

PARIS, (AUG. 4) - Iraq's decision to conditionally withdraw its troops from Kuwait is "a good decision" which should remove the possibility of foreign intervention, Arab League Secretary General Chedli Klibi said Saturday.

Iraq announced Friday that it will begin to withdraw its forces from Kuwait beginning Sunday if there are "no threats against the security of the country or Kuwait" in the meantime, and if the Al-Sabah government is excluded from power.

The announcement by Iraq is "a good beginning which should facilitate the organisation of an Arab summit," Mr.Chedli said in an interview on Radio France Internationale.

The decision should remove "the spectre of foreign intervention" because there is "no longer any reason" for such intervention which "we have never wanted and which would have been a complication," Mr. Chedli said.

"The Iraqis are serious people," Mr. Klibi said. "If they have undertaken to evacuate Kuwait, they will do it."

Mr. Klibi said a proposed Arab mini-summit to bring Saudi Arabia, Kuwait, Iraq, Jordan and Egypt to the negotiating table Sunday in Jeddah should achieve "the evacuation of Kuwait" and a negotiated settlement "acceptable to the two parties" and "conforming to Arab League regulations."

BEIJING, (AUG 4) - China summoned Iraq's ambassador to the Foreign Affairs Ministry here Saturday and urged his country to pull its troops out of Kuwait "as early as possible without preconditions," the official New China News Agency (NCNA) said.

Vice Foreign Minister Yang Fuchang told Ambassador Mohammed Amin al-Jaff that China felt deep regret over Thursday's invasion of the tiny Gulf emirate.

"Iraq and Kuwait are two fraternal Arab countries, and disputes between them should be resolved through friendly consultations," Mr. Yang said.

"The Chinese government hopes Iraq would respond to the mediation of the Arab League and the calls of the international community, and withdraw its troops from Kuwait as early as possible without preconditions," he said.

The statement was also delivered separately to Kuwait's charge d'affaires here, Shukri Naser al-Shraim, NCNA said.

He also told Agence France-Presse that he promptly conveyed the message to the Emir of Kuwait, Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmad al-Sabah, who took refuge in Saudi Arabia when Iraqi tanks rolled into his capital.

Iraq's ambassador could not be reached for comment.

The Gulf crisis was also raised in a meeting Saturday between foreign minister Qian Qichen and his counterpart from the Seychelles, an island republic in the Indian Ocean which is pushing for a zone of peace in its region.

China is "gravely concerned" about Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and feels the conflict should be resolved through inter-Arab efforts, Mr. Qian told Danielle de Saint Jorre, the Seychelles' minister of planning and external relations.

"To rely on force is futile," NCNA quoted him as saying.

Mr. Qian also recalled that China voted for a U.N. Security Council emergency resolution Thursday that condemned Iraq's invasion and demanded the immediate withdrawal of its forces.

China, one of five permanent members of the U.N. Security Council, has diplomatic ties with Iraq and Kuwait, and established full relations with Saudi Arabia just 11 days before the Iraqi invasion.

It was also a major source of weapons for Iraq, as well as Iran, in the Gulf War of 1980-88.

ROME, (AUG. 4) - European Economic Community (EEC) officials decided here

Saturday to impose an "immediate embargo" on imports of crude oil from Iraq and Kuwait, Italian officials said.

The oil embargo was among six measures adopted by foreign ministry officials from the 12 EEC member countries in the wake of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait on Thursday, they said.

The EEC officials also decided to freeze Iraqi assets in EEC states, to ban weapons and military equipment sales to Iraq and to suspend all military, scientific and technical cooperation between the EEC and Iraq.

The EEC officials also decided to lift Iraq's preferential trade status with EEC countries.

The meeting of EEC political directors was called by Italy, which holds the EEC presidency.

In calling the meeting, Italian Foreign Minister Gianni De Michelis had said the 12 EEC countries would study concrete measures likely to apply "the strongest pressure possible" to obtain an "immediate and unconditional withdrawal by Iraq."

(AUG. 4) UPI - The White House has adopted a ''wait-and-see'' attitude'' as to whether Iraq will follow through with its promised withdrawal from Kuwait beginning Sunday. The withdrawal plan was reported Friday by Egypt's semi-official Middle East News Agency. The report came as Iraqi troops were massing near the Saudi Arabia border... although Iraq denies any plan to invade Saudi Arabia. It's also reported that Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein has agreed to meet with Arab counterparts Sunday to discuss the situation.

Environmentalists expressed pleasure Friday after congressional negotiators reached agreement on phashing out chloro-fluorocarbons and other ozone-destroying industrial chemicals. SEATTLE (AUG. 4) UPI - The Soviet Union dominated competition at the Goodwill Games Friday night, gaining a medal sweep in pairs' figure skating, ending China's stanglehold in diving and rallying to advance to the gold-medal game in volleyball.

About a hour after Sergei Lomonovski held off a late surge from China's Tan Liangde to win the 1-meter springboard in the diving pool, Ekaterina Gordeeva and Sergei Grinkov led a 1-2-3 finish in the pairs' event on the Tacoma Dome rink.

The Soviet volleyball team then completed a startling comeback over favored Cuba at Hec Edmundson Pavilion, winning the final three games after dropping the first two. That set up a Saturday final with Italy, a four-game winner over the United States.

Kurt Browning of Canada prevented another Soviet gold by winning the men's free-style figure skating. Viktor Petrenko of the Soviet Union finished second, with American Todd Eldredge third.

Later Friday, judo was to produce gold-medal winners in three classes: men's 60 and 65 kilograms and women's 56 kilograms.

Lomonovski, a 25-year-old from Moscow, took the lead after seven of 11 dives and held on. Mark Bradshaw of Columbus, Ohio, took his second bronze of the games, with Mark Lenzi of Fredericksburg, Va., finishing fourth.

Liangde had won the 3-meter event Wednesday, and countrywoman Gao Min had captured the women's 3- and 1-meter competitions. Another victory for Liangde and China seemed in store, but Lomonovski intervened.

The Soviet finished with 597 points. Liangde, who was mired in ninth place through seven dives, wound up with 578.04, followed by Bradshaw with 577.05 and Lenzi with 568.59.

''As the dives went on I gained confidence,'' Lomonovski said.

In volleyball, the Cubans appeared on their way to victory after winning the first two games, 15-12 and 15-8. But led by Yaroslav Antonov with 23 kills, the Soviets stormed back, 15-10, 15-12 and 15-10, to deal the Cubans their first loss in 20 matches this year.

Soviet Coach Vyacheslav Platonov said the turning point came ''when there appeared discipline on the floor. In the first two games it looked like ... tons of mongrel armies out there.''

The Americans evened their match with the Italians at a game apiece, but the Europeans surged to victory by winning three straight games. Italy is 4-0 in the tournament. The United States will meet Cuba for the bronze medal Saturday.

Gordeeva and Grinkov prevailed despite the fact Gordeeva fell landing a side-by-side double Axel. Natalia Mishkutenok and Artur Dmitriev finished second and Elena Bechke and Denis Petrov were third in the event.

That gave the Soviets a 152-133 medal advantage over the United States, including a 55-53 edge in golds.

While Friday featured only six gold medals, Saturday will feature 21 - the second-most hectic of the 17-day event. Six will come in the boxing ring. The games conclude Sunday.

Three of the eight Americans to advance to gold-medal boxing matches - Raul Marquez of Houston, Tim Austin of Cincinnati and Sergio Reyes of Fort Worth, Texas - are scheduled to fight Saturday, hoping to continue the Americans' success.

''I'm really happy with the U.S. team,'' said Eric Griffin, the two-time world light flyweight champion who fights Sunday. ''I knew we were coming here to really dominate the tournament. All 24 of us have put on a tremendous performance.''

In another top attraction, Cuban heavyweight Felix Savon meets Yevgeni Sudakov, one of nine Soviets to advance to the finals.

Later, Jill Trenary goes after gold in women's figure skating. The world and three-time U.S. champion skated a sizzling salsa program Thursday night to take the first-round lead over fellow Americans Nancy Kerrigan and Kristi Yamaguchi.

Also scheduled are semifinals in women's basketball and ice hockey, with American teams represented in both sports.

On the hardwood, the United States, winners of its last 39 international matches dating to the 1984 Olympics, meets Bulgaria. Two-time Olympian Teresa Edwards leads the team with 15.7 points per game.

Brazil and flashy Hortencia Oliva - who is averaging a tournament-best 30 points a game - will square off against the Soviets.

On the ice, the Americans will face undefeated Canada as the tournament moves from the Tri-Cities to the Tacoma Dome. The Soviets and Sweden meet in the other semifinal.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 4) UPI - The House passed and sent to the White House Saturday a bill imposing new restrictions on exports of timber logged on public lands, a measure aimed at saving thousands of Pacific Northwest lumber mill jobs.

The log export curbs are contained in the compromise version of a catch-all customs and trade bill worked out Monday by House and Senate negotiators.

The final version cleared the Senate Tuesday. The House approved the bill early Saturday on a voice vote, shortly before the House prepared to leave on its month-long summer recess.

President Bush is expected to sign the bill. ''We have no objection to it '' White House spokeswoman Alixe Glen said Thursday.

The key portion of the trade bill for the Northwest is a compromise section hammered out by lawmakers from Oregon and Washington that would make permanent a year-to-year ban Congress has imposed since 1973 on exports of timber logged on federal land in the West. Alaska is excluded from this provision.

It also places a new prohibition on the export of logs harvested from all state-owned lands in the West, except in Washington state, which could sell no more than 25 percent of its timber overseas.

There are no restrictions on the export of logs harvested from private lands, as some in the Northwest have advocated.

However, the bill places new limits on the practice known as substitution, in which timber companies can acquire federal logs - either directly or through a third party - to run through their lumber mills in place of private logs they sell overseas.

This practice would be phased out entirely in all Western states, except in Washington, where substitution of federal logs purchased from a third party would be capped at 50 million board feet a year.

In addition, the bill gives the president authority to suspend state log export restrictions if it conflicts with any U.S. trade agreements. The president also can lift state export limits after 1997 if he finds they no longer meet the purposes of the act or the nation's economic interests.

Proponents of the export curbs say they ultimately will save roughly 6,000 jobs in the Northwest that otherwise would be lost to foreign mills, particularly in Japan, that can outbid domestic lumber companies for American timber.

The measure has gained broad support at a time of scarce timber supplies in Oregon and Washington, a region facing sharp new logging restrictions and job losses expected to follow the recent listing of the northern spotted owl as a threatened species.

Opponents of export limits argue they will hamper free trade, cost jobs in ports and in the shipping business and decrease state trust land revenues that go to public school construction.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 4) UPI - The House passed a compromise AIDS assistance package early Saturday authorizing as much as $875 million next year to help local and state governments provide care for AIDS patients.

The bill was approved on a voice vote and sent to the Senate for final congressional action.

''This legislation is a breakthrough in AIDS treatment,'' said Rep. Nancy Pelosi, D-Calif..

Rep. Henry Waxman, D-Calif., chairman of the House Energy and Commerce subcommittee on health, said the bill ''finally brings a federal contribution to the health care needs of the thousands of Americans who are already sick and the hundreds of thousands who soon will be.''

''It's not enough to develop drugs,'' Waxman said. ''We must also make sure that they are available to people regardless of their ability to pay and we must be sure that they are available early enough in people's illness to really make a difference.''

Included in the bill is $275 million in both 1991 and 1992 for emergency grants to cities that have been hardest hit by the AIDS epidemic. An estimated 15 cities would be eligible for funds under the formula provided in the bill.

The measure also would authorize $275 million in each of the two years for grants to the states to improve health care and support services for AIDS patients.

Another $305 million would be available in 1991 for grants to states and heatlh care clinics for early intervention services, such as HIV testing, pre-test and post-test counseling, diagnostic evaluation, and for therapeutic drugs.

The final version of the bill includes a Senate provision that bars use of any funds in the bill for needle exchange programss. AIDS transmission has been linked to sexual contact, tainted blood transfusions and intravenous drug users who share needles.

Although the measure authorizes a substantial increase in funds for AIDS programs, the money will not become available unless Congress pass separate appropriation bills.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 4) UPI - Congress approved and sent to the White House Saturday a bill temporarily increasing the national debt limit to $3.195 trillion.

The House approved the bill 247-172 and the Senate passed it by voice vote.

Treasury Department officials said the government will run out of borrowing authority in mid-August, while Congress is on vacation, unless the debt ceiling is increased from its current level, $3.123 trillion.

The short-term boost of $72 billion approved by the House was estimated to be enough to carry the government through Oct. 2.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, said that Treasury Secretary Nichlas Brady informed him the Treasury Department will run out of funds Aug. 15 and ''has a bill of $21 billion in interest due.''

Without approval of the temporary extension the government could not borrow more cash to pay its bills, a development Rep. Dan Rostenkowski, D-Ill., chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said would be ''disastrous economic and political consequences.''

WASHINGTON (AUG. 4) UPI - More than a year after the Exxon Valdez disaster outraged the nation, Congress sent President Bush an oil spill prevention and cleanup bill Saturday requiring double hulls on tankers and federal intervention in major accidents.

On a 360-0 vote, the House gave final legislative approval to wide-ranging legislation that also raises the liability of spillers eight-fold and sets up $1 billion federal trust fund for emergency cleanup and victim compensation and related costs exceeding the liability limits.

The Senate earlier voted 99-0 to approve the bill, which rode through Congress on a wave of public anger generated by the Exxon Valdez and a steady drumbeat of smaller spills over the past year, ranging from New York Harbor to California to the Gulf Coast.

Rep. David Bonior, D-Mich., called the measure ''one of the toughest cleanup bills in the history of the Congress.''

Even as lawmakers voted, cleanup crews struggled to mop up a 500,000-gallon spill menacing fragile wetlands in Texas's Galveston Bay, important breeding grounds for seabirds and commercially valuable fish.

The oil industry is unhappy with several aspects of the bill - particularly the costly requirement for double hulls - but the national epidemic of oil spills gave the measure irresistible momentum.

Steve Hart, a spokesman for President Bush, said the White House had some concerns about the bill, but noted the president had asked Congress to enact oil spill legislation. He added: ''There has been no veto threat against the bill.''

Hart said Bush was ''disappointed'' Congress did not ratify an international treaty on spills. The administration said the treaty was needed to ensure foreign tankers operating in U.S. waters were held accountable for accidents. But lawmakers said the treaty set unacceptably weak liability and cleanup standards and would override federal or state laws.

Both industry officials and environmentalists predicted Bush would sign the bill.

A key section of the bill would raise the liability of spillers for cleanup costs and damage payments roughly eight times higher than the surprisingly low limits now applicable under federal law.

For example, although Exxon has voluntarily spent more than $2 billion to clean up the Alaska spill, experts estimate it would be legally liable for only $14 million under current federal law. Lawmakers said the low limits gave oil shippers little incentive to prevent spills.

The new liability limits, which range up to $350 million per incident, do not apply to accidents caused by gross negligence or criminal misconduct on the part of tanker or facility operators.

In addition, injured parties can sue for higher compensation under state laws that do not set any ceiling on spiller liability. Eighteen states have unlimited liability for oil spills.

Oil industry officials warned that states with unlimited liability laws faced a cutoff of oil shipments because few tanker operators would risk a major accident that could bankrupt them.

Where cleanup and compensation costs exceed a spiller's liability limit or emergency spill containment action by the Coast Guard is necessary, the government could tap the $1 billion federal trust fund, which is financed by a 5-cent-per-barrel tax on oil.

To assure minimal disruption to affected communities, the fund also could be used for damage payments to fishermen and others who lose their livelihood and cannot get recompense from the spiller within 60 days after an accident. The government would then sue the spiller to recoup the damage payments.

Oil spill legislation was mired down for 14 years in House-Senate disputes over whether federal liability laws should override state laws, particularly those allowing unlimited liability. The Senate sought to preserve state laws, the House to override them.

The bill was shaken loose by the wreck of supertanker Exxon Valdez on March 24, 1989, which dumped nearly 11 million gallons of crude oil into Alaska's pristine Prince William Sound. The spill blackened miles of beaches and killed tens of thousands of birds, sea otters and other animals.

Public outrage was heightened by the slow and confused cleanup response by Exxon and oil industry crews. Coast Guard officials said they could not take over the cleanup because they did not have enough money and were uncertain about their authority to intervene.

The bill would directly address that problem by giving the president responsibility for ensuring a quick and effective cleanup, either by ordering the spiller to take action or sending the Coast Guard into action. The president also would have the final say on how long cleanup operations must continue.

Another key provision of the bill requires virtually all oil tankers and barges operating in U.S. waters by the year 2015 to be equipped with double hulls, designed to provide extra protection against spills in the event of groundings or collisions.

Environmentalists contend a double hull could have prevented the Exxon Valdez fiasco, but oil industry officials argue that an additional shell would make a foundering ship take on more water and increase the risk of capsizing.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 4) UPI - Here are the key provisions of the oil spill prevention and cleanup bill approved by Congress and sent to President Bush Saturday:

Spiller Liability

The liability of spillers for cleanup costs and damages would be increased eight-fold from current limits in federal law, with dollar amounts varying by the size of tankers or the type of oil facility. For example, for oil tankers the liability limit would rise from the current $150 per gross ton to $1,200 per gross ton. This would mean the liability limit for a tanker such as the Exxon Valdez would rise from the current $14.3 million to $114 million. The liability limits would not apply where spills were caused by gross negligence or criminal misconduct, as is alleged in the Exxon Valdez disaster. In addition, spillers would be subject to unlimited liability in 18 states that place no ceiling on damage awards to injured parties filing suit in state courts. The bill also would make spillers liable for new types of damages, including loss of use of natural resources and increased costs to state and local governments for spill-related services.

Federal Pre-emption of State Liability Laws

The bill leaves intact state laws that do not place any limit on spiller liability. Some House members and the Bush administration, backed by the oil industry, sought to override those state laws, saying they created uninsurable risks for shippers. Senators refused to accept any federal pre-emption, saying states ought to have full authority to protect their shorelines and citizens' interests.

International Spill Treaties

The bill is silent on an international oil spill treaty, even though the United States has announced support for it. The Senate refused to include provisions ratifying the treaty, saying it set liability and cleanup standards that were much weaker than the new spill law being enacted by Congress. They also said it would pre-empt state laws. The Bush administration and some House members backed the treaty, saying it was needed to ensure foreign shippers operating in U.S. waters were accountable in case of a spill.

Federal Oil Spill Fund

The bill establishes a $1 billion federal trust fund that can be tapped by the Coast Guard to finance emergency cleanup operations and to pay spill victims for damages exceeding the liability limit of spillers. The government also can use the fund for immediate payments to fishermen and others who lose their livelihood but are unable to get recompense from a spiller within 90 days. The government could then sue the spiller for reimbursement. The fund is financed by a five-cent per barrel tax on oil.

Federal Cleanup Authority

The president would be required to ensure speedy and effective cleanup of spills, either by ordering the spiller to take action or sending in the Coast Guard. In the event of major accident, the president would be required to order a federal takeover of cleanup efforts.

Double Hulls

Double hulls would be required on larger oil-carrying vessels by 2010, with a few smaller vessels and those that unload at deepwater ports given until 2015. Environmentalists say double hulls could have prevented the Exxon Valdez accident and many other spills; the oil industry says double hulls could make foundering ships more likely to sink.

Cleanup Task Forces

The Coast Guard is required to maintain major oil spill cleanup task forces in Mobile, Ala., San Francisco and Elizabeth City, N.C. and establish smaller crews in each of the Coast Guard's 10 districts around the country.

Crew Fitness

The Coast Guard must review the driving records of tanker captains and others applying for merchant mariner documents or licenses. The Coast Guard can suspend, revoke or deny licenses or documents to people convicted of drunken or reckless driving in cars. The provision comes in response to revelations that the captain of the Exxon Valdez previously had been convicted twice of drunk driving.

Crew Manning

The number of hours tanker crews can work is limited to 15 hours or 36 hours in three days. Again, the restriction stems from disclosures that the crew of the Exxon Valdez had been working long hours.

Spill Contingency Planning

Tanker and oil facility operators are required to draw up contingency plans for responding to ''worst case'' spills. They also must assure adequate funding to carry it out.

Penalties

The bill raises penalties for violation of oil shipping regulations, including triple damages for shippers who fail to follow the requirements of their contingency plans.

Spill Cleanup Research

The bill authorizes $26.5 million in federal funds each year for research and development of improved spill cleanup technology.

Prince William Sound

The bill creates a Prince William Sound Oil Spill Recovery Institute to conduct research on the impact of the Exxon Valdez spill. The bill also provides funding to build a warning light on Bligh Reef, the rock upon which the Exxon Valdez ran aground.

(AUG. 4) UPI - First Oscar Azocar ruined Tom Candiotti's no-hitter, then Mel Hall ruined his night.

Azocar's single with two out in the eighth inning broke up the Cleveland knuckleballer's bid for a gem Friday night, and then Hall took reliever Doug Jones deep for a three-run homer to power the New York Yankees to a 6-4 victory over the Indians.

''I was having such a good time pitching,'' said the 32-year-old junk ball specialist. ''The knuckleball was dancing so much. It was going like crazy.''

After retiring the first two batters in the eighth, though, Candiotti ran into trouble. Steve Sax walked and moved to second when shortstop Felix Fermin booted rookie Jim Leyritz's slow roller for an error.

That brought up the Yankees' rookie outfielder.

''Azocar is a real free-swinger, which is a pretty good match-up for guys who throw knuckleballs,'' Candiotti said.

Wrong.

Azocar promptly denied Candiotti a spot in the record books by grounding a base hit up the middle, just beyond the reach of second baseman Tom Brookens.

''He had a nasty knuckler tonight,'' said Azocar, who had homered off Candiotti in last Saturday's 2-1 Yankee loss in Cleveland. ''Much better than the last time.''

''It was just a ground ball he hit in the right place,'' said Candiotti. ''He's a good hitter - he keeps his hands back real well and sprays to all fields.''

The hit sent Candiotti, 11-7, to the dugout, to watch Jones try to preserve the victory.

''Jones is an off-speed pitcher,'' Candiotti said, ''and Hall is not a good off-speed hitter, so it looked like a pretty good matchup.''

Wrong again.

Hall crushed Jones' first pitch into the upper deck in right for his 10th home run of the season.

''It was a fastball down the middle,'' Jones said. ''I didn't get it in enough. I knew Mel Hall was a first ball hitter. I was hoping to jam him.''

''I was just trying to get a hit,'' Hall said. ''The man (Candiotti) was nasty the whole contest. I was real happy to see him come out.''

All of the Yankees' runs were unearned and Candiotti allowed five of those with only one hit. He walked two and struck out seven. The loss was Candiotti's first to the Yankees since April 26, 1987.

Lee Guetterman, 7-4, pitched 3 1-3 innings, allowing two runs and four hits while fanning two.

Elsewhere in the American League: Minnesota downed Seattle 6-2 in 13 innings, Baltimore bombed Kansas City 14-1, Boston routed Detroit 14-5, Texas clobbered Toronto 9-1, Chicago topped Milwaukee 6-2 and Oakland edged California 8-6.

In the National League it was: Chicago 10, Montreal 4; Pittsburgh 11, Philadelphia 0; New York 5, St. Louis 4; San Diego 3, Cincinnati 2; Houston 3, Atlanta 0; Los Angeles 11, San Francisco 2.

Twins 6, Mariners 2, 13 innings

At Seattle, Kent Hrbek's sacrifice fly snapped a 2-2 tie and Randy Bush added a three-run homer off Mike Schooler, 1-3. Reliever Rick Aguilera, 4-3, got the win. Minnesota's Brian Harper extended his hitting streak to a major league season-high 24 games when he belted a two-run homer in the sixth inning.

Red Sox 14, Tigers 5

At Boston, Ellis Burks belted a three-run homer to highlight a seven-run first inning that knocked out Jeff Robinson, 8-9, before he retired a batter. The Red Sox's first eight batters reached safely. Detroit's Cecil Fielder hit his major league-leading 34th home run. Greg Harris, 9-4, got the win.

Orioles 14, Royals 1

At Baltimore, Cal Ripken hit two of four Baltimore homers and drove in four runs and Joe Orsulak also drove in four runs with a homer and single to help the Orioles reach .500 (53-53) for the first time since June 12.

John Mitchell was ejected in the seventh inning for brushing back Kevin Seitzer.

Rangers 9, Blue Jays 1

At Arlington, Texas, Steve Buechele's first career grand slam capped a seven-run seventh inning that was keyed by an error by Toronto third baseman Kelly Gruber on a potential double play grounder. Jamie Moyer, 1-3 won for the first time since last September and retired 21 of his final 22 batters.

White Sox 6, Brewers 2

At Milwaukee, Frank Thomas tripled home two runs with his first major league hit and Greg Hibbard, 9-5, tossed a seven-hitter to send the Brewers to their sixth straight loss. Mark Knudson dropped to 8-5 despite taking a one-hitter into the seventh.

Athletics 8, Angels 6

At Anaheim, Calif., Dave Henderson homered and collected three RBI and Mark McGwire added a solo shot while Oakland rallied for five runs in the seventh inning to overcome a 6-0 deficit. Rookie reliever Reggie Harris, 1-0, recorded his first major-league win. Dennis Eckersley notched his 34th save.

(AUG. 4) UPI - After the breaks dealt Doug Drabek during his no-hit bid Friday night, no one could blame the Pittsburgh pitcher for eyeing a place in the record books.

First, Pittsburgh second baseman Jose Lind made a sharp play to preserve Drabek's no-hitter through eight innings.

Then, one out away from becoming the eighth pitcher to throw a no-hitter this season, he faces a .188 hitter instead of a .346 hitter. The odds are in Drabek's favor, right? Not quite.

On a full count, Sil Campusano singled to right for only his 10th hit in 49 at-bats this season, depriving Drabek his day of glory.

''When I saw Chico (Lind) dive and catch it, I thought that had to be a good sign,'' Drabek said after Pittsburgh's 11-0 thrashing of Philadelphia. ''And it was for a few more outs. It was just a tremendous play.''

Pittsburgh Manager Jim Leyland said he also thought Lind's play was an omen.

''I don't usually get too caught up in things like that, but after Chico made that play, I thought he'd get it,'' Leyland said. ''It was just one of those things.

Because of the blowout, Campusano replaced Lenny Dykstra in center field in the seventh inning. With the no-hitter on the line, Campusano fought off a high and inside fastball, and lifted a single to shallow right-center.

''Campusano hit it hard. It was a clean base hit,'' Drabek said. ''I'm glad it was like that, a clean hit, not a question of whether it was a hit or error. No fielder had to feel bad and the scorer didn't have to make a tough decision. If you're going to lose it, that's the way to do it.

''I figured with the count 3-2 and with the defense helping me out and with them hitting the ball at people, I'd throw a fastball. If he walks, fine. If he hits it, I hope he hits it at somebody.''

Drabek, 14-4, had retired 26 of the first 27 Phillies he faced before Campusano's hit. Drabek got Darren Daulton to fly out to right to end his first career one-hitter. Drabek struck out five and walked one in winning his sixth straight start.

The victory was never in doubt as the Pirates pounded out 18 hits against six Philadelphia pitchers.

Andy Van Slyke was 3 for 5 with a home run and four RBI and Sid Bream went 4 for 5 with a homer and three RBI. Lind and catcher Don Slaught also had three hits apiece.

Philadelphia starter Bruce Ruffin, 6-11, gave up five runs on five hits and three walks in 1 1-3 innings. The only good news for Philadelphia on the night was it aquired two-time NL MVP Dale Murphy from Atlanta.

Elsewhere in the National League, Chicago pounded Montreal 10-4, San Diego edged Cincinnati 3-2, Houston blanked Atlanta 3-0, New York overcame St. Louis 5-4 and Los Angeles flattened San Francisco 10-2.

In the AL it was: Minnesota 6, Seattle 2, 13 innings; New York 6, Cleveland 4; Baltimore 14, Kansas City 1; Boston 14, Detroit 5; Chicago 6, Milwaukee 2; Texas 9, Toronto 1; and Oakland 8, California 6.

Cubs 10, Expos 4

At Chicago, Mike Harkey and Mark Grace each hit two-run doubles in a six-run first inning to propel Chicago. Harkey, 10-5, became the first Cubs rookie to win at least 10 games since Burt Hooton and Rick Reuschel in 1972. Mark Gardner, 6-6, served up seven hits in less than two innings to take the loss.

Padres 3, Reds 2

At Cincinnati, Jack Clark doubled home Tony Gwynn from first with one out in the ninth to lift San Diego. Clark doubled off loser Rob Dibble, 4-3, to make a winner of Greg Harris, 6-5, who pitched one inning in relief of Bruce Hurst. Craig Lefferts pitched the ninth for his 15th save.

Astros 3, Braves 0

At Houston, Mike Scott fired a three-hitter to lead Houston. Scott, 9-10, allowed only a first-inning double to Oddibe McDowell, a third-inning single by Jeff Blauser and a two-out ninth-inning double by Ron Gant. John Smoltz, 7-8 took the loss. Ken Oberkfell drove in two runs.

Mets 5, Cardinals 4

At St. Louis, Dave Magadan and Gregg Jefferies hit bloop RBI singles in a three-run ninth inning to enable New York to keep its one-game lead over Pittsburgh in the NL East with its 24th comeback victory of the season. Lee Smith, 3-3, took the loss. Julio Machado, 4-1, picked up the win and John Franco pitched the ninth for his NL-leading 24th save.

Dodgers 11, Giants 2

At San Francisco, Hubie Brooks had four hits and drove in two runs and Ramon Martinez pitched his major league-leading eighth complete game. Martinez, 14-4, won his fifth straight start. Scott Garrelts, 9-8, lasted 1 2-3 innings in his first start since coming within one out of a no-hitter.

GALVESTON, TX (AUG. 4) UPI - Authorities reopened portions of Galveston Bay to fishing Saturday, one week after a barge-ship collision dumped a half-million gallons of heavy crude oil into the environmentally sensitive waterway.

Environmentalists voiced growing concern for sensitive marshlands in the northern reaches of the bay, and some said they believed much of the oil had not evaporated and was lingering beneath the surface of the bay.

''The worst is yet to come,'' Galveston Bay Foundation spokesman Jim Grimes said. ''It's an invisible thing, unfortunately.

''We're going to have to hunt and make a lot of studies to document the damage. It's going to be a long, slow process, but the marine biologists I've heard say we are in for a long period of heavy effect from this,'' Grimes said.

Galveston Bay was closed to all types of fishing at 12:01 a.m. Thursday. Dr. Robert Bernstein of the Texas Department of Health issued an order Friday authorizing parts of the bay to be reopened at 12:01 a.m. Saturday.

The health department declared the entire bay open for taking of fin fish but maintained a ban on shellfish harvest across much of the bay.

The Coast Guard set up booms at Houston Point in the northern end of the bay, saying a shift in winds pushed some oil into breeding grounds for saltwater fish and bird nesting areas.

Environmentalists questioned why booms were set up after some oil already had reached the marshlands. Coast Guard Adm. Jim Loy defended his crews.

''Were we able to pre-deploy everything to every place, it would have gone better. This is not a magic kind of thing, it's not an error-free thing. If we missed by two hours on the placement of a boom at Houston Point, we'll take that hit,'' Loy said.

The Coast Guard said much of the oil had apparently evaporated, since large patches no longer could be spotted during flyovers of the bay and tests showed it was not on the bottom. They rejected allegations they could not account for 300,000 gallons of the oil that leaked from two damaged barges after a collision with a Greek tanker a week ago.

The Houston Ship Channel, which had been closed since the collision last Saturday afternoon, was reopened to outbound ship traffic early Friday after a crippled barge was moved out of the way.

Twenty-seven ships had been stranded at Houston docks and 43 were anchored in lower Galveston Bay or the Gulf of Mexico waiting to reach the Port of Houston.

Gov. Bill Clements said Friday that he was concerned about the economic burden the spill had imposed on Gulf Coast residents, adding he was relieved part of the bay was being reopened to fishing.

''Any spill is bad, and our hearts go out to the Texans who suffered hardships because of this accident. I am also distressed by the potential impact on our wildlife and coastal waters. That's why we are taking every step possible to protect our environment,'' said Clements, founder of Dallas oil field equipment company Sedco Inc.

His comments came after he was criticized by many environmentalists for reporting Thursday that the damage was less than expected.

''As with most disasters, one has to look beneath the surface and, in that sense, our governor is critically lacking in those skills,'' said Ted Eubanks, a spokesman for the Houston Audubon Society.

Eubanks believes much of the oil remains in the water.

''Oil can move underneath the surface, where it's not visible, and that's one of the difficulties. We have navigational specialists, engineers and government officials heading up the cleanup, where we need wildlife people that are sensitive to the ecological system heading it up. We got the wrong guy driving the train,'' Eubanks said.

He also criticized the Coast Guard for not testing the water between the surface and the bay bottom for oil.

Coast Guard Petty Officer Mark Sedwick said 11 floor samples showed no evidence of oil, adding he was uncertain if officials planned to test the water column. Oil from the spill has stained Houston Point, Redfish Island Eagle Point, the Texas City Dike and Pelican Island.

During a visit to East Beach Thursday, Eubanks said his hands became covered with oil when he ran his fingers through sand and shells.

''The long-term negative environmental effects on the lower end of the food chain, invertebrates and crustaceans, will have implications over the next several years. The web of life which includes the Galveston Bay will be damaged for a long period of time,'' said Gary Clark, president of the Houston Audubon Society.

Texas Water Commission Chairman B.J. ''Buck'' Wynne Friday awaited water sample tests results to determine the effectiveness of oil-eating microbes sprayed onto Pelican Island beaches late Thursday.

The process known as bioremediation was being used where conventional oil-collecting equipment could not. Crews had hoped to use the microbes on Houston Point Friday, but the work was delayed by federal officials.

Clements vetoed aerial spraying of microbes over the entire spill, saying it had become too fragmented for bioremediation to work.

The owner of the two barges, Apex Towing Co. of St. Louis, Thursday handed over to the Coast Guard responsibility for the remaining cleanup. A Coast Guard official immediately sought $1 million for the job.

Coast Guard Capt. Tom Greene said federal funds would be used for the job, but the bill will be passed on to Apex's insurer for reimbursement.

COLOMBO, SRI LANKA (AUG. 4) UPI - Tamil rebels rampaged through a Moslem town in the eastern part of the country while the villagers were praying at mosques, killing at least 117 people and wounding more than 100 others, police said Saturday.

Authorities said the massacre Friday night was one of the worst ever by the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam, who launched a new war against the government June 12 by simultaneously attacking four army camps in the eastern part of the country.

More than 2,000 soldiers, rebels, police and civilians have been killed in the latest round of fighting. Tiger rebels have been battling for an independent Tamil homeland in the north and east of the country since 1983 but the latest war erupted after more than a year of relative calm.

The Tiger rebels believe the minority Tamil community, which is predominantly Hindu, needs a separate country because of years of discrimination by the majority Sinhalese, who are mostly Buddhist and who control the government in Colombo.

Authorities said the Tiger rebels attacked Kathankudy, a village near the eastern provincial capital of Batticaloa, 140 miles east of the capital, Friday night while the predominantly Moslem community was in the midst of weekly prayers.

The Tigers arrived at the village in vans, knocked out the power supply and attacked the civilian community with gunfire during the half-hour raid authorities said.

M.S. Steven, superintendent of police in the region, said 117 Moslem villagers had been confirmed dead. He said more than 100 had been wounded in the attack.

The police official said some of the attackers left the area by sea and were intercepted by military helicopters, which opened fire on the fleeing boats. It was not immediately clear whether any of the attackers had been killed.

M.H.M. Ashroff, the leader of the Sri Lankan Moslem Congress, sharply condemned the attack.

''This is a brutal massacre of innocent civilians by Tiger terrorists who do not hesitate to enter a mosque and kill civilians,'' he said.

MONROVIA, LIBERIA (AUG. 4) UPI - Fighting intensified in central Monrovia as rebels of Prince Johnson and government troops loyal to President Samuel Doe battled for control of the ravaged city.

Long-range rockets, missiles and shells were fired at the city center by both sides Friday as the front line repeatedly shifted from street to street.

Civilians largely disappeared from the contested streets. Bodies of pedestrians were seen laying on sidewalks, victims of the crossfire.

Previously locked and damaged shop fronts again were blasted in the indiscriminate firing.

The Defense Ministry building on Ashmun Street was claimed by both sides. The building changed hands repeatedly in fierce fighting and was last reported held by Johnson's forces.

Artillery shells touched off a major fire that raged unchecked in a block near an exhibition building burned out Thursday. There is no longer an official fire service in the capital.

Reporters cruising by car through the deserted streets briefly came under fire, but the source of the shooting could not be determined. The rival rebel force loyal to Charles Taylor was nowhere to be seen.

On Bushrod Island, several thousand hungry people stood in line in hope of buying a ticket that would get them a bag of rice. One woman said she had been waiting for three days.

A peace offering was issued by one of Doe's ministers, who asked that his name not be used. He said he wanted to talk to Johnson about possible ways to end the fighting, which has left hundreds of people dead.

The minister said the offer would include Doe's unconditional resignation and nomination of a provisional government. But he said he was acting on his own initiative, and had not advised Doe of his move.

Johnson, informed of the proposal at his headquarters in a roadside cafe on Bushrod Island, scorned the minister's offer and said he was interested only in deposing Doe, not in maneuvers to save himself.

''When I get him, he will be put on trial for killing Liberians,'' he said. ''But if he is convicted, we will imprison him for life. We will not kill him.''

Doe's forces massacred as many as 600 men, women and children in an attack on a Lutheran church on Sunday in an outburst of inter-tribal killing, according to the International Red Cross.

Johnson, a near-illiterate military leader who says he has no interest in becoming president, broke with Taylor and his National Patriotic Front of Liberia in February.

Taylor, a former government official who turned against Doe and launched his rebellion late last year, appears to have the larger of the two rebel forces, but Johnson struck into the capital earlier in the bid to unseat Doe.

The president is bunkered behind heavy fortification in his guarded executive mansion on the beach.

Diplomats in the beleaguered capital - which has been without water, electricity and food for almost a month - said the Johnson-Taylor rivalry might well prolong the Liberian conflict for weeks.

LOS ANGELES (AUG. 4) UPI - Producers of the television series ''Law & Order,'' a new NBC-TV entry slated to begin in prime time this fall, offered a $5,000 reward Friday for the return of undeveloped film from the show, Universal Television said.

A carton containing 20 400-foot rolls of exposed negative film was one of three shipped via American Airlines Flight 165 July 21. When a Universal representative went to the airlines' freight office the following day to claim the boxes, only two had arrived.

Officials at the studio's shipping department received a telephone call July 31 from someone identifying himself as ''Charlie,'' who said he found the carton in an alley and inquired about a reward.

The shipping clerk said he did not know about any reward and the caller said he would call back. There has been no further contact, the company said.

Universal said if the film is not recovered, the production company must re-shoot a full day's schedule of scenes for the 13-episode series, which was to have completed production by next week.

Universal said it would pay $1,000 for any information leading to the recovery of the film and $5,000 for recovery of the film itself.

MARTINEZ, CA (AUG. 4) UPI - Grateful Dead keyboardist Brent Mydland, who died of undetermined causes last month, excluded his two young daughters and his estranged wife from his will and his estate of about $2 million.

''I have intentionally omitted to provide for any person who is an heir of mine,'' the 37-year-old Mydland wrote in a will executed March 12, according to documents filed in Contra Costa County Superior Court.

Mydland, keyboardist, singer and composer with the Grateful Dead since 1979, was found dead July 26 in his home in Lafayette. The cause of death has not yet been determined.

His will, filed Thursday by attorney Ruth Dickerson, provides no benefits for Mydland's daughters Jennifer, 2, Jessica, 5, or his estranged wife, Lisa.

The estate, estimated at $2,163,700 including Mydland's $600,000 home, was left to the trusee of the estate. Mydland nominated James Whitmer, an old friend, as administrator of the estate.

The coroner's office said it was awaiting results of toxicological tests and said the cause of death would not be determined for at least a week.

(AUG. 3) UPI - Thunderstorms rolled over the Great Lakes Saturday, triggering heavy rains and flooding streams, while scattered storms soaked the rain-weary Plains and dry Canadian air kept skies clear over New England.

The National Weather Service said thunderstorms and rainshowers stretched from western Michigan to the Dakotas, Nebraska and Iowa. Heavy rain covered southern Lake Michigan and the southern two-thirds of Wisconsin.

Thunderstorms with torrential rain, dangerous lightning and gusty winds whipped east-central Wisconsin near the Dells Valley, the NWS said.

Storms doused southeast Minnesota and the Iowa border. Some areas reported rainfall of between a half-inch to nearly to 1 1/4 inches in about 40 minutes, swelling small streams and bringing the threat of urban street flooding.

Stationary thunderstorms drenched the Wind River Indian reservation in northwest Wyoming, bringing the threat of flash flooding as streams rose quickly and water raced down usually dry washes in the area.

A week of relentless rain in the Plains continued Saturday as storms swept over Nebraska, Kansas and Oklahoma. Flash flood watches were posted for 11 north Texas counties as thunderstorms roamed across the state's northwest corner.

Strong storms also were reported in the northeast Texas Panhandle, southern Oklahoma and northwest Arkansas, while scattered showers dumped rain from western Oklahoma to northeast New Mexico.

Dry Canadian air flowed across New England, keeping weather pleasant and skies clear across most of the region. Early morning temperatures ranged from 73 under clear skies in Boston and Providence, R.I., to 64 in Concord N.H.

Skies were partly cloudy Saturday in the mid-Atlantic states, with reading ranging from 73 in Newark, N.J., to 65 in Baltimore. Pittsburgh slipped to 63 overnight as fog formed along the Ohio, Allegheny and Monongahela rivers.

President Bush is monitoring the situation in the Persian Gulf from the presidential retreat at Camp David this weekend. Bush scheduled an early morning meeting today with his top national security advisers to review U-S options for dealing with Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Iraqi forces in Kuwait are approaching the Saudi Arabian border, but Iraq says it will begin pulling troops out of Kuwait by Sunday. The Iraqi government also says it will make sure the new regime it installed will remain in power, and it's warning other countries NOT to interfere.

Israel says it woN'T tolerate a threat to its national security and is warning Baghdad against any movement of Iraqi forces toward Jordan. Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy said yesterday that Israel should coordinate its activities with the United States and Western nations.

Congress has approved and sent to the White House a bill temporarily increasing the national debt limit to nearly three-point-two-BILLION dollars. Treasury Department officials say the boost is necessary because the government will run out of borrowing authority in mid-August, while Congress is on vacation.

Also this morning on Capitol Hill, the House passed a compromise AIDS assistance package. The measure authorizes as much as 875-Million dollars next year to help local and state governments provide care for AIDS patients. The bill was sent to the Senate for final congressional action.

TOKYO (AUG. 4) UPI - President Bush pressed Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu Saturday to join in imposing economic sanctions on Iraq in the wake of its invasion of neighboring Kuwait, foreign ministry officials said.

Bush asked Kaifu in a 20-minute telephone conversation Saturday morning to take actions against Iraq, including suspension of crude oil imports and a freezing of governmental loans to Iraq, the officials said.

Bush told Kaifu that Japan's cooperation in imposing economic sanctions against Iraq is needed to gain acceptance of a U.N. Security Council resolution calling for punitive measures against Iraq.

Kaifu said Japan is ready to implement sanctions but will wait until the Security Council issues a formal declaration.

The Japanese government Friday decided to freeze Kuwait's assets in Japan in response to a request by acting Kuwaiti ambassador to Japan Adel Hasan.

Japan, however, has decided whether to freeze $2.7 billion in aid commitments to Iraq and to halt bilateral trade, including imports of crude oil.

Last December, Japan agreed to resume providing Iraq with a total of $2.7 million in Japanese yen credits and government-insured export loans, suspended during the eight-year Iran-Iraq War.

The United States imposed a sweeping trade embargo Thursday to protest against the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, banning imports of oil and other goods from Iraq as well as nearly all exports to the Middle East nation.

The United States also froze all Kuwaiti assets in America.

(AUG. 4) UPI - A government report says the drinking water in many American communities might be dangerous because federal and state officials have NOT enforced water quality regulations. The report also says there is evidence to indicate that many water test results have been falsified and manipulated.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl and East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere agreed yesterday that their nations will unite in time to hold all-German elections on October 14th. The move to speed up reunification is seen as an attempt to help salvage East Germany's crumbling economy.

Texas health officials say they're preparing to re-open the southern end of oil-stained Galveston Bay this weekend. The Coast Guard says much of the 500-thousand gallons of oil that was spilled one week ago has evaporated. But environmentalists remain concerned about sensitive marshlands in the northern part of the bay.

The jury deciding the fate of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry resumes deliberations today, after completing its first day of deliberations yesterday. Barry faces 14 federal drug and perjury counts. The mayor said yesterday he feels ''fantastic'' but he declined to comment on the case.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 4) UPI - President Bush watched the highly charged stand-off in the Persian Gulf from the Camp David presidential retreat Saturday and pressed a personal diplomatic offensive while weighing stepped-up action against Iraq.

Bush met with his top national security advisers for several hours to monitor developments and review U.S. options amid little indication that the confrontation in the volatile region, sparked by the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, was nearing an end.

The White House kept up a cautious ''wait and see'' attitude amid reports that Iraqi troops were moving toward the border of neighboring Saudi Arabia and word that Saudi Arabia had abruptly canceled an Arab summit aimed at resolving the international crisis.

Bush warned Friday that Iraqi penetration of Saudi Arabia could provoke U.S. intervention.

The president convened the meeting while spending the weekend at the secluded compound in the Cactoctin Mountains 50 miles from Washington. The Pentagon and a State Department task force also monitored the situation and a telephone line was kept open to the U.S. Embassy in Kuwait.

While reviewing the latest intelligence, Bush also continued his many conversations with world leaders. He pressed Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu by telephone Saturday morning to join in imposing economic sanctions on Iraq, including suspension of crude oil imports and a freezing of governmental loans.

In Tokyo, foreign ministry officials said Bush had emphasized Japan's cooperation was needed to gain acceptance of a U.N. Security Council resolution calling for punitive measures against Iraq.

Earlier Saturday morning, the Senate approved an amendment giving Bush the authority to restrict imports to the United States from nations that continue to trade with Iraq and confirmed a new ambassador to Kuwait, Edward William Gnehm.

Meeting with Bush was Vice President Dan Quayle, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney, Joint Chiefs of Staff Chairman Gen. Colin Powell, national security adviser Brent Scowcroft and White House chief of staff John Sununu.

Secretary of State James Baker, who just returned from Moscow where the two superpowers issued a joint statement condemning the Iraqi invasion, also joined the group.

''We're following it closely,'' Bush said. ''We've got many diplomatic channels open.''

Bush held a similar session Friday morning, gathering top aides for a discussion of U.S. efforts to date and their economic implications, as well as possible moves in the future should the situation deteriorate further. After the meeting, he said, ''All options are open - economic and otherwise.''

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater called it ''a consultation phase that's underway. How long it might take, we don't know. ... Remember that the situation is still unfolding.''

With U.S. warships near the gulf but U.S. military options limited, Bush imposed a trade embargo against Iraq and froze all Baghdad assets in the United States. As a precautionary measure, he also froze Kuwaiti assets and urged all nations to join a U.N.-sponsored worldwide economic boycott of Iraq.

He also warned that if Iraq made a move against neighboring Saudi Arabia, he would ''be inclined to help in any way we possibly can. It's that serious.''

Saudi Arabia is the major Middle East exporter of oil to the United States and is on tiny Kuwait's southern border at the head of the Persian Gulf. The State Department reported Iraqi troops were within miles of the border.

The United States told its NATO allies in Brussels that it would ''not stand by'' if Iraq extends hostilities beyond the invasion of Kuwait, and was preparing contingency plans in case Iraqi President Saddam Hussein made such a move.

With the United States beefing up its forces in the region, officials said Bush was reviewing U.S. military options that include tactical air strikes against Iraqi invasion troops, bombing runs into Iraq or a naval blockade of Iraqi oil exports in the Persian Gulf.

Word also arrived late Friday that Iraq had promised to begin withdrawing troops on Sunday, but White House officials were cautious. Bush just hours earlier issued a direct challenge to Hussein: ''Let's see him haul them out right now.''

Also still unknown were the whereabouts of up to 14 American oil workers in Kuwait. The administration pressed Baghdad for answers on Friday.

Bush said, ''We have no reports of Americans being held against their will '' but, ''that is a matter of importance to us.''

WASHINGTON (AUG. 4) UPI - The jury weighing drug and perjury charges against Mayor Marion Barry met Saturday to deliberate the 14 federal counts that could result in a prison sentence for the three-term mayor.

The jurors met for 6 1/2 hours Friday, completing their first full day of deliberations after receiving final instructions and meeting for about 40 minutes Thursday afternoon.

The panel of nine women and three men, sequestered since June 18, opted to deliberate four more hours Saturday rather than take the weekend off, said U.S. District Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson. Deliberations began at 10 a.m.

The identities of the jurors - 10 blacks and two whites - were revealed Thursday from a pool of 18 jurors and alternates who sat through more than six weeks of testimony.

Barry spent Friday afternoon at Catholic University with high school students from across the city who serve as representatives of the Marion Barry Youth Leadership Institute.

''I feel fantastic,'' said Barry, who refused to comment on the case.

Jurors sent a note to Jackson late Friday asking to review an exhibit concerning government witness Doris Crenshaw, whose testimony dealt with the 12th of the 14 counts.

He also said jurors could come into the courtroom to look at a large magnetic chart on which prosecutors had detailed dates of Barry's alleged drug use with 10 government witnesses during the nine-week trial.

The witnesses said Barry used cocaine or obtained the drug in 20 homes, 15 hotels, four boats and two government offices in the District of Columbia, Atlanta, the Virgin Islands and the Bahamas, dating to 1983.

Barry, 54, is charged with three felony counts of perjury, 10 misdemeanor counts of cocaine possession and a single misdemeanor count of conspiracy to possess cocaine. If convicted of all counts, he could be sentenced to a maximum 26 years in prison and fined $1.85 million.

Defense attorney R. Kenneth Mundy said he believed jurors would be relocated after a federal drug sting operation Thursday night went awry in the suburban Maryland parking lot of the hotel where the jurors secretly had been sequestered.

Helicopters and officers on the ground searched around the hotel for three hours Thursday night and Friday before calling off a search for Brian Lee Tribble, who was acquitted in 1987 of charges he supplied the fatal dose of cocaine to University of Maryland basketball star Len Bias. Tribble, wanted in connection with an undercover federal drug investigation, was not captured.

Peter Gruden, a special agent with the federal Drug Enforcement Administration, said the location of the sting was ''purely coincidental.''

Jackson said he had been assured jurors were ''oblivious'' to the activities, but Mundy said he feared it could have prejudiced the jury. One of the counts against Barry stemmed from a Jan. 18 FBI drug sting at a Washington hotel.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 5) UPI - National standards are needed to ensure that DNA ''fingerprinting'' - a controversial, high-tech means of identification - can be used reliably in the courtroom, a congressional report said Saturday.

Analysts from the congressional Office of Technology Assessment found that tests of deoxyribonucleic acid, or DNA, can be an accurate way to identify people when properly performed. But the OTA report warned that because of the lack of technical and procedural standards, serious questions remain about the reliability of any individual test result.

DNA is the genetic material that makes up our chromosomes and contains the instructions for all life. No two people, except for identical twins, share exactly the same DNA.

If done properly, DNA fingerprinting compares the genetic material from two sources, such as hair or semen, and if their chemical patterns match, estimates the likelihood of such a match occurring by chance. Firms that perform such tests have estimated the odds of wrongly matching one person's DNA with another individual's to be one in a billion.

Since 1986, DNA fingerprinting has been used by police in more than 2,000 investigations in the United States, and results of such tests have been admitted into evidence in at least 185 criminal cases in 38 states, the OTA said. The technique also has been used in thousands of non-criminal cases concerning paternity disputes.

''No disadvantages of DNA testing technologies themselves were identified '' the OTA said in its 196-page report. ''DNA testing can save law enforcement and courts time and money by exonerating innocent suspects before trial or through plea bargaining for guilty parties.''

But OTA investigators pointed out that, like other biological identification tests such as for blood or hair, DNA typing has its limitations and does not provide conclusive identification in every case.

''Questions, many stemming from actual court cases, underscore the need to set technical and procedural standards for DNA testing now,'' the OTA said in a statement.

Laboratory mistakes, such as contamination, mislabeling or erroneous readings of DNA patterns, can create mix-ups. Critics also have cited the lack of knowledge about genetic patterns among groups that tend to intermarry as another reason genetic typing should proceed with caution.

Rep. Don Edwards, D-Calif., praised the findings of the new report, adding that he thinks the FBI, National Institute of Standards and Technology, civil liberties experts and perhaps Congress should play a role in developing the guidelines.

''Strict federal standards are needed to ensure the accuracy of DNA tests in criminal cases. After all, a DNA test can put someone in jail for life or send someone to the electric chair,'' said Edwards, chairman of the House subcommittee on Civil and Constitutional Rights.

Phil Gutis, a spokesman for the American Civil Liberties Union in New York said the report ''appears to correctly recognize our concern that there may be an abuse of civil liberties involved with DNA testing.''

The ACLU does not think that results of DNA typing should be the sole evidence used to prosecute a suspected criminial, Gutis said. ''We don't think this is as reliable as a (traditional) fingerprint yet,'' he added.

The ACLU is opposed to plans by the FBI and some states to create banks of genetic information on certain types of convicted criminals, such as rapists. And Edwards said, ''I have serious reservations about actually storing the DNA. That would be subject to abuse.''

OTA, the analytical arm of Congress, conducted the study at the request of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee.

WOONSOCKET, R.I. (AUG. 4) UPI - An alleged bigamist was ordered held Saturday on charges he tried to murder one wife with a car bomb so he could move in with his 20-year-old second spouse and avoid divorce proceedings, police said.

Ronald M. Harnois, 40, of Woonsocket, was ordered held on $50,000 cash after his arraignment at the city police station on a charge of assault with intent to murder his wife of 6 1/2 years, Joanne Harnois, 36.

Harnois was arraigned before a bail commissioner on two counts of assault with a dangerous weapon, bigamy, and filing a false document, police said.

The second wife, Tammy Petrin of Woonsocket, allegedly conspired in the plot to kill Joanne Harnois. She was released on $1,000 cash bail and was said to be helping police with their case.

''She is a cooperating defendant at this point,'' police Cmdr. Rodney Remblad said.

Remblad said Petrin, an assembly line worker, and her husband's first wife a waitress, had been friends for about a year before the failed bombing attempt Wednesday night. The two sometimes went bowling and fishing together, he said.

According to police, Ronald Harnois, who drives a truck for a pizza company, married Petrin in May 1989 without telling her he was already married and without letting his first wife know of his second relationship.

Petrin found out two months after her marriage in district court that her new husband had a previous wife, but Joanne Harnois did not know her husband was a bigamist until police arrested him Friday, Remblad said.

''She was sobbing,'' the commander said. ''She was upset. I would describe her as being depressed. She is totally out of it.''

Ronald Harnois allegedly strapped a device consisting of six half-foot pipe bombs to the undercarriage of his wife Joanne's Chevrolet Cavalier hatchback. The bombs were designed to explode in a chain reaction and ignite the gas tank, Remblad said.

But only one of the bombs went off around 11 p.m. Wednesday as Harnois was driving to nearby Millville, Mass., to pick up her husband, Remblad said.

The blast ripped numerous holes in the gas tank, flattened the right rear tire, and smashed some nearby plate-glass windows. Harnois escaped injury and ran to call police.

Police arrested Ronald Harnois and Petrin late Friday afternoon as they were walking together. Harnois wanted to kill Joanne Harnois so he could avoid divorce proceedings and live with Petrin, Remblad said.

ATLANTA (AUG. 4) UPI - Andrew Young, lagging in the polls in his bid to become Georgia's first black governor, took to the streets Saturday in a plea to voters before Tuesday's historic runoff against Lt. Gov. Zell Miller.

Young, who has had trouble building the uniform black support he needs to win the Democratic nomination, attended a minority contractors' breakfast and planned to mingle at the Atlanta Jazz Festival in search of votes.

''He is out on the streets today doing as much as he can to shake hands and talk to the voters,'' said Lee Echols, press secretary to the former Atlanta mayor. ''We are planning on surprising the experts on Tuesday, and Andy is working extremely hard this weekend to make sure that happens.''

Flat-bed trucks and vans with hundreds of Young campaign workers took off from his headquarters to fan out in a get-out-the vote blitz Saturday morning, Echols said.

Young faces Miller in the Aug. 7 runoff election because neither candidate was able to garner a majority of the vote in a July 17 Democratic primary, in which Miller finished first by more than 10 percentage points.

Recent newspaper and television polls show Miller has widened his lead to 20 points with less than 12 percent of the vote undecided.

The winner of the runoff faces the Republican nominee, state Rep. Johnny Isakson, in November to determine the successor to Gov. Joe Frank Harris, leaving office after serving the maximum two terms allowed by law.

Isakson would be Georgia's first GOP governor in 122 years if he beats the Democratic nominee.

Miller, whose campaign has been bolstered by the popularity of his chief campaign promise - the establishment of Georgia's first lottery - planned a more relaxed schedule Saturday.

The 16-year veteran of the lieutenant governor's office rode in the annual Georgia Mountain Fair parade near his hometown of Young Harris and planned to spend the rest of the day and much of Sunday preparing for a final televised debate scheduled for Sunday night.

On Monday, both candidates planned a final fly-around the state with news conferences scheduled for the major media markets of Albany, Augusta, Columbus, Savannah, Macon and Atlanta.

''Andy will just continue to emphasize his vision for Georgia, a vision of better education, a stronger economy, better health care and strong individual rights for all Georgians,'' Echols said about Young's final campaign messages. Young, following in the footsteps of the nation's first black elected governor, Virginia's Douglas Wilder, has identified himself as a supporter of abortion rights.

However, a poll published Friday in the Atlanta Journal-Consitution, said no one issue in the Young platform has succeeded in rallying voter interest like Miller's backing of a state lottery to benefit educational improvements.

The telephone poll of 1,097 likely Democratic voters showed Miller leading 54 percent to 34 percent with a week to go before the runoff.

Young received almost three-quarters of the black vote, according to the poll, but less than a quarter of the white vote. Miller, meanwhile, continued to draw a larger than anticipated share of the black vote at 14 percent.

Merle Black, an Emory University political scientist, said a Miller victory appears inevitable, barring a major upset.

(AUG. 4) UPI - Egypt's semi-official Middle East News Agency reports in a dispatch from Baghdad that Iraqi troops will begin withdrawing from Kuwait tomorrow. The White House says it's taking a ''wait-and-see'' attitude toward the report. President Bush is meeting with his top Cabinet officials at Camp David today to discuss the crisis and make contignency plans.

The Arab world remains divided about Iraq's action. King Hussein of Jordan has met with Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein in Baghdad. Jordan's ruler says the Iraqi leader agreed to a mini-summit tomorrow with him, Egyptian President Mubarak, the deposed emir of Kuwait and Saudi Arabian King Fahd. Hussein says he hopes the meeting will lead to an Arab solution to the crisis.

(AUG. 4) UPI - A 19-year veteran of the Philadelphia police force has been suspended without pay for 10 days after failing to help a homeless woman who was literally freezing to death in December. About an hour after Raymond Ruczynski reported on December 16th that the woman was drunk and had refused assistance... 59-year-old Mary Dennis was found frozen to death on a bench.

The leaders of East and West Germany... who have been pushing the JERUSALEM (AUG. 4) UPI - Defense Minister Moshe Arens said Saturday he did not believe the Jewish state was Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's next target but warned that Israel would act if Iraq entered Jordan.

''I have no doubt that Saddam will not stop with the occupation of Kuwait. He will look for additional targets,'' Arens told Israel Radio, but added, ''He knows that Israel is not Kuwait. Israel is also not Saudi Arabia.''

Arens criticized as inadequate the response of many nations, including the United States, to Iraq's invasion and called for stronger measures to further isolate Iraq economically and politically.

Citing as an example Saddam's threat earlier this year to wipe out half of Israel with chemical weapons if it attacked Iraq or another Arab nation, Arens said at the time he warned that Western inaction would encourage the Iraqi president.

''I think this time the international community must respond effectively to make sure Saddam cannot get away with it,'' said Arens, who described the Iraqi president as a ''little Hitler.''

Since Iraq's invasion of Kuwait Thursday, Israeli leaders have reaffirmed their view that movement by Iraqi forces toward or entrance into Jordan would necessitate action.

''The moment we believe that we are about to witness a general strategic change, such as entry of Iraqi forces into Jordan, we shall act. This has been Israeli policy for very many years,'' Arens said. ''I am confident in our ability to deter him.''

Asked whether he believed the Americans were taken by surprise by the Iraqi invasion, Arens said, ''I think it was a case of wishful thinking.''

''They did not want to see the cruel truth. They did not want to read Saddam Hussein as he really is despite all the data that was open and visible,'' Arens said, referring to intelligence information and other sources.

Slightly more than a week before Iraqi forces invaded Kuwait, Arens told the Israeli Parliament's Defense and Foreign Affairs Committee the possibility of war in the Middle East was higher than when he last was defense minister in 1983.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 4) UPI - The Senate passed legislation Saturday that will allow Pentagon intelligence operatives for the first time to operate commercial businesses as cover for their activities.

The permission was contained in the 1991 intelligence authorization bill, which provides a classified figure for the operation of the nation's intelligence agencies.

Most of the money is salted away in secret portions of the defense bill, and some estimates suggest about $30 billion is devoted to the operations of the CIA, the code-breaking and electronic communications intercepting National Security Agency, FBI counterintelligence work, Energy Department intelligence operations, the intelligence arms of the three branches of service and the Defense Intelligence Agency.

While the CIA long has been able to operate under the cover of commercial firms overseas, the Pentagon's spies have been unable to do so. The bill also lets them have domestic commercial operations to the extent necessary to back up their overseas efforts. Any profits must be turned over to the Treasury.

In the only portions of the bill in which cost figures are made public, the legislation provides $29.5 million for salaries for the group of employees who operate to coordinate intelligence data as part of a communal intelligence adminsitrative operation. And the bill says $164.6 million will be set aside for the CIA's retirement account.

In addition, the legislation contains language dealing with pension rights for divorced spouses of CIA employees.

The measure cleared on a voice vote during a marathon defense bill session early Saturday morning.

(AUG. 4) UPI - President Bush is keeping tabs on the situation in the Persian Gulf from the presidential retreat at Camp David. Bush will meet with national security experts this morning to review U-S options for dealing with the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

(AUG. 4) UPI - Iraq's intentions for a conquered Kuwait became clearer today, as Baghdad announced plans to form a Kuwaiti army to defend the so-called ''Provisional Free Kuwaiti government.'' The reports come in total defiance of global demands that Baghdad immediately depart from its oil-rich neighbor.

Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein reportedly has agreed to attend a mini-summit tomorrow with King Hussein of Jordan, Saudi King Fahd and Egyptian President Mubarak. The deposed emir of Kuwait was scheduled to attend, but said he would NOT meet Saddam until all Iraqi troops leave his homeland.

A newspaper report today from Egypt says the Iraqi military executed 120 army officers who refused to participate in the invasion of Kuwait. The report says the 120 officers were executed yesterday because they did NOT want to attack a fellow Arab nation.

In addition to higher gasoline prices at the pump... another result of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait is a move by the Senate aimed at requiring the United States to import NO more than half its energy needs. The measure was adopted yesterday without opposition on a voice vote, and now must be approved by the House.

Authorities in Texas today reopened portions of Galveston Bay to fishing... one week after a barge-ship collision dumped 500-thousand gallons of heavy crude oil into the waterway. Environmentalists are expressing concern for marshlands in the northern reaches of the bay, saying oil lingers beneath the surface.

(AUG. 4) UPI - A Kuwaiti envoy in Cairo says the emir of Kuwait will NOT meet with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein until all Iraqi troops withdraw from Kuwait. The Kuwaiti emir had been scheduled to attend a mini-summit in Saudi Arabia tomorrow with Saddam, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak, King Hussein of Jordan and Saudi King Fahd.

Iraq says it will begin withdrawing its troops from Kuwait tomorrow. But the Egyptian Middle East News Agency quotes Baghdad Radio as saying Iraq plans to form a Kuwaiti army that will ensure the stability of the new regime Iraq set up in the tiny oil-rich nation. British and U-S oil sources say the Iraqi invasion force has moved to within five to 10 miles of Kuwait's border with Saudi Arabia.

The House passed a campaign finance reform bill, but rejected an amendement that would've allowed some public financing of congressional elections for the first time. The amendment was a major part of the Democrats' version of the bill, which also contains modest limits on political action committee donations. The Senate already has passed its own campaign finance reform bill.

Lawmakers took steps to guard against another major oil spill similar to the 1989 Exxon Valdez disaster. Congress approved and sent to the White House legislation that would require double hulls on tankers and would make tanker operators more liable for oil spills. The bill also would set up a one-BILLION-dollar federal trust fund for clean-up operations and victim compensation.

The rebels are battling the government for an independent Tamil homeland on the island nation in the Indian Ocean.

The jury in the drug and perjury trial of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry enters its second day of deliberations today. WASHINGTON (AUG. 4) UPI - The Senate, risking a veto, made major changes Saturday in the ''Star Wars'' anti-missile program in a drive to pass a $289 billion Pentagon budget bill representing the first deep military cuts after the Cold War.

The bill, a full $18 billion under the initial Pentagon budget, was due for a final vote late in the day.

A major feature was the rescue of the B-2 stealth bomber from a growing move to kill the $63 billion 75-plane program. The bill has $4.6 billion in research funds and money to build two more of the radar-evading planes. The House bill ends the program at the 15 planes now on order from Northrop Corp.

Final debate centered on proposals to cut or alter the shape of the Strategic Defense Initiative missile defense program.

With the backing of Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., the powerful chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee, and the bill's floor leader, Sens. Jeff Bingaman, D-N.M., and Richard Shelby, D-Ala., won a key 54-44 vote to cut back sharply on the space-based element of the program's first phase. The tally was largely along party lines.

They cut the $329 billion sought for the ''brilliant pebbles'' - small space interceptors to find and kill missiles - to the $129 million being spent this year. They would increase the emphasis on long-term projects such as lasers and boost work on protections against accidental missile launches.

And with Iraq's military conquests in the headlines, Sen. John Warner, R-Va., got a 97-1 vote to urge that up to $300 million of the $3.57 billion in Pentagon funds for SDI be earmarked for finding ways to protect against shorter range tactical ballistic missiles that are a growing threat in the Third World, including Iraq. The missiles can carry chemical biological and nuclear weapons.

SDI was begun by President Ronald Reagan in 1983. The goal is to let the president decide in 1993 whether to proceed with deployment. Some $20 billion already has been spent, and it is expected to cost at least $60 billion for the first phase. It has produced phenominal advances in miniaturization but the leak-proof missile defense concept first advanced has long since been abandoned. Advocates say it could raise the uncertainty that an attack could succeed high enough to deter a nuclear strike.

''The time has come for a structural change, a reordering of priorities within the program rather than a stopgap or half-brained approach,'' said Shelby.

An angry Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., said President Bush will veto the bill over the Bingaman-Shelby amendment.

''This would emasculate this nation's ability to defend itself against the greatest threat we face today, the proliferation of ballistic missiles (in Third World nations like Iraq),'' said McCain.

Nunn said he wanted to ''send a clear policy message'' with the vote. ''I do not believe Phase One is an affordable system, with brilliant pebbles or without it. We ought to send them a message and tell them to get off this kick of a 1993 deployment decision.''

The administration wanted $4.6 billion for SDI but Nunn's committee cut it back by about $1 billion. The House bill has just $2.9 billion for SDI.

The Senate killed, 56-41, an amendment to cut $600 million from SDI and send it back to the Treasury and killed, 54-43, one to cut $400 million and give half to the drug war and half to veterans' programs.

The defense bill reflects both the lessened threat in Eastern Europe and from the Soviet Union as well as the intense domestic budget pressures.

It must be reconciled in a conference committee with the $283 billion version that is due on the House floor in early September.

The bill provides broad policy guidance and permission for spending in various programs. A later appropriations bill actually funds the Pentagon's bank accounts. That bill will total $297 billion, a higher figure because bills are coming due now for projects approved in previous years.

Key features of the Senate bill include:

-Cutting 100,000 troops from the all volunteer force, half to come from Europe, along with a package of benefits for those who get pink slips. It also has a 3.5 percent pay raise and cuts civilian employment by 47,000.

-The first effort to throw the Pentagon into the war to save the environment with a $200 million account for environmental research.

-Holding up the SSN-21 Seawolf attack submarines for more development and instead bying two more of the SSN-688 Los Angeles class submarines. It also has $1.2 billion for an 18th and final Trident ballistic missile submarine.

-Refusal to provide $1.5 billion in procurement money for the Navy's new A-12 attack jet, a replacement for the aging A-6.

-Termination of $40 billion Milstar communications satellite program with the elimination of the 1991 request of $1.1 billion.

-Inclusion of research money for the V-22 Osprey tilt-rotor plane, a project the Pentagon has sought to kill. It also holds the Army's new light helicopter and the Air Force's new Advanced Tactical Fighter in the research and development stage.

-Refused $1.3 billion in procurement funds to put the 10-warhead MX missile on rail cars, leaving it in research pending the outcome of arms talks that will affect both the rail MX and the truck-mounted one-warhead Midgetman missile.

(AUG. 4) UPI - President Bush held another top-level review of the Persian Gulf situation this morning, with his national security advisers flying to the Camp David mountain retreat for the session. The meeting was billed as another review of current developments in Kuwait and along the Saudi Arabian border. Bush is reviewing U-S options for a response to the Iraqi conquest of its tiny neighbor.

There are new charges of price-gouging on gasoline in cities across the nation. Gas prices soared as much as 14 cents a gallon, while a nation-wide survey of 14-hundred gas stations by the American Automobile Association showed a rise of four cents a gallon in two days. It put the average price of self-serve unleaded regular at one dollar 11 and one-half cents a gallon.

The House approved on a voice vote and sent to the Senate a compromise bill on AIDS assistance. The approval early today authorized as much as 875-Million dollars next year to help state and local governments deal with the health crisis. The Senate is expected to give final congressional aproval to the bill, which also is expected to be signed into law by President Bush.

Authorities today re-opened portions of Galveston Bay to fishing, even though environmentalists say they fear much of the oil from a spill a week ago is still lurking beneath the surface. A barge-ship collision last week sent about 500-thousand gallons of oil into the bay. Environmentalists are voicing growing concern over the effect of the spill on sensitive marshlands in the northern reaches of the bay.

(AUG. 4) UPI - Relatives of three U.S. oilfield workers taken prisoner in Kuwait rejoiced at their release Saturday, but other families waited anxiously for news of up to 11 other petroleum workers and 20 tanker crewmen who may be held by invading Iraqi forces.

Paula Czap, daughter of Raynard Walterscheid, 52, of Jacksboro, Texas, said the State Department called the family's home near Fort Worth Saturday afternoon to say her father had been released.

''Raynard is at the Rashad Hotel in Baghdad. They gave us the phone number and we're trying to get hold of him right now,'' she said.

The wife of oil worker Edward Hale, 52, of Spring, Texas, near Houston, said the State Department Saturday afternoon confirmed her husband also was safe a Baghdad hotel.

The State Department in Washington said at least three of the 14 employees of U.S. oil companies believed have been taken by Iraq during Thursday's invasion were taken to Baghdad and released. Five other Americans were apparently also taken to Baghdad and were expected to be freed later in the day.

Shipping executives in Bahrain said Iraqi troops captured 20 American crew off a tanker docked in Kuwait, but a spokesman for the State Department task force monitoring the situation said he could not confirm that report.

The State Department did not release the names of the captive oilfield workers, who officials said worked for three oil companies. Relatives identified three of them as being from Texas.

The family of Charles Amos of Harmony, Texas, said they had not received any news.

''We're very hopeful, with the news that some people have been released,'' said David Amos, son of Charles Amos. ''Things are looking better all the time and we're much more hopeful now.''

Walterscheid's wife, Marjorie, said she got only ''a little bit of sleep'' Friday night after State Department officials indicated prematurely that three of the Americans in Iraqi custody had been released. Officials were unable to confirm the report for more than 12 hours.

Walterscheid, a drilling superintendent, and Amos, 59, both work for the Santa Fe Drilling Co. subsidiary of Sante Fe International and Kuwait Oil Co., Kuwait's state-owned oil company.

Marjorie Walterscheid said her husband had been working since March at an exploration site near the Ahmadi in northern Kuwait. Sante Fe Drilling told the family that Walterscheid had been on the phone with company officials when he said Iraqi soldiers had arrived and the phone line went dead. Walterscheid had been expected to return from Kuwait Aug. 17, said his daughter, Paula Czap of Lawton, Okla.

Hale, who works through OGE Drilling Inc. in Houston, was in Kuwait as a rig supervisor for Kuwait Oil Co.

Patricia Hale said she last talked with her husband a couple of days before the invasion.

Hale and Walterscheid both worked for American oil companies in Iran before the fall of the shah and the takeover of the U.S. Embassy there in 1976, family members said.

The State Department said it was pressing Iraq for more information and had a commitment from the Iraqi government to safeguard the more than 3,000 Americans who are believed to be in Kuwait.

Santa Fe Drilling Co. of Alhambra, Calif., said eight of its employees were taken: six Americans, one Canadian and one British citizen.

Halliburton Co. of Dallas, an oil field services company, said it had not been able to account for one American and one British employee out of 16 workers in Kuwait, the rest of the employees were believed to have safely fled the country.

''We're currently not open for business right now in Kuwait,'' said Guy Marcus, a Halliburton spokesman.

CHICAGO (AUG. 4) UPI - Former Mayor Jane Byrne may return from political retirement to challenge Mayor Richard Daley in his 1991 re-election bid, the Chicago Sun-Times reported in its Sunday editions.

''I've been getting encouragement from throughout the city, from blacks, Hispanics, white ethinics,'' Byrne told the newspaper.

Byrne, who is ''leaning strongly'' toward opposing Daley, said she will make a formal announcement this fall about her political future.

Byrne said several reasons have increased the possibility that she may return to politics, including the strong recovery of her husband, Jay McMullen, from lung cancer.

The former mayor, who considered running on the Republican ticket in the 1987 and 1989 mayoral elections, said she would challenge Daley in the Democratic primary if she ran.

''I'm a Democrat,'' Byrne said.

Her attempt to unseat Daley would be Byrne's second try at recapturing the mayoral office she held from 1979 through 1983. The former mayor narrowly lost the office to Harold Washington in the 1983 Democratic primary. She lost to Washington again in a 1987 rematch.

Byrne, who edged out Daley by 43,396 votes for second place in the 1983 Democratic primary, said she could beat him again.

''I've already beaten him once,'' she said. ''(Daley's) numbers in the polls are always soft,'' Byrne added.

Daley, who was elected mayor after the death of Washington, said he would not feel threatened by Byrne's challenge and said he is optimistic about holding on to his mayoral status.

''Is she really running?'' Daley asked.

Alderman Richard Mell, a former Byrne ally who now supports Daley, said that Byrne is not afraid to fight, but that it could be a hard battle against Daley.

''Jane is feisty, smart and she still has charisma, but I think that she will have a rough time with Daley,'' Mell said.

''But she's not afraid to barge into a fight, and she's at her best as an underdog,'' he added.

Another alderman, Danny Davis, said Byrne would have a good chance against Daley ''if she could get Daley into a one-on-one contest.''

''Jane Byrne has the ability to create a tremendous amount of excitement, and she could even do it without a great deal of resources because of her name recognition and because of her style.'

(AUG. 4) UPI - A major blow today for diplomatic efforts aimed at resolving the international crisis caused by the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Saudi Arabia abruptly canceled a mini Arab summit scheduled for tomorrow in the Saudi city of Jeddah. Senior Arab sources in Cairo say arrangements for the event fell apart and they gave NO specific reason for the collapse.

The cancellation comes amide report that Iraqi troops have advanced dangerously close to Saudi Arabia. But diplomatic and Arab sources are skeptical about one report that Iraqi troops have entered a neutral zone between Kuwait and Saudi Arabia and abducted oil workers. The Iraqi New Agency also denies the claim.

Meanwhile, Iraq announced plans to form a Kuwaiti army to defend the regime it installed in the conquered emirate. Iraqi television claimed that about 100-thousand Kuwaitis had flocked to enlist. Radio Baghdad says the new government decided to form a ''popular army to back up its national aims.''

President Bush is closely monitoring the developments in the Persian Gulf from the secluded Camp David presidential retreat. Bush met with his top national security advisers this morning to review U-S options. The president warned yesterday that Iraqi penetration of Saudi Arabia could provoke U-S intervention.

A defense official in Sri Lanka reports a bloodbath by Tamil rebels. Authorities say rebels attacked a Moslem farm town in the eastern part of the country... firing on villagers as they knelt in prayer at two mosques. At least 150 people were killed and more than 100 others were wounded.

(AUG. 4) UPI - The Senate is making a final push to finish work on a 289-BILLION-dollar defense budget so members can go on a month-long vacation. The rare Saturday session opened with debate on the composition of the ''Star Wars'' missile defense program. Republican Senator John Warner of Virginia wants to find defenses against shorter-range tactical ballistic missiles... citing threats from such nations as Iraq and Syria.

Fighting raged in Liberia's capital as rebels and government troops battle for control of the ravaged city. Yesterday, long-range rockets, missiles and shells rained on the heart of Monrovia from both sides as the front line repeatedly shifted from street to street. The bodies of pedestrians caught in the cross-fire were seen laying on sidewalks.

Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Miami say Tropical Storm Cesar is drifting harmlessly across the Atlantic Ocean. They say the storm is hundreds of miles from any land mass and is NOT expected to strengthen. (AUG. 4) UPI - Iraqi President Saddam Hussein today quashed hopes for a swift Arab solution to the three-day-old crisis sparked by Baghdad's invasion of Kuwait. A senior Jordanian official says Jordan's King Hussein today canceled a mini Arab summit planned for tomorrow in Jeddah after Saddam adamantly refused to meet Kuwait's deposed ruler, who has taken refuge in Saudi Arabia. Saddam reportedly wants the Saudis to hand him over to face charges that the emir ''plundered'' the wealth of his oil-rich nation. But the emir vows NOT to meet Saddam until all Iraqi troops leave Kuwait.

Iraq also denied its massive forces are poised to attack Saudi Arabia. The official Iraqi News Agency quotes an ''official responsible source'' as saying that Iraqi forces have NOT entered a neutral zone between Kuwait and Saudi Arabia.

Global condemnation of the Iraqi invasion is widening. The 12-nation European Community today announced that it's freezing Iraqi assets, halting all oil imports from Iraq and banning the sale of arms to Baghdad to punish it for invading Kuwait. At the United Nations, U-S Ambassador Thomas Pickering is meeting with delegates of China, the Soviet Union, France and Britain to discuss convening the full U-N Security Council to impose stronger sanctions against Iraq.

The Senate is wading through a host of issues in a final push to wrap up debate on a 289-BILLION-dollar defense budget. Senators are meeting in a rare Saturday session so they came go home on a month-long vacation. The bill reflects the first major reductions following the collapse of the Warsaw Pact in East Europe and the end of the Cold War. It calls for building two B-2 ''Stealth'' bombers in fiscal 1991... stalls the rail-based M-X missile, and cuts troop strength by 100-thousand.

(AUG. 4) UPI - The Texas Coast Guard today reopened parts of Galveston Bay to limited fishing for the first time since a barge-tanker collision closed the bay last weekend. Officials raised their estimate to 700-thousand gallons from the 500-thousand initially reported.

(AUG. 4) UPI - An unprecedented visit by Soviet sailors to a U-S naval base in San Diego ended on a bad note today. Officials from both navies say they are conducting a joint investigation into a U-S sailor's claim that she was raped by a Soviet sailor while touring one of the visiting Soviet ships.

Congress today sent President Bush legislation aimed at preventing major oil spills and improving clean-up efforts. The measure requires double hulls on tankers and federal intervention in major accidents. Bush was said to be disappointed that Congress didn't ratify an international treaty to hold foreign tankers responsible for their spills in U-S water.

Texas salvage crews lifted a barge damaged in a shipping collision out of Galveston Bay today only to discover the vessel had spilled even more oil than they had suspected. The barge didn't have a drop of oil on board, and officials now say 700-thousand gallons of oil was dumped into the channel... that's up 200-thousand gallons from earlier estimates.

In light of the Galveston oil spill, Texas officials are debating whether to use experimental oil-absorbing microbes in widespread clean-up operations. But a University of Tennessee-Knoxville microbiologist cautioned today that scientists simply do NOT know enough about microbes and that until they do, they should NOT be used routinely.

Plans for early German elections ran into a wall today when Social Democrats in East and West Germany rejected the proposal. A member of the West German opposition Social Democratic Party says there's NO reason for all-German elections to be held on October 14th... seven weeks earlier than originally planned.

HOUSTON (AUG. 5) UPI - The U.S. Customs Service, enforcing the trade embargo imposed after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, detained a Kuwait-flagged vessel carrying butane Saturday, while another Kuwait cargo ship steered away from the United States.

Coast Guard Cmdr. Rex Prosser said the authority to detain the Gas Al Kuwait came from the embargo ordered by Bush in retaliation for Thursday's invasion of tiny, oil-rich Kuwait.

The Gas Al Kuwait, carrying an undetermined amount of butane, was detained by Customs and the Coast Guard after it docked at an oil off-loading site on the Houston Ship Channel about 12:30 p.m. Saturday, Prosser said.

''Customs detained their clearance to leave the port and the vessel may offload its cargo before proceeding to an anchorage (Bolivar Roads Anchorage) a couple of miles off the Galveston coast,'' he said.

''The ship is the standard-size gas carrier and was expected to offload Saturday - although it'll take 24 hours - before mooring and awaiting further instructions.''

Another Kuwait-flagged ship, the Al Mubarakiah, was carrying a shipment of rice, machinery and drilling equipment, and was in international waters off the coast of Galveston Friday before changing its course away from the United States. Prosser said the ship apparently steered away because of the embargo.

He said the ship's whereabouts were not known as of late Saturday afternoon.

The Lily Pacific, flagged in Singapore but chartered by Kuwait, also was believed to carrying butane, but had not contacted officials as of late Saturday.

The vessels were among 43 at one time blocked from entering the ship channel by an oil spill in Galveston Bay.

More than 13 million gallons of Iraqi oil were seized from a ship in Corpus Christi Thursday. The oil was seized from the Swedish lightering vessel Hellespont Dignity in the Port of Corpus Christi, Customs officials said.

The 807-foot vessel itself was not confiscated.

After Bush established the trade embargo, the Customs Service said ''ordered that inspectors seize all imports and allow no entry of goods or services of Iraqi origin, including crude and refined petroleum products.''

The government also said that all Iraqi, as well as Kuwaiti, ships and cargo are nonetheless subject to inspection.

''If oil comes in from Kuwait we want to make sure its from Kuwait and not Iraq,'' said Edward Kittredge, a spokesman for the Customs Service. ''We want to make sure Iraq is not putting its oil on Kuwaiti ships.''

EUGENE, OR (AUG. 4) UPI - A teenager splashed with gasoline in a treehouse and set afire by one of his friends was in serious condition Saturday with burns over 12 percent of his body, officials said.

Two of the victim's friends, including the one who set him afire, told police the boy agreed to be ignited with a cigarette lighter.

Andre Laroque, 13, was in the Oregon Burn Center at Emanual Hospital in Portland with burns on his face, right arm and chest.

Police said Laroque's 12-year-old friend was charged with first-degree arson and first-degree assault after he admitted he set Laroque's clothes on fire.

According to police reports, the 12-year-old told police he was high from smelling gasoline fumes and did not know what he was doing at the time of the incident.

Laroque, the 12-year-old, and a 10-year-old boy were playing with a 16-ounce plastic jug of gasoline in the 12-year-old's treehouse Thursday night.

Police said the 12-year-old kicked Laroque either accidentally or on purpose, splashing the liqued onto Laroque, who was holding the jug.

Laroque's two friends told police that the 12-year-old boy then asked Laroque if he could use the cigarette lighter he had to set Laroque's clothes on fire, and Laroque agreed.

Laroque told police he remembered being splashed by gasoline but nothing else about his burns.

(AUG. 4) UPI - Iraq has tightened its grip on Kuwait. Baghdad announced today that it has installed a military government to oversee its tiny oil-rich neighbor and says it plans on raising a Kuwaiti army to protect the new leaders. Diplomatic moves to de-fuse tensions fizzled out when Jordan and Saudi Arabia canceled tomorrow's emergency summit on grounds that Kuwaiti and Iraqi leaders refused to negotiate.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says the Bush adminstration does NOT think Iraq plans on blitzing Saudi Arabia... but says the president continues to review his military options should that happen. Fitzwater says Bush also is concerned about the safety of American citizens in Kuwait... including at least 26 missing American oil workers.

Senators risked a presidential veto today by cutting back on funding for the controversial ''Star Wars'' anti-missile program. Supporters cut funding by nearly half... to 129-Million dollars, even though opponents argued that the program could protect America from what they see as the biggest threat facing the world today... the Middle East.

Congress has taken steps to make sure the government doesn't run out of money while lawmakers are on vacation. Congress approved and sent to the White House today a bill that temporarily increases the national debt limit to three-pointTRILLION dollars... a short-term boost of 72-BILLION dollars.

Pentagon spies can now operate commercial businesses to cover their activities. The Senate today passed legislation that for the first time allows intelligence operatives to run companies. The provision was contained in the 1991 intelligence authorization bill, which provides a classified amount of money for the nation's intelligence agencies.

(AUG. 4) UPI - The Armenian Parliament elected a militant nationalist chairman today amid reports that some vigilantes are ignoring Soviet President Gorbachev's order earlier this week to turn in their weapons. The Soviet news agency Tass says the legislature's choice as chairman heads the Armenian All-National Movement.

Four hours of deliberation today failed to produce a verdict in the cocaine and perjury trial of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry. The jurors decided to work part of the day instead of taking the entire weekend off. They asked the judge this morning to see all exhibits entered as evidence in the trial.

A newspaper in Tampa, Florida, reports that an unidentified dentist with AIDS who probably infected a patient while pulling her teeth may have been practicing in a mid-sized Florida city. If proven, the case would be the first in which a health professional passed the disease to a patient.

MIAMI (AUG. 5) UPI - Police investigating a fender-bender in a parking lot Saturday stumbled onto nearly a ton of cocaine worth about $14 million.

The drugs were packed in boxes stacked neatly in the back of one of the two vehicles involved in the accident, a van abandoned at the scene by its driver, police said.

Police confiscated the van and its cargo of 1,544 pounds of cocaine, but had not found the driver as of late Saturday.

Metro Dade County police spokesman Donald Blocker said the blue van had backed out of the parking lot and struck another car. He said the driver of the car spotted a policeman nearby and summoned the officer to investigate the accident.

''The driver of the van indicated he had to make and phone call and he walked away,'' Blocker said. When the man did not return, the officer decided to search the van.

''It was packed with about 40 cardboard boxes with numerical markings on each one. The officer inspected one of the boxes and found aluminum-foil-wrapped cocaine bricks,'' Blocker said. ''They were very professionally wrapped and had typed markings indicating the contents were guaranteed to be pure and of high quality.''

Neither vehicle was damaged, and Blocker said the cocaine likely would have gone undetected if the driver had stayed at the accident scene.

''The damage on both vehicles was so minor there never would have been a police report written anyway,'' Blocker said. ''There is a very high possibility that the cocaine would not have been found because there would be no reason for him to look in there if the other driver had not panicked.''

Police towed the van to a nearby police station, and were searching for its owner.

(AUG. 4) UPI - Hopes are fading fast that Iraq will bow to global pressure and withdraw from Kuwait. Baghdad unveiled a puppet military government today and says it will announce hand-picked Kuwaiti Cabinet members tomorrow. Official Iraqi sources say a Kuwait army will be raised in order to protect the new government. The Iraqi ambassador in Washington today ''categorically'' denied Baghdad has designs on Saudi Arabia. Even so, Western diplomats report Saudi Arabia, Egypt and the Persian Gulf states have placed their troops on alert.

President Bush continues to review U-S military options in case the Iraqis push on to Saudi Arabia... options that include tactical air strikes against Iraqi forces in Kuwait, bombing runs on Iraq and a naval blockade of Iraqi oil shipments in the Gulf. Bush met with his national security advisors again today... and afterward, White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the president is very concerned about the safety of Americans living in Kuwait.

A number of senators hurried for planes today after the Senate passed a 289-BILLION-dollar Pentagon budget bill in a rare Saturday session. The legislation... approved by a vote of 79-16... makes the first deep post-Cold War military cuts. But changes voted for the ''Star Wars'' missile defense program could subject the bill to a veto by President Bush.

Part of Galveston Bay is now considered safe for fishing again... one week after a tanker-barge collision caused a huge oil spill in the waterway. But Texas Health Department officials kept a ban on shellfish harvesting in effect. (AUG. 4) UPI - The Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge says it killed 47 Cambodian and Vietnamese soldiers in attacks on five Cambodian military outposts. The Khmer Rouge says the attacks took place last month near Cambodia's second-largest city, Battambang... 150 miles northwest of Phnom Penh. There was NO independent confirmation of the report and in the past the Khmer Rouge has exaggerated its exploits.

Yugoslavia's news agency says the former head of the nation's notorious secret police will be tried on genocide charges next month. A military statement released today says Lieutenant General Iulian Vlad took part in the decision to fire on demonstrators across the country last December. The statement says Vlad co-ordinated the government suppression.

The Armenian Parliament has again defied Soviet President Gorbachev - this time by electing a militant nationalist chairman. The official Tass news agency says the Yerevan legislature today elected a man who leads the Armenian All-National Movement. The election comes two days after the body voted to annul a Gorbachev decree that demanded nationalist militants turn in their weapons to Soviet troops within 15 days.

Opposition Social Democrats in East and West Germany today rejected a proposal to speed up the process of unification. East German Prime Minister de Maiziere and West German Chancellor Kohl agreed yesterday to move up unification in time for earlier October 14th elections in hopes of offsetting a crumbling East German economy. The opposition party argues that ruling conservative parties will benefit from earlier elections.

(AUG. 4) UPI - President Bush reviewed military options today as he continues to monitor the Persian Gulf situation. Bush expressed concern for American citizens in the overthrown country of Kuwait during a meeting today with top national security advisers at the Camp David presidential retreat. But a short time later, a State Department spokesman announced all Americans had been accounted for.

Iraq's ambassador to the United States told reporters in Washington today that his country has NO intention of invading Saudi Arabia. And he says all Americans swept up in the Kuwaiti raid are ''free to go.'' The diplomat also said the situation in Kuwait is- in his words- ''back to normal'' and that Baghdad will follow through on its promise to begin withdrawing troops from Kuwait tomorrow unless- QUOTE- ''new threats to security emerge.''

The Senate today followed the House's lead and approved a compromise package to assist state and local authorities in caring for AIDS patients. The legislation authorizes as much as 880-Million dollars next year for the battle against the disease. It includes emergency grants of 275-Million dollars a year for the next two years for cities that have been hit hardest by AIDS.

A congressional report expresses some concern over the use of D-N-A

(AUG. 4) UPI - During a rare Saturday session, senators today approved a measure that bars interstate truck drivers and bus drivers from using radar detectors. The measure is part of a 28-BILLION-dollar transportation appropriations package. The radar ban takes effect within a year unless the Transportation Department determines in the meantime that outlawing the devices would NOT improve highway safety.

Tenants in a New York apartment building were forced to evacuate today after building employees stuffed a box of potentially explosive chemicals into a dumpster. A New York City environmental official says the workers found the chemicals while cleaning a basement apartment of an evicted tenant. Two workers died yesterday from burns they received when another box of chemicals from the apartment exploded.

Florida officials today issued a consumer health alert following the discovery of eight more cocaine-laced bottles of a Colombian soft drink. The tainted bottles are believed to be part of a Colombian drug-smuggling operation and were found at a major distributing house that supplies 15-hundred mobile food vendors in Dade and Broward counties. A 25-year-old Miami man who drank a laced bottle last week is still in a coma.

(AUG. 4) UPI - Three days after Iraqi troops took control of Kuwait, Kuwait's ambassador to the United States is denying reports by his Iraqi counterpart that the situation in Kuwait has returned to normal. The Kuwaiti official also denied Iraq's vow today that it will begin removing its invading force tomorrow.

Iraq's ambassador to the United States says his country has NO intention of continuing its Kuwaiti military campaign into Saudi Arabia. The Bush administration said it doubts Iraq would engage in such an endeavor, but prepared contingency plans in case Iraq renegs on its vow.

President Bush repeated his plea to the Iraqi government today that it remove its forces from Kuwait. His statement came after a meeting with national security advisers to determine the U-S response to further Iraqi aggression.

The Senate today approved its version of the first significant post-Cold War Pentagon budget. The 289-BILLION-dollar spending plan features the rescue of the controversial B-2 stealth bomber and alters the ''Star Wars'' anti-missile program.

Lawmakers in the upper chamber also followed the lead of the House and approved an AIDS spending plan. The measure, which now goes to President Bush, would supply as much as 880-Million dollars to local and state governments to care for people with AIDS.

Tehran radio says Iran is ready to restore ties with Great Britain. Texas officials re-opened the oil-clogged Galveston Bay today... but NO one seemed to be celebrating. The Coast Guard confirms that far more oil than previously thought spilled into the bay after a tanker-barge collision last week... 200-thousand gallons more. Officials now say 716-thousand gallons of oil leaked into the waterway. Environmentalists fear the spill will have a lasting ''invisible'' effect on sensitive marshland areas.

Jurors deciding the fate of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry apparently are taking their roles very seriously. They rejected an offer for a weekend break by putting in half-a-day today... and even worked through lunch. The jurors plan on sorting through the evidence Monday.

WASHINGTON (AUG 5) - The White House was skeptical Sunday over radio reports that Iraq was withdrawing its troops from Kuwait, saying there was no evidence of such a troop pullout.

"The United States continues to seek the immediate, complete and unconditional withdrawal of Iraqi forces from Kuwait and restoration of a legitimate government (in Kuwait). We continue to consider all options in accordance with that policy," said presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater.

Thursday, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein sent tens of thousands of his troops into neighboring, oil-rich Kuwait with which it had a bitter dispute over oil and territory.

The state-controlled radio of the newly formed formed provisional government in Kuwait had announced Sunday that Iraqi trops had begun to withdraw.

"We have no independent or confirmable information on this report," Mr. Fitzwater said.

"Saddam Hussein's actions in the past have raised serious skepticism about his intentions," he added.

The Iraqi troops crossed Kuwait to within a few kilometers (miles) of the border with Saudi Arabia.

Mr. Fitzwater said U.S. officials had no information indicating Iraqi troops had crossed into Saudi territory.

He added that U.S. officials were consulting with members of the U.N. Security Council to seek sanctions against Iraq. He indicated that the Security Council would meet at U.N. headquarters in New York Sunday morning to adopt a resolution calling for sanctions.

President George Bush, who was spending the weekend at Camp David, a presidential retreat near Washington, consulted by telephone with Turkish President Turgut Ozal, Saudi King Fahd, Canadian Prime MInister Brian Mulroney and the ousted emir of Kuwait.

RIYADH (AUG 5) - Saudi Arabia's military forces were Sunday on a state of alert following Iraq's invasion Thursday of Kuwait, reliable sources here said.

But they excluded any Iraqi military operation against the kingdom, which has an armed forces strength of nearly 66,000 men backed by 56,000 paramilitary national guardsmen, according to the London-based International Institute for Strategic Studies.

Iraqi troops on Saturday entered the Kuwaiti-administered segment of the neutral zone, which Kuwait shares with Saudi Arabia, and were stationed seven kilometers (4.3 miles) from the Saudi frontier, an Agence France-Presse correspondent said.

But an official Iraqi spokesman strongly denied that Iraqi forces had entered the netural zone -- a 5,700-square-kilometer (2,200 square-mile) desert enclave that is one of the richest oil regions in the world.

U.S. President George Bush bluntly warned Iraq late Friday against venturing into Saudi Arabia.

Iraq invaded Kuwait early Thursday after Iraqi-Kuwait talks failed to resolve a bitter dispute over oil production quotas and border markings. It began withdrawing its forces on Sunday morning, the official Iraqi news agency INA reported.

ANKARA (AUG 5) - Iraq's First Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yasin Ramadan brought a message Sunday from President Saddam Hussein to Turkish President Turgut Ozal and said ''Iraq's withdrawal from Kuwait will not take long, but the return of al-Sabah family to rule will be impossible''.

''The withdrawal might take a few days or a few weeks depending om the implementation of a timetable arranged between Iraq and the new Kuwaiti government,'' Ramadan told a news conference before his departure.

''But any possible (military) intervention in Kuwait will be considered as if it were done to Iraq,'' he warned.

He vowed that economic sanctions or foreign military intervention would not deter Iraq and would only harm those who resorted to such means.

''They did this (sanctions) in 1972 when Iraq nationalised the oil wells,'' Ramadan said. ''What was the result?''

DAMASCUS (AUG 5) - Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati discussed with top Syrian leaders here Sunday the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and on efforts to try to get Iraq to pull its troops out of that country, Damascus said.

In a statement, Syrian presidential spokesman Jibrane Kourieh said Velayati handed a letter from President Hashemi Rafsanjani to President Hafez Assad, who issued a reply to be taken back to Teheran.

Velayati had arrived here earlier Sunday for a one-day visit.

''Within the framework of the strong relations between the two countries and their continuing contacts, Velayati delivered a letter concerning the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, and its repercussions,'' Kourieh said.

During the meeting which was attended by Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa, Syrian State Minister for Foreign Affairs Nasser Qaddour, and Iranian ambassador Ali Akhtari ''talks were about the efforts being displayed to achieve the withdrawal of Iraqi troops from Kuwait and to eliminate the consequences of this invasion''.

Kourieh did not elaborate.

In another development, it was announced here that Assad received a phone call from Jordanian King Hussein, and that the two leaders discussed the situation between Iraq and Kuwait.

Jordanian Premier Mudr Badran is expected in Damascus on Monday to head, together with his Syrian counterpart Mahmoud al-Zouebi, the meetings of the regular session of the supreme Syrian-Jordanian Coordination Committee.

Badran will be accompanied by several ministers, including Foreign Minister and Deputy Premier Marwan al-Qassem.

WASHINGTON (AUG 5) - The United States expressed scepticism here Sunday about Iraq's announcement that it was starting to withdraw its invasion forces from Kuwait, while the Kuwaiti embassy in Washington accused Baghdad of playing a ''game''.

Amid the developments in the Iraq-Kuwait crisis, the White House said President George Bush was in constant telephone contact with world leaders to discuss the situation, while reports said that Saudi Arabia had ordered a general mobilisation.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater told the press the U.S. had no ''independent or confirmed information'' about an Iraqi pullout.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's actions gave cause for ''serious scepticism'' about his intentions, Fitzwater said.

The U.S. still demanded the unconditional withdrawal of Iraqi troops and the restoration of the legitimate government of the Kuwaiti sheikdom, Fitzwater said, adding that Washington was looking at ''all options'' in dealing with the crisis.

Earlier Sunday, the Iraqi News Agency Ina said an urgent message was sent to the U.N. Security Council officially informing it of the start of a phased withdrawal from Kuwait.

At the same time, a military communique in Baghdad said Hussein had ordered the establishment of 11 new military divisions, including one armoured, one presidential guards and nine infantry.

These developments drew a sharp condemnation of Iraq from a Kuwaiti embassy spokesman in Washington.

''They are playing a game,'' the spokesman said. ''They are still in the capital, they are still on the border with Saudi Arabia.''

At the same time about the reports of the Iraqi troop pullout announcement, a Saudi state radio broadcast monitored in Israel said the Riyadh government had issue a mobilisation order.

It called on all young men of service age to report to arms, the mobilisation order specifically directed at the Saudi air force, the radio said.

According to the Jaffe Institute for Strategic Studies in Tel Aviv, Saudi Arabia has about 95,000 men already under arms, including the 15,000 men in the highly-advanced air force.

Parallel to the developments, the Gulf region remained a beehive of top-level diplomatic activity.

Iraqi envoys were touring Arab countries to deliver messages from Saddam Hussein while Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati was conferring with Syrian leaders in Damascus on the situation.

At the same time, the new Iraqi-installed regime in Kuwait warned foreign countries slapping sanctions against Kuwait, indicating that foreign nationals could be put in danger.

Walid Saud Mohammed Abdullah, foreign minister of the ''free provisional government'' issued a statement - carried by the Iraqi News Agency - which said the foreign countries ''should remember that they have their citizens and interests in Kuwait.

''If they (foreign countries) insisted on attacking Kuwait or Iraq or cause harm to the legitimate interests of Kuwait or Iraq, Kuwait will reconsider the methods of dealing with these countries,'' it said.

The statement came in response to a concerted Western reaction to the Iraqi invasion which has included, among other steps, an arms embargo against Iraq, a blocking of foreign Kuwaiti assets to keep them out of Baghdad's reach, and a European Community embargo on Iraqi oil and a suspension of all economic, technological and military cooperation with Baghdad.

Fitzwater said Sunday that Bush, in his ''telephone diplomacy'' with foreign leaders, was seeking still tougher economic sanctions against Iraq.

At the same time, the Washington Post reported Sunday that the U.S. was keeping its military options open in the event of an Iraqi invasion of Saudi Arabia and was beefing up its naval and air presence in the Gulf.

NEW DELHI (AUG 5) - A bomb ripped through a cinema Sunday, killing at least three people and leaving a dozen injured in northern Haryana state, the Press Trust of India (PTI) said.

The injured were hospitalised, mostly in serious condition, officials quoted by PTI said.

No one claimed responsibility for the bombing, which left at least three dead and took place during an afternoon show in the town of Kurukshetra, the officials said.

Haryana neigbours the Sikh-majority state of Punjab, where some 1,400 people have died this year in violence linked to a Sikh campaign for an independent homeland.

Sikh militants in the past had been known to strike in the predominantly Hindu state of Haryana.

PTI said Haryana state governor Danik Mandal, who rushed to the site, condemned the "ghastly and inhuman act of terrorists," a commonly used official term in India for Sikh militants in the Punjab or Moslem separatists in Kashmir.

Mr. Mandal appealed to the people of Haryana not to allow the communal harmony in the state to be disturbed by the incident.

KATHMANDU (AUG 5) - India has agreed to reopen the last three transit points it closed 17 months ago along its border with Nepal, Nepalese Prime Minister Krishna Prasad Bhattarai said here Sunday.

Mr. Bhattarai said after meeting with Indian Foreign Minister Inder Kumar Gujral that India had agreed to open three more transit points along their common border and had pledged to resolve any remaining differences.

The meeting comes less than two months after Nepal's reformist premier negotiated an end to a 15-month trade and transit dispute between the two countries, which amounted to a virtual Indian blockade of this landlocked kingdom.

A foreign ministry spokesman said the three entry points were in Banbasa, Nepalgunj and Gauriphanta, on Nepal's southeastern border with India.

Mr. Gujral, here on a three-day visit, said after a first round of talks there were "no outstanding issues now between India and Nepal," adding "India will always assist and support Nepal economically."

Mr. Bhattarai said "there is not much of a problem between our two countries," and described Mr. Kumar's trip here as "essentially a goodwill visit."

He added that he had asked India to extend railway lines into Nepal from Lumbini, the birthplace of Lord Gautam Buddha, some 290 kilometers (180 miles) southwest of here, and the Indian towns of Raxaul and Sindhuli.

Such railway links "would be tremendously helpful to develop our economy," Mr. Bhattarai said.

Indo-Pakistani relations and the situation in Kuwait were also raised in the talks, which will resume Monday, he added.

Mr. Gujral said a team of Indian rail experts would visit Kathmandu soon to study the proposed railway project.

TUNIS (AUG 5) - Kuwaiti embassies in Tunis, Vienna and Algiers on Sunday strongly denounced the Iraqi-installed Kuwaiti government, saying it did not have the support of the people of Kuwait.

Ambassador Abdelmohssen Nasser Al-Jiaane in Tunis said in a press communique that the Baghdad-backed provisional government in Kuwait is led by the son-in-law and personal guard of Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, Colonel Ala'a Hussein Ali. Iraq has denied that the two men are related, even distantly.

The Kuwaiti ambassador here, who is also Kuwait's representative to the Arab League, was dismissed as ambassador on Thursday immediately after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

The Kuwaiti embassies in Algeria and Austria denounced the provisional authorities in Kuwait as a "puppet government."

The Kuwaiti embassy in Algiers issued a statement calling on the international community to "not stand by paralysed and powerless" after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and for Arab countries to put an end to the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait.

In Vienna, the Kuwaiti embassy issued a statement saying it refused to recognise the "so-called new Kuwaiti government created by the Iraqi regime," and reaffirmed its loyalty to the ousted Kuwaiti emir, Sheik Jaber al-Ahmad Al-Sabah.

The Kuwaiti embassy in Vienna said the provisional government in Kuwait was "puppet government" that would not be supported by the Kuwaiti people.

In Algiers, the Kuwaiti embassy called on the Arab league to act upon its resolution Friday condamning the "Iraqi aggression" and demanding that Iraq withdraw "immediately and unconditionally" its troops from Kuwait.

The embassy in Algiers said the "pseudo-provisional government" and the "Kuwaiti popular army" are in fact made up of Iraqi army officers led by Mr. Hussein's son-in-law.

The embassy guarded against "any form of relations or collaboration" with the "puppet government" in Kuwait, saying it was a "screen for the pillaging of Kuwait's riches."

PORT MORESBY (AUG 5) - The first round of the Bougainville peace talks ended inconclusively late Sunday on board the truce ship HMNZS Endeavour.

Delegates from the Papua New Guinea government and rebel leaders agreed that dialogue should continue but political declarations relating to the future status of Bougainville should be deferred, Australian Associated Press said.

Rebel leaders on Bougainville, an island province 1,000 kilometers (620 miles) east of Port Moresby, declared unilateral independence on May 17.

In a joint communique issued Sunday the two chief negotiators, PNG Foreign Minister Sir Michael Somare and provincial premier Joseph Kabui, said talks would resume "within eight weeks".

"They agreed the long term political status of Bougainville is to be addressed as part of the continuing dialogue," the statement said. "Meanwhile all political declarations with respect to that future status are deferred."

According to the accord, the national government confirmed that "at the earliest opportunity it would take all practical steps consistent with the constitution of Papua New Guinea to bring about the return of services to Bougainville."

National government services -- including health care, education and telecommunications -- deteriorated markedly during the 20-month rebellion and were severed completely when Bougainville declared its independence.

Both sides have been anxious to restore services -- the government as an essential step towards re-establishing authority over the province, and the rebel authorities to alleviate shortages and to prove that they can provide for the island.

However, the security of public servants who return to the island has been a sticking point. The national government insists the return of public servants must be accompanied by a return of police to the province, but Bougainville leaders say they can guarantee the officials' safety without outside help.

During the talks, the government said the police force could be made up of Bougainvilleans.

The commmunique said both sides agreed services should be returned "as a matter of urgent priority," but gave no indication when this could occur.

"The government of Papua New Guinea will consult regularly with the present Bougainville delegation on the restoration of services," it said.

"The two delegations agreed on the desirability of the full participation of Bougainvilleans in future security arrangements on Bougainville."

The communique thanked the New Zealand government for its assistance in providing three naval vessels, and support facilities, as a neutral base for the talks.

PARIS (AUG 5) - The Kuwaiti emir, Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmad al-Sabah, has called on his people to resist Iraqi occupation and said his country was not alone in the struggle, the Kuwaiti news agency KUNA reported here Sunday.

"The Iraqi aggressor will not be able to destroy Kuwait's national unity," the agency's Paris office quoted Sheikh Jaber as saying.

"With regrets, I must state that the aggressor is a neighbour that we have supported in difficult times," the emir said, apparently referring to Kuwaiti backing for Baghdad in the Iran-Iraq war.

"All the Arabs and Moslems are on our side, as well as the rest of the world which has not hesitated to condemn the aggression," he said.

KUNA said Kuwaiti radio had broadcast the message of Sheikh Jaber, who has reportedly taken refuge in Saudi Arabia since Thursday's invasion. It did not say from where the radio was broadcasting.

The emir Sunday sent an envoy, Sheikh Doueij Jaber al-Ali, to Damascus to deliver a message to Syrian President Hafez al-Assad, a longstanding rival of Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein, KUNA said.

An Iraqi-backed provisional government has been set up in Kuwait since the invasion, with Baghdad vowing that it would not allow the return of the ruling Al-Sabah family.

ISLAMABAD (AUG 5) - The mujahedeen resistance Afghan Interim Government (AIG) on Sunday condemned Iraq's invasion of Kuwait as a violation of human and Islamic principles and called on Kuwaitis to resist.

Abdul Rasool Sayyaf, the prime minister of the Pakistan-based rebel government, demanded in a statement the "immediate and unconditional withdrawal" of Iraqi forces from Kuwait and warned Baghdad against any attempt to expand its "military intervention."

He also called on Kuwaitis "never to submit to the puppet regime installed by Iraqi Ba'athist invaders."

"Despite our reservations about certain political instances of Kuwait, we strongly condemn Iraq's invasion which is a flagrant violation of all human and Islamic principles," he said.

Mr. Sayyaf, who heads the pro-Saudi Ittihad-i-Islami faction, said no Moslem would tolerate "further advance" of Iraqi forces, particularly into Saudi Arabian territory.

Saudi Arabia, along with the United States, has given financial support to the mujahedeen in their struggle to topple the Soviet-backed Afghan government.

Kabul reacted cautiously Saturday to the Iraqi invasion, expressing concern over "developments leading to factionalism and dissension" among Arab and Moslem countries.

It did not refer directly to the invasion on Thursday, nor did it condemn Baghdad, a Kabul ally.

Iraq has backed Kabul's attempt to re-enter the Organisation of Islamic Conference, and a foreign ministry spokesman in Kabul said efforts were under way to reopen Iraq's embassy in the Afghan capital.

MANAMA (AUG 5) - Thousands of Kuwaiti nationals, who were outside their country for the summer holidays when Iraq invaded Kuwait, have been stranded in neighbouring Gulf states hoping to return to their homeland as soon as possible.

Many were in European and southeast Asian countries when Iraqi troops marched into Kuwaiti territory at dawn on Thursday and within hours took conrol of the tiny emirate.

The Bahrain daily Al-Ayam quoted Sunday ''reliable Kuwaiti sources'' as saying there were 300,000 Kuwaiti citizens in Saudi Arabia who have not been able to return home.

Kuwait's Amir Sheikh Jaber al-Sabah and members of his government are believed to be staying in Saudi Arabia.

There are an estimated 90 Kuwaiti families in Bahrain staying at hotels or housing compounds provided by the Kuwaiti embassy here.

In neighbouring United Arab Emirates (Uae) several hundred Kuwaitis, who were holidaying abroad, have landed in Abu Dhabi and Dubai, waiting for any means of transport to reach their homeland.

About 100 Kuwaitis have made Abu Dhabi a temporary residence while about 700 have chosen Dubai, a Kuwaiti diplomat there said.

''We have chosen the Uae because it is close to Kuwait and we feel at home here. But still we want to return home as fast as possible to see our families,'' 65-year-old Tahir Mohammed told Dubai's Khaleej Times newspaper.

Khalid Eissa, 29, said: ''We are in a difficult situation due to the fact that we have our families with us and do not have any money. This is in addition to our anxiety about our loved ones back home.''

Mashary Youssef al-Arefan, who was in Kuwait on the day of the Iraqi invasion, told the Bahrain daily Akhbar al-Khaleej he saw about six Iraqi jets bomb the amir's palace, the crown prince's palace and the people's palace.

''It was exactly like Beirut during the heavy shelling between the Moslem and Christian sectors of the capital,'' said another witness, a frequent visitor to the Lebanese capital, who said rockets fell on the city and automatic rifle and machine-gun fire was heard.

There were reports here of looting by Iraqi soldiers. The daily Al Ayam quoted Bahraini witnesses as saying Iraqi army officers were driving confiscated Kuwaiti Mercedes cars in the capital's streets.

The newspaper quoted ''reliable sources'' in Kuwait as saying the situation in the city was ''highly dangerous''. The sources said gunfire is still heard every now and then in parts of Kuwait.

WASHINGTON (AUG 5) - Kuwaiti Ambassador to the United States Saud Nasir Al-Sabah Sunday again urged U.S. military intervention against Iraq which he said was maintaining its invasion forces in Kuwait.

Speaking in a television interview, Mr. Al-Sabah said that Iraq has "a massive presence in Kuwait. Our sources indicate that by no means are the Iraqis withdrawing there. They're dug in in my country, in the southern border."

"There is a complete conspiracy now, to dominate the country," he said.

(The Iraqi News Agency reported that Iraqi troops began withdrawing from Kuwait at 0400 Gmt Sunday.)

Asked if he wanted the United States and other industrialised nations to mount a military operation against the Iraqi invasion, the ambassador replied: "As I've said before, yes I do.

He maintained that Iraqi President Saddam Hussein "can only understand force."

Asked whether Iraq needed to invade Saudi Arabia to control Saudi oil-production levels and ultimately the world price of oil, the ambassador replied:

"If you look at the map, where his troops are now, they are sitting on top of some Saudi Arabian oil, which is in the Kuwait-Saudi partition zone, which is called the neutral zone."

He said there were "no guarantees" that a long-term process of economic sanctions and diplomatic pressure would work.

Mr. Saud said he did not believe the Arab nations were capable of resolving the crisis sparked by Baghdad's invasion.

CAIRO (AUG. 5) - The Organisation of the Islamic Conference (OIC) urged the Soviet Union here Sunday to seek a guarantee from Israel that Soviet Jews would not settle in the Israeli-occupied territories.

The 45-member OIC, in a resolution adopted at its 19th ministerial meeting, also appealed to the Soviet Union and Western countries to allow Jews leaving the Soviet Union to relocate in countries other than Israel.

The OIC resolution asked Moscow to "urge Israel to offer guarantees that it shall not settle Soviet Jewish immigrants in the occupied Palestinian territories," Jerusalem or the Golan Heights.

Noting that the Soviet Union is "generally supportive of the Palestinian cause," the resolution said Soviet Jewish immigration to the occupied territories "constitutes a violation of international laws."

The OIC resolution said that Isreal refuses to "recognise the right of the Palestinian refugees to return to their homeland," which is a fundamental right according to the universal declaration of human rights.

Settling Soviet Jews in the occupied territories "contradicts the emigrant's freedom to choose the country in which he wishes to settle," the resolution said, adding that the United States "limits the entry" of Jewish immigrants to the United States and that transit centres in Europe have been closed in order to "compel" Jews to go to Israel.

Israel has said that it does not have a policy of sending Soviet Jews in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip but that the immigrants are free to settle where they want.

The OIC also asked the Soviet Union not to deprive Jewish emigrants of their Soviet nationality and allow them to return home if they desire.

The OIC called on Washington to lift restrictions on Jewish immigration, stop assistance supporting resettlement in the occupied territories, and warn that tax-exemption of funds raised in the United States to support Jewish resettlement projects contradicts U.S. policy on the question.

In an appeal to European Economic Community countries, the OIC requested that Jewish immigrants be allowed to settle in Europe if they desire, and that transit stations for emigrants be re-opened.

The OIC, whose meeting here ended Sunday, includes Islamic nations from the Middle East, Africa, and Asia as well as the Palestine Liberation Organisation.

The OIC said Sunday that "the Palestinian problem is the priority of Moslems."

LONDON (AUG. 5) - Britain is seriously considering closing its embassy in war-torn Monrovia, which has been without fresh food, electricity, water and communications for several weeks, the Foreign Office said Sunday.

The Foreign Office said the question of closing the British mission in the Liberian capital was under "active review."

Most Britons left Liberia two months ago to escape the fighting.

The Foreign Office said that only about 60 British citizens remained in Liberia and "many of them are not in the capital."

"These are people who have lived in Liberia for years and have made clear they have no intention of leaving," the Foreign Office said.

TEHERAN (AUG. 5) - Iran's judiciary chief Sunday denounced Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, saying ''such aggression is in no way acceptable'', it was reported by the nation's Irna news agency.

Ayatollah Mohammad Yazdi told a meeting of judicial officials that disputes between two countries cannot be resolved ''by resorting to force'', it was reported.

He noted that international measures had been taken against Iraq and that ''we are yet to receive any news of the so-called revolutionary move inside Kuwait''.

Iran and Iraq agreed two years ago to a ceasefire to their eight-year war.

Early last month in Geneva, the foreign ministers of the two countries met face to face for the first time since the ceasefire for talks aimed at achieving a peace treaty.

Yazdi was quoted by Irna as saying the peace talks with Iraq were proceeding normally.

LONDON (AUG 5) - Arthur Scargill, president of Britain's National Union of Miners, on Sunday strongly denied claims that British miners accepted Libyan aid during their 1984-85 strike, as reported in the Sunday Times.

Mr. Scargill denied the reported assertion by Libyan leader Colonel Moamer that Kadhafi he gave money to the union for "humanitarian reasons" after meeting with NUM official Roger Windsor in October 1984.

Lybian union official Mohamed Abdullah Ali Al-Khalandi said a cheque for 200,000 dollars was sent to the union.

"The suggestion that a cheque was made payable to the NUM and cashed cannot possibly be true," Mr. Scargill told journalists, saying that the union's funds were sequestered during the strike.

A member of the internal NUM committee that is investigating the handling of union finances during the strike said Saturday night that the committee might soon visit Tripoli to question Lybian leaders.

LAGOS (AUG. 5) - The Nigerian military government is likely to send three additional naval ships to ensure the safety of its citizens in Liberia, the News Agency of Nigeria (NAN) reported here Sunday.

The nation's head of the navy, Rear Admiral Murtala Nyako, and some other naval top officials inspected the ships here Sunday, NAN said.

Two Nigerian frigates, accompanied by a tug, had docked in Freetown last Thursday after failing to evacuate some 3,000 Nigerians from the war-torn West African nation.

The frigates anchored off the Liberian coast for eight days but decided not to go ahead with the evacuation because of fighting in Monrovia.

President Ibrahim Babangida left here Sunday for Banjul to participate in a mini-Ecowas summit on the crisis, scheduled to begin Monday in the Gambian capital.

NICOSIA (AUG. 5) - Iraq on Sunday announced the first phase of its military withdrawal from Kuwait as the international community stepped up economic sanctions to protest the Iraqi invasion.

Washington, which has access to satellite data of the region, voiced scepticism over the withdrawal and there was no independent confirmation of it from witnesses in Kuwait.

Iraqi television showed columns of tanks and trucks and said they were returning home over the Kuwaiti border while Iraqi First Deputy Prime Minister Taha Yassin Ramadan said the withdrawal would take "days or weeks."

Units of the Kuwaiti "popular army," which has reportedly attracted 140,000 Iraqi volunteers, entered the emirate on Saturday.

The Iraqi-installed Kuwaiti provisional government, made up of nine officers, addressed an implicit warning that foreign nationals could be endangered if third countries intervened.

"Countries that resort to retaliatory action against the government of free Kuwait or brotherly Iraq should remember they have interests and citizens in Kuwait," it said.

A group of four Swedish and Finnish nationals who left Kuwait said Sunday that Iraqi troops were not allowing U.S. and British citizens to leave the emirate, which has 3,000 American residents and another 3,000 Britons.

Mr. Ramadan, on a visit to Ankara aimed at preventing Turkey from closing an Iraqi pipeline across its territory, said Iraq would defend Kuwait if the emirate came under attack.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein meanwhile announced the formation of 11 new army divisions, raising the military to the same strength as at the end of the Gulf war with Iran in August 1988.

Japan on Sunday banned oil imports from Iraq and Kuwait and cut off all trade, credit and other commercial links with Baghdad, following Washington and the European Economic Community with harsh sanctions for Thursday's invasion.

With the economic noose tightening, China joined the Soviet Union in banning arms sales to Iraq, which invaded its southern neighbour in a dispute over oil and borders.

Mr. Ramadan warned Turkey that closure of the Iraqi pipeline, which is vital to Baghdad's economy, would harm relations between the two countries. He described his mission to Ankara as successful.

Hailing the international campaign against Iraq, the Kuwaiti emir, Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmad al-Sabah, called on his people to resist Iraqi occupation and said his country was not alone in the struggle.

"With regrets, I must state that the aggressor is a neighbour that we have supported in difficult times," said the emir, apparently referring to Kuwait's support for Baghdad in the Gulf conflict.

Saudi Arabia's military forces were on alert Sunday, reliable sources in Riyadh said, although they ruled out any Iraqi military operation against the oil-rich kingdom.

U.S. President George Bush has warned Iraq against venturing into Saudi Arabia.

The Kuwaiti provisional administration Sunday staked its claim for control of diplomatic missions abroad, where officials denounced what they called the Iraqi-installed "puppet government."

The head of the government, Colonel Ala'a Hussein Ali, warned that those who stayed loyal to the emir would be recalled and have their assets seized.

The interior ministry said the curfew imposed Friday was being eased and would only remain in effect from 9 p.m. until 7.30 a.m. Residents said the curfew was not being tightly enforced.

Analysts in the region said Iraq aimed to transform Kuwait into a protectorate by setting up the new administration, with which it was likely to enter one-sided negotiations on their disputed border.

On the diplomatic front, Mr. Hussein met Sunday with PLO leader Yasser Arafat. The Palestine Liberation Organisation, along with Jordan, Sudan and Yemen, voted against an Arab League resolution condemning the Iraqi invasion.

King Hussein of Jordan said he refused to accept Friday's resolution because he feared it could prompt non-Arab intervention.

ABERDEEN, SCOTLAND (AUG. 5) - Union officials said an unlimited wildcat strike on North Sea oil and gas wells was "overwhelmingly" followed Sunday while the managements at two oil companies reported only limited responses.

It was not immediately possible to verify any of the claims.

A spokesman for Shell said that the strike call received "a very limited response" from workers.

Shell said its production on North Sea oil rigs was unaffected by the strike and British Petroleum likewise said most of its rigs were unaffected.

The striking workers on a hundred or so rigs and in oilfields from the Shetland Islands in Scotland to East Anglia in southeastern England called the strike to press demands for safer working conditions and to protest the dismissal Saturday of some 1,000 Shell contract workers who had staged a strike of their own.

The contract workers had refused on Thursday to leave North Sea oil rigs to protest safety conditions and to demand recognition of their union.

Shell management warned the strikers that they would be "automatically dismissed" if they did not return to land by Saturday at noon.

PARIS (AUG. 5) - France on Sunday announced an immediate embargo on imports of oil from Iraq and Kuwait.

A statement from Prime Minister Michel Rocard said the embargo followed "the intervention of Iraqi forces in Kuwait and the declaration (of an economic embargo) by the European Community and its member states".

A government source said imports of Iraqi crude had fallen slightly over the past three years to a total of 5.7 million tonnes in 1989. Some 2.7 million tonnes was imported in the first half of 1990. Hardly any Kuwaiti crude oil was imported.

France spent 5.3 billion francs (1.07 billion dollars) on a range of Iraqi petroleum products in 1989.

SIDON, LEBANON (AUG. 5) - Red Cross teams Sunday evacuated the bodies of five militiamen killed in clashes between rival Shiite groups in south Lebanon, raising to 86 the number of dead recovered in a three-day operation.

The latest bodies bo be recovered were those of two militiamen of the pro-Syrian Shiite group Amal and of three members of the Syrian Social Nationalist Party, a Lebanese secular group fighting alongside Amal.

At least 222 people have been killed and 410 wounded in the three-week-old battle between Amal and its Iranian-backed rival Hezbollah.

The dead include 55 fighters of the PLO's mainstream Fatah group which was deployed as a buffer force in the Iqlim al-Touffah mountains, southeast of this port city, and has halted Hezbollah's advance.

The International Committee of the Red Cross evacuated 59 bodies from the battleground on Friday and another 22 bodies on Saturday. They had been abandoned for several days.

MOSCOW (AUG. 5) - Soviet deputy Foreign Minister Alexander Bolonogov Sunday met with Iraqi Ambassador Ghafil Jassim Hussein to discuss Baghdad's invasion of Kuwait, Tass news agency reported.

The ambassador handed him a message from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein in response to a message earlier sent to him by the Soviet leadership, Tass said.

Mr. Bolonogov stressed the importance attached by the Soviet Union to the prompt evacuation of Iraqi forces from Kuwait.

DAMASCUS (AUG. 5) - Syrian President Hafez al-Assad and Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati held talks here Sunday on the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, Syrian television reported.

Mr. Velayati, on a 24-hour visit to Damascus, delivered a message from Iran's President Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani on the repercussions of Thursday's invasion.

Both Iran and Syria have condemned the invasion and called for a withdrawal of Iraqi troops from the Gulf emirate.

Mr. Velayati was also expected to meet here with a delegation of officials from the Iranian-backed Lebanese Shiite group Hezbollah.

The group has been pitted in battle in southern Lebanon against its Shiite rivals in the pro-Syrian movement Amal since mid-July. At least 222 people have been killed in the fighting.

Syria and Iran played key roles in the liberation in April of two U.S. hostages, Robert Polhill and Frank Reed. Pro-Iranian groups are believed to be holding most of the 15 Western hostages still missing in Lebanon.

HARBEL, LIBERIA (AUG. 5) - Charles Taylor's rebels supported an evacuation of U.S. personnel from Liberia on Sunday and announced that a breakaway rebel force had taken hostages in the capital.

Guerrillas of the National Patriotic Front of Lieria (NPFL) had gone into Monrovia to try to release the hostages captured by Prince Johnson, a renegade from the NPFL, who has launched his own bid to take power.

"I have ordered my army into the city of Monrovia since this dangerous development..and I will bring under control shortly this terrorist Prince Johnson," Mr. Taylor said.

No details were released about the identity of the hostages.

Mr. Johnson had Saturday night reportedly threatened to take hostages to try to provoke an international incident as Nigeria considered intervening to end the bloodshed in Liberia, where rebels are fighting to topple President Samuel Doe.

"The top priority is the release of the hostages now,' a spokesman for Mr. Taylor said. "The war is on but the lives of the people is more important, be they American, Japanese or whatever.' he could not say what nationality the hostages were.

"The United States government informed us last night of the intent to evacuate citizens,." the spokesman said.

"The exercise now going on was agreed upon by both parties."

Washington had not specified the timing of the operation, which led to some confusion Sunday morning. One unit commander told AFP his men had fired on a helicopter.

Spokesman Eric Scott said the United States had contacted Mr. Taylor again Sunday about the evacuation.

"Every government has an obligation to protect its nationals," Mr. Scott told reporters.

"We have from time to time evacuted foreigners who have expressed a wish to leave,' he said, adding that support for the U.S. move was consistent with the NPFL's own policy.

Washington had from the start said the three warships carrying some 2,000 Marines would be used for evacuations only, Mr. Scott said.

From behind rebel lines four helicopters could be seen over the capital evacuating U.S. personnel.

Rebels took this correspondent to the palm-fringed beach, just south of Monrovia, from where two U.S. warships could be seen on the horizon.

The helicopters, flying in pairs, were seen landing on a vessel with the executive mansion, where President Doe is believed to be holed up, silhouetted in the background and overlooking the sea.

The helicopters had not ventured as far as the U.S. government's Voice of America radio station, about 30 kilometres (2O miles) north of Monrovia, by late afternoon.

Nine thousand refugees have taken shelter at the radio main facility in West Africa, but all U.S. citizens had already left weeks ago.

The Marines had not gone either to the massive Omega navigation centre, built by the United States in 1973 as one of only half a dozen such facilities around the world to enable ships and lanes to pinpoint their positions. No U.S. citizens remain there.

Mr. Taylor, in a statement about the hostages issued here at his headquarters in the Firestone rubber plantation, said his "government leaves open the option to seek special professional assistance from friendly countries ... Should our efforts to move in and control the problem, prove to be inadequate.

"Prince Johnson, realising that my forces have surrounded him, and Samuel Doe in Monrovia with no way out, seeks to confuse the situation to rescue himself. There is no escape for him or Doe now.'

Sources close to Mr. Taylor noted the "coincidence" of the hostage-taking with the U.S. evacuations, hinting that it was an ideal excuse for Washington to step in.

Mr. Taylor has accused the United States of covertly backing Mr. Johnson, who he says fled from the NPFL when a warrant was issued for his arrest on murder charges.

It has been alleged that Washington refused to deal with Mr. Taylor, a former civil servant who went to live in the United States after being accused of a million dollar fraud, because NPFL men have been trained in Libya.

NEW YORK, UNITED NATIONS (AUG. 5) - The U.N. Security Council was meeting later Sunday for consultations on a resolution calling for economic sanctions and a military embargo against Iraq for its invasion of Kuwait, diplomatic sources said here.

The five permanent members of the council -- Britain, China, France, the Soviet Union and the United States -- met early Sunday for consultations that might lead to a total boycott of Iraq, the sources said.

The full council was set to meet at 2200 GMT, the sources said.

The resolution is likely to be co-sponsored by the United States, France and Britain, sources said.

A formal vote by the council on such measures could be held late Sunday or early Monday, the sources added.

This is the second time -- after the case of South Africa -- that the Security Council has discussed adopting a military embargo against a member nation of the United Nations.

China has declared that it will not object to the holding of the council meeting.

Sunday, China said it would no longer sell weapons to Iraq after a top U.S. official made a snap visit to Beijing to urge it to join Washington and Moscow in an arms embargo.

In a brief statement, the foreign ministry said that as China had voted for U.N. Security Council resolution 660 condemning Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, "it will, naturally, not sell arms to Iraq under such circumstances."

China is one of Iraq's most important arms suppliers.

The draft resolution calls on all nations, including those that are not U.N. members, to adopt the following measures until Iraq completely and unconditionally withdraws its forces from Kuwait:

-- Block all imports from Iraq and Kuwait.

-- Block the transfer of funds to Iraq and Kuwait.

-- Block the sale to Iraq and Kuwait of all their products, especially arms and other military equipment. The text excludes medical items.

It also proposes to establish a special committee of representatives of the 15 nations in the Security Council to verify the boycott was being implemented.

Finally, the resolution asks that U.N. Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar inform the Security Council on the progress of the boycott, with a first report due in 30 days.

The proposal is heading for a Council vote after wide-ranging consultations, not only with the non-permanent members of the Council, but also with other groups in the United Nations, notably the Arab group and the non-aligned countries.

U.S. Ambassador to the U.N. Thomas Pickering was meeting later Sunday with Security Council members that belong to the Non-Aligned Movement: Colombia, Cuba, Ethiopia, Ivory Coast, Malaysia, Yemen and Zaire.

A Security Council resolution adopted unanimously Thursday condemned Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and called for the immediate and unconditional withdrawal of Iraqi forces.

Yemen abstained from the vote.

JERUSALEM (AUG. 5) - Israeli intelligence believes Iraq is unlikely to follow up on its invasion of Kuwait with a similar attack on Saudi Arabia, Israeli television said Sunday.

There is no operation plan for a second invasion, according to reports submitted to the government by the intelligence services during a cabinet session here.

But intelligence officials were concerned by the amount of sophisticated Western arms that had fallen into Iraqi hands since Thursday's invasion, the television said.

Finance Minister Yitzhak Modai said in the cabinet meeting that Israel should request an increase in U.S. military aid because of what he called the Iraqi threat.

Saudi Arabia's military forces were on alert Sunday, reliable sources in Riyadh said earlier, although they ruled out an Iraqi military operation against the kingdom.

The Saudi government also held a special session on the Iraq-Kuwait crisis.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 5) - U.S. President George Bush Sunday said a united front is emerging among Washington's allies to put pressure on Iraq to move its forces out of Kuwait.

Bush, speaking to reporters at the White House, said Iraq had lied again by saying it was withdrawing from Kuwait. There was ''no evidence'' of the Iraqi forces moving out.

Iraq earlier announced that it was beginning to pull out part of its forces from Kuwait following its invasion Thursday.

Asked about the possiblity of Turkey closing down the pipeline which carries Iraqi oil throught its territory to the Mediterranean, Bush said this was being considered.

Bush said he had spoken to Turkish President Turgut Ozal over the telephone and would speak to him again. The said North Atlantic Alliance (Nato) nations, including Turkey, felt strongly that concerted action was needed to isolate Baghdad.

Iraq has warned Turkey against closing the pipeline.

Ozal Saturday warned Iraq about the ''gravity of the situation ''which arose with the invasion of Kuwait and urged it to take into consideration the United Nations Security Council resolution and the reaction of the world community.

Bush said the installation of a puppet government in the oil-rich Gulf country was unacceptable to the rest of the world. ''That signal has gone loud and clear to Iraq,'' he added.

He reiterated that Washington would still keep its options for a respone ''wide open''.

The ''Iraqis lied once again,'' Bush said. ''They said they were going to begin moving out today, and we have no evidence they are moving out.''

Bush is due to have talks Monday with Nato secretary-General Manfred Woerner and British Premier Margaret Thatcher Monday.

MANILA (AUG. 6) - The killer earthquake which struck the Philippines last month pushed up the national inflation rate to 12.6 percent in July, the government's National Statistics Office said Monday.

The figure was 0.4 percent higher than that for June and 2.3 percent more than the July inflation rate last year, a spokesmen said.

The reversal in the inflation rate, which had been on a downward trend in May and June, was attributed partly to spending on housing repairs.

The spokesmen said the increase also reflected price increases for food, beverage and tobacco brought about by production losses arising from the July 16 temblor which left at least 1,660 people dead.

The inflation rate for Manila was even higher in the period, shooting up to 16.5 percent from 14 percent in June, they said.

(AUG. 5) UPI - The White House says President Bush Saturday considered possible responses to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. Among the options contemplated were tactical air strikes against Iraqi invasion forces... bombing runs into Iraq... and a naval blockade of Iraqi oil exports in the Persian Gulf. Bush has said he will keep all options open if Iraq continues its military action into Saudi Arabia.

Iraq's ambassador to the United States denied Saturday that his country's forces have taken up positions in the so-called neutral zone between Kuwait and Saudi Arabia. The envoy said there was NO truth to statements that Iraqi forces had pentrated the rectangular piece of oil-rich desert that lies between Kuwait and Saudi Arabia.

Andrew Young spent the day Saturday trying to win the support of Georgian voters in his bid to win the Democratic nomination for governor. Young pounded the pavement and the flesh in a last-minute effort to galvanize his fledgling campaign against Lieutenant Governor Zell Miller. Recent reports indicate Miller enjoys a 20-point lead prior to Tuesday's runoff election.

Yugoslavia's state news agency reported Saturday that Romanian military officials have pressed criminal charges against the former head of Romania's infamous secret police. A military statement released in Bucharest indicates Lieutenant General Iulian Vlad will be tried on genocide charges next month because of his efforts to stem last year's popular uprising.

(AUG. 5) UPI - The Navy says it is looking into allegations by crewmembers aboard the U-S-S Nimitz that the aircraft carrier may be UNsafe. Four seamen told a Washington state television station they thought fellow sailors' qualifications may have been falsified to keep the ship's operations on schedule. The sailors also alleged overworked crewmembers had talked about sabotaging the craft.

Britons Saturday celebrated the birthday of a woman they all know and love as the ''Queen Mum.'' The Queen Mother... the mother of Queen Elizabeth... marked her 90th year Saturday with a party attended by thousands of well-wishers. Queen Mum was feted at other celebrations which capped a week-long tribute. The senior stateswoman of Buckingham Palace owes much of her enduring popularity to the pluck she displayed during the dark days of World War Two.

COLUMBUS, NM (AUG. 5) UPI - A pilot hoping to fly his solar-powered plane across the country to the cradle of aviation completed the first leg of his voyage, a 133-mile hop from Arizona to New Mexico lasting about six hours.

Eric Raymond left Wilcox, Ariz., at 1:03 p.m. Saturday in the solar plane Sun-Seeker and landed at 7:15 p.m. near Columbus, about 75 miles west of his intended target of El Paso, Texas, spokesman Jack Whitehouse said.

Raymond, a champion hang glider from Lake Elsinore, Calif., is attempting to fly the one-man aircraft to Kitty Hawk, N.C., within seven days and reach the site where Wilbur and Orville Wright made the first powered flight in 1903.

Raymond, 33, made three previous unsuccessful attempts to launch the cross-country trek. He planned to continue the journey Sunday with a goal of landing the 23-foot-long plane in Abilene, Texas, by nightfall.

Sun-Seeker weighs 195 pounds and is constructed from a lightweight carbon fiber and high-density aircraft foam. Raymond spent four years building the aircraft in his garage with the help of his father, who is an engineer and several retired aeronautical engineers interested in the project.

The plane is propelled by a battery-powered, three-horsepower motor charged by 700 solar cells to convert sunlight into electricity. The sun-powered motor is used primarily for takeoffs and landings.

Although the aircraft can fly at night because it has about two hours worth of stored solar power, the plane is not equipped with running lights and will be flown after nightfall only in an emergency, Whitehouse said.

(AUG. 5) UPI - The Cubs's two big guns are smoking again, but Kevin Gross and the Expos are still cold.

Andre Dawson hit a two-run homer and three-run double Saturday night, while Ryne Sandberg went 4 for 5 and scored four runs to power Chicago to a 10-2 victory over the Montreal Expos, who dropped their fourth straight game.

Gross, 8-9, absorbed the shelling, allowing 11 hits over five-plus innings. He has now lost five straight starts and hasn't won since June 11.

Sandberg emerged from a 17 for 86 (.198) slump.

''I'm just trying to go up there and swing my way through it,'' Sandberg said. ''I just wasn't swinging the bat well.''

The Cubs' second baseman recorded his fifth four-hit game of the season to bring his average up to .313. He was hitting .335 at the All-Star break.

Sandberg's fellow South Side All-Star has gotten back into the swing of things as well.

Dawson smacked his 21st home run with two out in the fourth, driving in Sandberg who had singled and stole second, and giving the Cubs a 6-1 lead. It was his second homer in three days after going without one since July 7.

''I looked at some films,'' Dawson said. ''I'm just trying to go back up the middle and use my hands more. I was overswinging.''

Dawson is 35 for 90 (.388) since July 1.

''He's hitting both - good pitches and bad pitches - but we haven't thrown him too many good pitches in the last few days so I can't tell,'' Montreal Manager Buck Rodgers said. ''They out pitched, out hit, out hustled, out everything against us.''

The Cubs are leading the league in hitting with a .273 team average.

Rookie Shawn Boskie, 5-6, scattered seven hits, struck out one and walked one, leaving after six innings with a tender right elbow.

''I think it's a good sign that we're putting both (pitching and hitting) together,'' Sandberg said. ''Maybe we can keep this up for awhile.''

The defending NL East champs, who at one point were 16 games under .500, have climbed back to seven under.

''Sixteen games under I would say is ugly,'' said Chicago Manager Don Zimmer. ''Seven under is a little prettier.''

Elsewhere in the National League: St. Louis topped New York 7-5, San Francisco edged Los Angeles 2-1, Pittsburgh downed Philadelphia 3-1 in 10 innings, San Diego slammed Cincinnati 7-3 in 11 innings, and Houston stopped Atlanta 6-2.

In the American League it was: Boston 3, Detroit 1; Cleveland 17, New York 3; Kansas City 9, Baltimore 3; Texas 3, Toronto 2; Chicago 9, Milwaukee 6; Seattle 4, Minnesota 3, and California 6, Oakland 5.

Cardinals 7, Mets 5

At St. Louis, Terry Pendleton stroked a three-run double in the sixth inning and Pedro Guerrero and Rex Hudler smacked two-run homers to lift the Cardinals. Loser Dwight Gooden, 11-6, gave up five runs and seven hits in six innings to snap an eight game winning streak. Ken Hill, 2-1, allowed three runs, nine hits, walked none and struck out five.

Giants 2, Dodgers 1

At San Francisco, rookie Trevor Wilson, 7-3, pitched a two-hitter and won for the first time in six starts to pull the Giants to within 3 1-2 games of Cincinnati in the NL West. Mike Morgan dropped to 9-10. Brett Butler scored from second base on a fly ball in the first when right fielder Hubie Brooks lost track of the number of outs and began jogging back to the bench.

Pirates 3, Phillies 1, 10 innings

At Philadelphia, catcher Don Slaught, hitting in the leadoff spot for the first time in his career, knocked in three runs including two with a double in the 10th inning to lift Pittsburgh into a first-place tie in the NL East. Bob Patterson, 8-3, got the victory despite surrendering a game-tying home run to Von Hayes in the ninth inning. Roger McDowell, 3-5, took the loss.

Padres 7, Reds 3, 11 innings

At Cincinnati, Joe Carter hit a grand slam off Rick Mahler, 4-5, in the 11th inning to send the Reds to their 11th loss in their last 13 games. The Reds have seen their 9 1-2 game lead since July 25 crumble to 3 1-2 over San Francisco in the NL West. Reliever Greg Harris pitched two scoreless innings for the win. He allowed one hit and two walks.

Astros 6, Braves 2

At Houston, Glenn Wilson's two-run homer highlighted a five-run fourth inning to pace the Astros. Jim Deshaies, 5-9, allowed six hits and walked one while striking out five in his first complete game of the season. Charlie Leibrandt dropped to 4-5. Wilson now has nine homers on the year.

TOKYO (AUG. 5) UPI - Gary Kubiak hit wide receiver Mark Jackson with a 32-yard touchdown pass and Jeff Treadwell added a 37-yard field goal Sunday to lead the Denver Broncos to a 10-7 victory over the Seattle Seahawks in the American Bowl at the Tokyo Dome.

Both Denver scores were set up by the Broncos defense.

Late in the third quarter, linebacker Michael Brooks intercepted a tipped

Kelly Stouffer pass and returned it to the Seattle 32-yard line.

The Broncos' backup quarterback then hit Jackson on first down with 5:55 left in the third quarter.

Kubiak, the contest's Most Valuable Player, completed 7 of 11 passes for 75 yards.

Treadwell's field goal broke a 0-0 deadlock with 7:30 left in the third period.

Rookie safety Alton Montgomery, the Broncos first pick in the April draft, intercepted Stouffer's pass and returned it to the Seattle 27 to set up the score.

Seattle's lone touchdown came with 4:14 remaining in the contest. Stouffer who tossed three interceptions, found receiver Louis Clark wide open in the corner of the end zone and connected on a 37-yard scoring pass.

Just as in any other opening preseason game, starters played sparingly. Denver quarterback John Elway played only on the Broncos first possession and for the first three plays of their second possession while Seattle quarterback Dave Krieg played the entire first half.

Both teams wasted early scoring opportunities. The Broncos opened the game with a 14-play drive that stalled at the Seattle 9-yard line. Seattle rookie linebacker Terry Wooden, a second round selection out of Syracuse, stopped Denver running back Bobby Humpherey on fourth-and-1.

Broncos quarterback John Elway completed six straight passes on the drive for 44 yards. He finished the game with 64 yards passing.

The Seahawks followed with a 10-play drive that reached the Denver 27-yard line, but kicker Eddie Garcia missed a 39-yard field goal attempt with 11:21 left in the second quarter.

Kubiak later led the Broncos to the Seattle 27-yard line, but Treadwell's 44-yard field goal attempt with 5:25 left in the second quarter was partially blocked by Seattle's Eric Hayes

(AUG. 5) UPI - At 17 games back in the AL West, the Royals are feeling a little like Rodney Dangerfield. They just want some respect.

Saturday night may have been a step in that direction.

Mike Macfarlane slugged a grand slam and Danny Tartabull belted two home runs, powering Kansas City to a 9-1 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

The Royals' catcher added a run-scoring single for a career-best five RBI, helping his team snap a three-game losing skid. With Kansas City in last place in the division, Macfarlane realizes his team must have modest goals.

''Our goal is to get back to respectability, then .500 ball.''

The Royals took a 4-0 advantage in the second inning on Macfarlane's first career grand slam.

Jim Eisenreich and Gerald Perry singled and Willie Wilson reached base when second baseman Bill Ripken committed his first error in 52 games, loading the bases. Macfarlane then used his catcher's mentality to read the pitch, belting a 410 footer into the left-field seats.

''He threw me a second straight slider up in the zone,'' Macfarlane explained, referring to Baltimore starter Pete Harnisch, 9-6. ''I knew it would be a slider because I looked so bad on the first one.''

The early-inning lead abetted his work behind the plate.

''The best thing about the home run is it put us on top quickly,'' said Macfarlane. ''That helps your catching game, makes you confident on calling pitches.''

Andy McGaffigan two-hit the Orioles for six innings to up his unblemished record to 3-0.

''Andy is a gutsy competitor,'' MacFarlane said. ''He throws as hard as he can for as long as he can.''

''He has been the find of the year for us and will stay in the rotation.'' Royals' Manager John Wathan added. ''He has thrown three great games for us.''

The Royals rout came after a 14-1 loss to the Orioles Friday night.

Diego 7, Cincinnati 3 and Houston 6, Atlanta 2.

Red Sox 3, Tigers 1

At Boston, Roger Clemens, 15-5, scattered nine hits and struck out eight over 8 2-3 innings, leading the Red Sox to their sixth straight victory. Rob Murphy got the final out for his sixth save. Steve Searcy fell to 1-3.

Indians 17, Yankees, 3

At New York, Cory Snyder broke a 3-3 tie with a sixth-inning grand slam and Candy Maldonado and Jeff Manto added homers to power Cleveland. Bud Black, 10-6, gave up six hits through seven innings. Tim Leary dropped to 5-14.

Rangers 3, Blue Jays 2

At Texas, Bobby Witt, 10-8, pitched a complete game for his seventh straight win and Ruben Sierra drove in two runs in the Rangers sixth straight victory. Blue Jays' starter Todd Stottlemyre went to 10-12.

White Sox 9, Brewers 6

At Milwaukee, Sammy Sosa tagged a three-run homer to ignite a six-run Chicago sixth. Chicago has won 12 of its last 14 games against Milwaukee. Adam Peterson improved to 2-3 and Bobby Thigpen gained his major-league leading 35th save. Bill Krueger, 5-7, suffered the loss.

Mariners 4, Twins 3

At Seattle, Harold Reynolds hit a two-out bloop RBI double with two out in the ninth inning. The ball bounced over left fielder Dan Gladden's head and rolled toward the wall, enabling Scott Bradley to score easily from first. Mike Jackson, 5-3, was the winner and Jack Savage, 0-1, took the loss.

Angels 6, Athletics 5, 12 innings

At California, Dave Winfield stroked a one-out bases-loaded single in the 12th inning to snap the Oakland's three-game win streak. Todd Burns, 2-3, took the loss. Mark Eichhorn, 2-4, hurled two innings of one-hit relief for the victory. Luis Polonia added a three-run triple for the Angels.

CAIRO (AUG. 5) UPI - The executions of 120 Iraqi military officers who refused to participate in the invasion of Kuwait were aimed at thwarting a foreign-backed coup attempt against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, reports said Sunday.

Egyptian newspapers had reported from Baghdad that Saddam personally signed the death warrants for the condemned men, who were sentenced by a military tribunal and executed on Friday.

Al Akhbar newspaper in its Sunday edition quoted ''official Iraqi sources'' as saying the personnel had been plotting to overthrow Saddam.

''The executions were because of an attempted coup by the officers who were sentenced and led by three officers assisted by an unidentified foreign country,'' it said.

The sources, originally quoted on Radio Monte Carlo, said the thwarted uprising had prompted Saddam to order the withdrawal of his invasion force from Kuwait, a move that reportedly began Sunday.

Reports on Saturday said the men were executed for objecting to ''an unjustifed assault on a fellow Arab country.''

Political observers were skeptical that the withdrawal had been due to internal imperatives.

They said the swift installation of a pro-Iraqi government in Kuwait and creation of a ''popular army'' - complete with new uniforms - indicated Baghdad had thought through a step-by-step plan before embarking on the venture.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 5) UPI - President Bush has postponed his five-nation mid-September trip to Latin America to deal with negotiations with Congress on the budget deficit, an administration official said.

Bush had planned to travel from Sept. 16-21 to Venezuela, Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay and Chile.

The official said that Iraq's invasion of Kuwait was not a factor in the postponement of the trip. He said the primary consideration was the continuing negotiations with congressional leaders on the fiscal 1991 budget and reducing the budget deficit.

Failure to reach an agreement would impel the government by law to impose a $100 billion automatic cut across the board in spending for vital services.

The president also was expected to be preoccupied this fall with campaigning for Republican candidates in the November elections.

Bush had long planned the journey to Latin America and was expected to spend about a day in each country attempting to enhance his new program for closer economic ties and free trade with South America.

There had been the possibility that more countries would be added to the itinerary.

Starting Friday, however, the White House began informing the host countries that the president had postponed his trip.

No new date was set. It was not thought, however, that the trip could be rescheduled this year in view of other planned travel, including attendance at the Conference on European Security and Cooperation in Paris in mid-November, and the possibility of another summit meeting with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev, perhaps in Moscow.

CAPE CANAVERAL, FL (AUG. 5) UPI - Streaking through space at 24,600 mph, NASA's Magellan radar mapping probe, launched 15 months ago from planet Earth, will sail over the north pole of Venus Friday and plunge out of sight behind the cloudy planet.

At exactly 12:45 p.m. EDT, while the spacecraft is out of contact with controllers at the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., an on-board computer is to execute a command that will fire a 4,721-pound solid-fuel braking rocket bolted to the base of the solar-powered probe.

Blazing with white-hot fury, the compact rocket motor will push against Magellan with 17,750 pounds of thrust, slowing the space probe by 6,200 mph in the most critical maneuver for the $550 million project since launch from the shuttle Atlantis on May 4, 1989.

If all goes well, the 83-second rocket firing will put the robot spacecraft into an egg-shaped, elliptical orbit tilted 86 degrees to Venus's equator, with a low point of about 170 miles and a high point of about 5,000 miles.

After checkout and calibration, Magellan will begin firing radar pulses at the planet below around Sept. 1, producing photograph-like images that may help determine what caused Venus, similar to Earth in many ways, to end up the 900-degree inferno it is today, the apparent victim of a runaway ''greenhouse effect.''

''The spacecraft is currently working fine. We've had a number of problems ... all of which have been resolved. The bottom line is, we are go for orbit insertion and the start of mapping,'' said Magellan project manager Tony Spear of the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif.

If successful, Magellan will revolutionize knowledge about Earth's sister planet and give NASA a much-needed morale boost after weeks of public criticism over problems with the $1.5 billion Hubble Space Telescope, delays in the shuttle program and trouble with the agency's planned space station.

If the rocket does not work, Magellan will sail past Venus and the mission will be a failure. But engineers are confident the spacecraft will work as advertised, recalling how an alert technician discovered a wiring foul-up before launch that, had it not been corrected, would have prevented the rocket from igniting.

Magellan, named after the 16th century explorer, is the first new U.S. interplanetary mission since 1978 and the first in an armada of high-tech robot craft that will explore Venus, Jupiter, Saturn and a comet during the 1990s, what NASA science chief Lennard Fisk calls a new ''golden age'' of space exploration.

''We are essentially, with Magellan, entering into the second golden age of space science,'' he said. ''You will have a U.S. planetary program in which there is a mission in its prime exploration phase continuously from 1990 to the year 2006. And never again will anyone question U.S. leadership in planetary exploration.''

Built with spare parts left over from other planetary programs, the 7,600-pound Magellan was designed to map up to 90 percent of the surface of Venus, using radar instead of visible light to see through the thick clouds that block the planet's surface from view.

''Venus is of special interest to the geologist for the contrast it presents with Earth and for the clues it provides concerning Earth's origin and evolution,'' wrote Michael Carr and Magellan project scientist Stephen Saunders in a book titled ''The Geology of the Terrestrial Planets.''

''Both bodies are of similar size, composition and distance from the sun yet they have evolved to remarkably different states; one developed into a prolific haven for life, the other into a sterile inferno. Unfortunately, we are far from understanding why this happened.''

Radar data beamed back to Earth from Magellan will be processed by powerful computers to create photograph-quality images of Venus's surface, showing features as small as 350 feet across, about the size of a football field.

Magellan also will be used to learn more about the planet's interior by precisely monitoring how the spacecraft's orbit is affected by the planet's gravity, which provides an indication of interior mass distribution.

The end result will be enough data to fill some 500,000 library books - enough to fill a shelf 10 miles long - and keep researchers busy for years to come.

The project is funded for a 243-day mapping mission, the length of one Venusian ''day.'' But scientists hope to gain approval for an extended mission expected to generate data through 1995.

''This is not a Voyager encounter,'' said Stephen Saunders, Magellan project scientist at JPL. ''This is not something where we'll have a lot of excitement for a few hours and see pictures the next day. It's not going to be like that at all. What we've got here is not a sprint. ... It's more like a marathon.''

TYRE, LEBANON (AUG. 5) UPI - The mainstream Shiite Amal militia said Sunday it had arrested a Shiite Moslem accused of kidnapping U.S. Colonel William Higgins in 1988 on orders from the pro-Iranian Hezbollah, or Party of God.

Amal leaders said Imad Mdeihli, 26, will be put on trial for his role in the abduction of Higgins, who disappeared Feb. 17, 1988, after meeting with an Amal official.

''I have participated in kidnapping American Colonel Higgins,'' Mdeihli said at a news conference Sunday in Tyre. ''I and my colleagues followed him after his last meeting in Tyre with Amal offical Abdul Megid Saleh to a place outside Tyre.''

Higgins, 43, head of a U.N. truce-monitoring force in Lebanon and former Washington aide to Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, was reported hanged July 31, 1989, by a pro-Iranian Hezbollah off-shoot group called the Organization of the Oppressed on Earth, but his body was never found.

The group released a videotape of what appeared to be the U.S. colonel hanging by his neck.

An Amal security official who requested anonymity said Mdeihli was one of five gunmen who abducted Higgins. He said the group comprised a cell that worked for the Iranian Revolutionary Guards and Hezbollah.

An Amal official, who read a written statement at the news conference, did not say when Mdeihli was arrested or whether his colleagues were also captured, nor would he reveal how the militia uncovered the cell.

Security sources said the militia actually arrested Mdeihli soon after Higgins was abducted, but later set him free under close observation. They said Mdeihli had not been seen in public for the past three months, suggesting he was again taken into custody at about that time.

It was not known why Amal, a moderate group fighting Iranian-backed forces in Southern Lebanon, decided to put Mdeihli on trial at this time.

An Amal source said Mdeihli will be tried by a martial court comprised of Shiite clergymen.

Higgins was the second American believed to be executed by kidnappers in Lebanon. The Islamic Jihad Organization announced June 3, 1985, that William Buckley, 56, the highest ranking CIA official in Lebanon at the time, had been executed.

Six U.S. citizens are among 16 Westerners believed held in Lebanon by Moslem fundamentalist groups loyal to Iran.

Launched May 4, 1989, from the shuttle Atlantis, Magellan is to slip into orbit around Venus early Friday after a 15-month space voyage.

Its goal: to spend at least 243 days mapping the cloudy planet's hidden surface using a high-resolution radar capable of distinguishing objects as small as a football field.

Built by Martin Marietta Astronautics Co. of Denver, Magellan will be placed in a highly elliptical three-hour, nine-minute orbit around Venus, one tilted 86 degrees to the equator with a low point of about 170 miles and a high point of about 5,000 miles.

As the probe travels through the low-altitude part of each orbit, its 12-foot dish antenna will be used to fire radar pulses at the ground, ''illuminating'' a 15.5-mile-wide, 9,900-mile-long swath, or ''noodle.''

After each 37.2-minute mapping run, Magellan will re-orient itself, pointing the antenna toward distant Earth so the recorded radar data can be beamed back to the Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena, Calif., for analysis.

The probe then will swing back around, aim its antenna at Venus and make another mapping pass.

''Radar'' is an acronym for ''radio detecting and ranging.'' As the name implies, it uses radio waves, a form of electromagnetic radiation like X-rays and visible light, to determine an object's range, or distance. And as every motorist knows, radar also can be used to determine an object's velocity.

As it turns out, radar is an ideal tool for ''seeing'' through the clouds that shroud Venus. The trick is turning that data into a useable image.

As Magellan sails through the low-point of its orbit, 26.5-millisecond radar pulses will be fired at the surface at the speed of light, 186,000 miles per second. After a very short but measurable delay, the pulse's reflection from the surface will be detected by the spacecraft.

By measuring the time between the pulse and the arrival of its reflection, computers can determine the distance to the point on the ground where the pulse was reflected. But that alone is not enough to assemble a map, because more than one point will lie at any given distance from the spacecraft.

To further pin down a point's location, Magellan also will measure the ''Doppler shift'' of the reflected radar pulse, that is, the amount the radar beam's wavelength has changed because of the spacecraft's orbital motion.

Anyone who has listened to an ambulance siren is familiar with the phenomenon; as the ambulance approaches and then goes past, the pitch of the siren, which depends on the sound's wavelength, will change.

Likewise, a returning radar pulse will have a slightly different wavelength based on whether Magellan is approaching a point on Venus or receding from it.

The Doppler shift, then, provides data about the location of a point on the surface with respect to Magellan's line of flight.

Each point in the Magellan radar image will thus have a unique distance and Doppler shift. By carefully combining that data, along with data giving the precise orientation of the antenna, computers can assemble a photograph-like map of the surface.

The level of detail that can be distinguished by an imaging radar system depends on the size of the antenna, just as the performance of normal telescopes depends on the size of the lens or mirror.

Magellan's antenna is 12 feet wide, but because the spacecraft moves a considerable distance between the time a radar pulse is emitted and its reflection is received, the antenna has an ''effective'' diameter of some 3,000 feet.

For this reason, Magellan is said to be equipped with a ''synthetic aperture radar'' system and, under the best possible conditions, surface features as small as 350 feet or so can be distinguished. The best previous Venus radar maps have resolutions of about 1 mile.

It would greatly simplify Magellan's mission if the spacecraft could be fired into a circular orbit around Venus, because the probe's velocity and altitude would remain constant. But a tight budget forced planners to settle for a cheaper, less-powerful braking rocket, one that can only achieve an elliptical orbit.

As it is, Magellan's speed will increase as it approaches the low-point of its orbit, called periapsis, and decrease as it climbs to a higher altitude.

HIROSHIMA, JAPAN (AUG. 5) UPI - People from around the world gathered for an annual memorial service in Hiroshima Sunday on the eve of the 45th anniversary of the atomic bombing of the southwestern port city.

City officials predicted more than 50,000 people will jam Hiroshima's Peace Memorial Park Monday to commemorate the 140,000 who died in the Aug. 6, 1945, bombing. They will also honor some 20,000 victims who later died from the lingering effects of the bomb's radiation.

The 2-ton atom bomb dropped by a U.S. B-29 bomber was the first ever used in war. It destroyed the city of 350,000 people in a split second, killing more than half of the population instantly.

Following the atomic bombing of Nagasaki three days later, Japan surrendered, ending World War II on Aug. 15, 1945.

On Sunday evening, workers tidied the park, located at the site where the bomb exploded, and set up the podium from which Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu will speak Monday morning.

Peace activists planned to form a human chain in the park Monday and exchange messages of peace over worldwide computer networks.

There was new hope among those gathered in Hiroshima that the city's long-standing appeal for abolition of nuclear weapons would be realized.

Maj. Britt Theorin, Sweden's U.N. ambassador for disarmament, declared at a Sunday news conference that nuclear disarmament will follow the new U.S.-Soviet cooperation.

''Nuclear weapons, in principle, are out,'' said Theorin, who is in Hiroshima to attend an international women's symposium on peace.

Hiroshima Mayor Takeshi Araki, in his annual Peace Declaration Monday, was expected to cite the fall of the Berlin Wall and other signs of reconciliation as reasons to fulfill his city's plea for nuclear disarmament.

Earlier Sunday, about 300 Koreans gathered outside the park to remember an estimated 20,000 unidentified Koreans who were forced by the Japanese military to work in Hiroshima during the war and who died in the blast.

Koreans have set up a monument outside of Peace Park but have been unsuccessful in their efforts to establish a monument within the park because the city opposes a proposed inscription that would refer to the victims as forced laborers.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (AUG. 5) UPI - The government and the black nationalist African National Congress will hold crucial talks Monday expected to herald full-blown negotiations on ending 42 years of white minority rule.

The second-round meeting follows initial ground-breaking talks May 2-4, held three months after President Frederik de Klerk legalized the ANC and launched racial reforms.

Officials, ANC sources and observers believe that Monday's talks will accomplish more than those in May because the parties have gained some trust in each other and are prepared to make firm concessions toward a peaceful settlement instead of hopeful but vague promises.

''V-Day for Peace?'' the government-supporting Afrikaans newspaper Rapport said in a headline Sunday, reflecting widespread national support for the meeting. The optimism was in contrast to charges earlier that the ANC was part of a communist plot to mount armed insurrection if power-sharing discussions fail.

De Klerk's Cabinet and an ANC group led by its deputy president and de facto leader, Nelson Mandela, are expected to announce agreement on the two key ANC preconditions to substantive talks and possibly also some form of suspension of the ANC's 30-year guerrilla incursion aimed at ending white rule.

The ANC has been insisting some 1,500 prisoners held for politically motivated crimes be released and an estimated 20,000 political exiles allowed to return. Joint working groups on the issues set up by the parties after the May talks have, unconfirmed reports said, reached compromises which will be fine-tuned at the Monday talks.

The meeting, in Pretoria's Union Buildings government complex, ''will certainly result in steps forward... steps to peace by us and the ANC,'' a senior government source said Sunday.

''It is clear we have built up some trust over the past months,'' he said.

ANC spokesmen indicated the talks will concentrate on consolidating progress made since the sides' first encounter, in Cape Town, when both groups committed themselves to a non-violent resolution of apartheid.

''The working groups and certain other private little one-on-one talks... may even have made Monday's meeting something of a formality,'' one ANC official said.

The ANC has also demanded the government scrap myriad so-called security laws curtailing civil rights, withdraw its troops from warring black townships and lift a state of emergency in strife-torn Natal province before negotiations begin on a post-apartheid constitution. The movement is thought to be flexible on these issues.

De Klerk on June 8 lifted a four-year-old state of emergency in South Africa's other three provinces, in a bid to satisfy the ANC. He excluded Natal, citing its virtual Zulu civil war between ANC supporters and elements of the conservative Inkatha movement which has claimed more than 3,000 lives since 1986.

''Regardless... of the many difficulties remaining, we look forward to these talks with great anticipation,'' Mandela has said. ''They are important for all South Africans.''

PARIS (AUG. 5) UPI - Wealthy Kuwaitis residing on the French Riviera and members of the Kuwait national soccer team training in France were plagued by uncertainty over their country's future this weekend in the wake of the Iraqi invasion.

An estimated 500 Kuwaitis live in villas and apartments in the area between Nice and Cannes, some of them only for the summer months, according to informed sources in the area.

''I don't understand, I thought Iraq and Kuwait were on good terms,'' said one Kuwaiti on the Riviera who asked to remain anonymous. ''We hope Iraq will withdraw its troops as they have said, but with (Iraqi president) Saddam Hussein, one never knows.''

The weekly Kuwait Airways flight from Nice to Kuwait City has been cancelled until further notice.

''It's terrible not to know what's going on,'' said Victor Gebrane, commercial director for the airline in southern France.

Some Kuwaiti nationals left the Riviera after the invasion to join relatives in Bahrain and Saudi Arabia. Others remained, staying glued to radio and television news.

Members of the soccer squad, who had been training in Vichy, said they were worried about their families back home.

''We don't understand the (French) language. We watch the television but it's impossible to know what's happening,'' said Samir Seid, the goalkeeper for the team, in an interview with the French weekly Le Journal du Dimanche. ''We feel far from everything.''

Seid said he had been unable to withdraw money from the local bank because France froze Kuwaiti and Iraqi assets in retaliation against the Iraqi military strike.

The bulletin board at the team's hotel, normally used to post the training schedule, is now covered with hourly telex messages from the Kuwaiti Embassy in Paris.

''It's not much,'' Seid said. ''It's very general information. We'd like to know what's happening to our people.''

Seid said some of the players hoped to leave within several days for Saudi Arabia to get closer to the situation.

One of the players recieved a phone call from a relative who was able to reach a neutral zone Friday night outside Kuwait, where communications were not cut off.

''Our families have assured us that the Iraqi soldiers are peaceful,'' said Mohamed Othman, secretary general for the Kuwaiti soccer federation.

''They don't intend to harm our people.''

The Kuwaiti Embassy in Paris has declined to recognize the newly organized regime in Kuwait City, calling it in a statement Sunday a ''puppet government ... that involves several Iraqi military invaders.''

BONN, WEST GERMANY (AUG. 5) UPI - Chancellor Helmut Kohl said in an interview televised Sunday the costs of German unification are ''financially and economically manageable.''

''First of all, I maintain my thesis that (unification) is financially and economically manageable,'' Kohl said. ''Whatever costs more, we will see it in that dimension and I am not afraid to say publicly when it costs more.''

Kohl said swift merger and all-German elections soon afterward will give the government a better chance to handle the costs of rebuilding the ailing East German economy and restructuring the country.

''I want to see the bill... At the moment, many things are not clear to me which is one of the reasons why I hope very much that we will come to a clear decision as soon as possible,'' Kohl said.

Kohl and East German Prime Minister Lothar de Maiziere agreed Friday that the date of the election should be moved up from Dec. 2 to Oct. 14 and that German unification should take place before that.

Opposition leaders rejected the proposal, calling it unconstitutional and accusing Kohl and de Maiziere of pretending that a quick merger will resolve East Germany's grave economic crisis.

Both German parliaments will consider the proposal in special sessions this week.

Ever since the strong West mark replaced the worthless East mark July 1, the East German economy has been hit by growing unemployment, mass strikes dropping productivity and bankruptcies.

In the agricultural sector, farmers have dumped record harvests because East German stores, flooded with imports, would not buy their produce.

Kohl said on the TV program that once the Germanys are unified, East Germany's economy will only need three to five years to grow stable.

''I believe that the economic healing process will advance faster than the deep wounds that a dictatorship had beaten into the people...throughout decades,'' he said.

In a move to alleviate widespread fears among West German taxpayers that they will have to pay for unification, Kohl declared he does not intend to raise taxes to fund the process.

''The decisive point is that the merger will not run up a cost dimension that will bring any kind of disadvantage to West German citizens,'' Kohl said.

The Bonn government contributed more than one-third to East Germany's budget of $40 billion for the first six months of 1990 in addition to $6 billion in loans.

But East Berlin officials said last week the government had already run out of money and that it desperately needed new funds. Bonn has not made any move to allocate more funds.

Even the West German Finance Ministry recently pointed at huge financial holes in the East German budget that have to be covered within the next six months to avoid a total economic collapse.

A spokesman said about $3.8 billion is needed to pay unemployment benefits to 800,000 jobless.

Each week, 30,000 more lose their jobs - out of a total population of 16 million - and the number is expected to rise to 1 million by the end of the year.

Another $7-9 billion is needed in liquidity to save the ailing formerly state-run companies.

In addition, the Finance Ministry reported that $2.5 billion has to be pumped into the national health system, $3 billion is needed for public facilities such as kindergartens and nursing homes and $1.3 billion for social security.

East German taxes are not yet flowing freely into government coffers because tax offices have only recently been set up and inexperienced East German tax officers are still being trained.

East Germans did not have to pay taxes in the 40 years under the former dismanteled leadership.

On Friday the two German governments issued a first draft of the final unification treaty.

The document states that Berlin will once again be the capital of Germany, as it was until the country was divided almost 41 years ago.

But the treaty also says that an all-German parliament will have to decide whether Berlin will be the seat of government.

HO CHI MINH CITY, VIETNAM (AUG. 5) UPI - Vietnamese officials and media reports said gradual progress was expected in the first U.S.-Vietnamese talks on Cambodia due to open Monday, but no quick breakthrough on establishing diplomatic relations.

''If we have a good first step then the following steps are a matter of time,'' said Tran Bach Dang, a senior political adviser to Communist Party leader Nguyen Van Linh.

Dang, who conferred with Linh two days ago, said in an interview he expected progress in the talks set to begin Monday in New York between the Vietnamese ambassador to the United Nations, Trinh Xuan Lang, and Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Kenneth Quinn.

The talks, the first bilateral meeting on Cambodia between the two former war-time foes, follow announcement of a new U.S. policy on Cambodia that ends diplomatic support for the three-party resistance coalition fighting the Vietnamese-installed government in Phnom Penh.

Dang said no major breakthrough was likely from the talks, but said they should lead to higher level contacts and a step-by- step improvement in bilateral relations.

''We don't have any idea of exchanging embassies with the United States in the near future,'' he said.

But, he said, an end to a U.S. veto on assistance to Vietnam from multilateral lending institutions such as the International Monetary Fund and the World Bank would be a positive step.

''Maybe the United States should decide to lift the embargo, fully or partially,'' he said.

The U.S. embargo has blocked all U.S. commercial contacts with Vietnam despite its gradual conversion to a market economy open to foreign investment.

Dang said Hanoi would not abandon its allies in Phnom Penh in exchange for U.S. economic help.

''If the U.S. govenment still intends to support the Khmer Rouge then there is nothing to talk about, but we see the American government now taking a promising new line,'' he said.

The official communist party newspaper Nhan Dan also said, in an editorial Saturday, that Vietnam expected gradual progress from the talks.

''It is hoped that Washington will turn its announcements into concrete deeds and will take further steps to contribute to peacefully resolving the Cambodian issue,'' it said.

The paper said the biggest obstacle to peace in Cambodia was the danger that the Khmer Rouge, the strongest group in the resistance would return to power.

Both Vietnam and the United States have publicly opposed any comeback by the Khmer Rouge, who are blamed for the deaths of more than 1 million Cambodians during their genocidal rule from 1975 to 1979.

The resistance coalition, which includes two non-Communist groups supported by the United States, has criticized the change in U.S. policy and the talks in New York.

Son Sann, leader of one of the groups, said in a radio broadcast Saturday night that the United States, Europe and Japan should not end their support for the resistance coalition too hastily because some 45,000 Vietnamese troops remained in Cambodia.

The United States, however, has said it is satisfied that ''the bulk'' of the Vietnamese troops have departed.

The leader of the second faction supported by the United States is former head of state Prince Norodom Sihanouk. The Soviet Union supports Prime Minister Hun Sen, leader of the current government in Phnom Penh.

DONNYBROOK, ND (AUG. 5) UPI - A California man flying a single-engine plane and his 10-year-old niece were killed when the aircraft crashed in a ravine.

The pilot, Michael Yates, 32, of Marino Valley, Calif., and his niece, Amy Lee Lawson, of Donnybrook, died in the crash Saturday night, said highway patrol trooper Gary Burgett.

The airplane was registered with Pietsch Flying Service of Minot, and Yates was apparently giving rides to family members, Burgett said.

Burgett said Yates landed on a rural road, picked up the girl and had taken off when the two-seat aircraft suddenly banked and crashed into the side of a hill.

Federal Aviation Administration investigators were on the scene Sunday, trying to determine the cause of the crash.

TWINSBURG, OH (AUG. 5) UPI - Nine sets of twins from the Soviet Union were among about 3,000 pairs of siblings at the 15th annual Twins Days Festival.

The world's largest annual gathering of twins began in 1976 as part of Twinsburg's celebration of the nation's bicentennial and to honor the northeast Ohio city's twin founders, Aaron and Moses Wilcox.

This year's festival kicked off with the Double Take Parade and included a variety of twin contests.

''For all of you, it is a very good tradition. But for our twins, it is the first time ever that Russian twins take place in such a competition,'' said Marina Parushnikova, the owner of a Moscow modeling agency and sponsor of the Soviet delegation.

''Thank you for welcoming us to your beautiful country,'' she told a cheering crowd Saturday. Parushnikova spoke through an interpreter.

Twins from Pakistan, India, Germany and England, as well as almost every U.S. state, were expected at the festival.

''Usually, if you're a twin, you have to constantly explain that you have a twin,'' said Greg Widener of Lancaster, Ohio. ''But here, if you're not a twin, you have to explain why you're not.''

Greg and his brother, Dana, were celebrating their 34th birthday at the festival.

''Everyone who is a twin should come here once,'' Widener said, ''and everyone who comes here once will come twice, and they'll keep coming back.

''We've had nothing but fun since we've been here.''

BOURNE, MA (AUG. 5) UPI - An unknown Union soldier believed to be from Massachusetts was buried with full military honors more than 115 years after his death on a Civil War battlefield in South Carolina.

The unknown soldier was buried Saturday at the Massachusetts Veterans National Cemetery in a flag-draped carved wooden coffin similar to those used during the late 1800s. It was pulled by a horse-drawn caisson and lowered into the ground to a 21-gun salute.

''He left in a state of tragic war between brothers and returned as a messenger of peace and unity from the South,'' said Robert Berkeley, a historian who cleared red tape to return the soldier for burial.

Civil War experts believe the soldier was a private, perhaps a member of a Union contingent sent to fight the Battle of Dingle's Mill near Fort Sumter in April 1865. They believe he was killed by sniper fire before the battle.

The soldier's remains were unearthed by a Sumter, S.C., construction crew in 1974, and were kept in a local mortuary until a soldier in a Civil War battle reenactment mentioned the body to Berkeley last year.

The body was clothed in a frayed blue uniform, including buttons with Massachusetts written on them, authorities said. There were marbles in one of the pockets.

''Maybe, a big maybe, we might be able to put a name with the remains,'' said historian James Fahey. ''We won't know that for some time.''

Several military units participated in a parade for the unknown soldier, including Civil War re-enactment units in regimental dress, disabled veterans, Vietnam veterans, veterans of foreign wars and an honor guard unit from the National Guard.

A riderless horse followed the casket in the parade, complete with a grieving ''widow'' dressed in a flowing black hoopskirt. The parade, prayers for the soldier and lowering of the casket as a trumpeter played taps, drew tears from many of the observers.

''It was a very moving service, a symbolism of finding the body, and moving it and bringing the dead home,'' said Marilyn Crowell of Falmouth.

''It is a symbol of our nation's unity, and the cooperation and understanding the people of South Carolina,'' Crowell said. ''He was not a fallen opposing soldier, but someone who fought for the union of our nation.''

SAN DIEGO (AUG. 5) UPI - U.S. Navy spokesmen were sent scrambling when a Soviet admiral attempted to express doubt that an American woman sailor was raped on one of his ships and poor translation of his remarks made him appear unconcerned.

The allegations of rape were discussed Saturday at a joint news conference by the commanders of the Soviet and U.S. Pacific fleets, U.S. Adm. Charles Larson and Soviet Adm. Gennediy Khvator.

The Soviets were ending a five-day visit to San Diego, the first by the Soviet Pacific Fleet to the homeport of its U.S. counterpart.

A U.S. Navy woman, who was not identified, said she was raped Tuesday when she became separated from friends while touring a Soviet destroyer tied up at a Navy pier. Larson said the Soviets and Americans showed a common concern over the incident and U.S. Navy spokesman Lt. Cmdr. Bob Pritchard said the Soviets promised to prosecute any sailor implicated in the offense.

At the end of his prepared remarks Saturday, Khvatov, addressing reporters through an English-speaking Soviet Navy officer, attempted to take up the matter.

The interpreter translated the remarks as, ''And as far as the report of the alleged rape ... is concerned, ah, I would like to say that, er, it is not always, always wishful thinking ...''

Later, a reporter told Khvatov he did not understand the admiral's comment on the alleged rape. The interpreter answered for Khvatov, ''To be honest, I know, you mean, but maybe I was, ah, a bit inaccurate. Well, it was just an allegation, what he wanted to say.''

Pritchard jumped in and said, ''We're having trouble translating the word 'allegation.'''

The Soviet Navy interpreter then said, ''Wishful thinking on their part. I meant those who wanted it to make that way.''

Larson then said, ''I think we have a language barrier here. We're really saying 'allegation.' It's only an allegation.''

Two further attempts by reporters to clarify what Khvatov said were cut off by Larson, who said, ''I'm not going to try to go over difficulties in language translation and make a mountain out of a molehill right now.''

Later, with the help of an American reporter who spoke Russian, Pritchard furnished these two translations of what was on tape:

''It is not always possible to pass off what you wish were true as reality '' and, ''You cannot always take what you'd like to have as if it were reality.''

ANKARA, TURKEY (AUG. 5) UPI - Iraq issued a veiled warning Sunday to neighboring Turkey, which has reportedly been under Western pressure to close an Iraqi oil pipeline that passes through Turkish territory.

Iraqi First Deputy Prime Minister Tahir Yasin Ramadhan flew to Ankara Sunday for a four-hour meeting with President Turgut Ozal amid reports that Ankara was being urged by other countries to join in imposing economic sanctions against Iraq for its invasion last week of Kuwait.

Ramadhan, who said he carried a message for Ozal from Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, told reporters later that an atmosphere of distrust would develop between the neighboring countries if Ankara imposed sanctions against Iraq.

He said that he did not specifically ask Ozal to keep the pipeline open, but said: ''We believe the president would evaluate the bilateral relations before applying such sanctions.''

Ramadhan said if Turkey, which shares a 500 mile border with Iraq, joined other countries and imposed economic sanctions, ''this would create an atmosphere of mistrust between the two countries.''

Iraq owes Turkey $1 billion in debts incurred during the 1980-88 Iran-Iraq war, and has been repaying the amount in the form of oil supplies.

Aides say Ozal has spoken to President Bush on the telephone three times since Iraqi forces invaded Kuwait Thursday. He has also conferred with Iranian President Akbar Hashemi-Rafsanjani, Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak and Syrian President Hafez Assad.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Sunday in Washington that Bush had consulted by phone with Ozal and King Fahd of Saudi Arabia on Saturday afternoon.

''We are continuing to encourage allies around the world to follow the U.S. example by freezing Iraqi assets and instituting sanctions against Iraq,'' he said.

Fitzwater did not divulge whether Ozal and Fahd had agreed to cut off the Iraqi pipelines running through their countries, saying their discussions with Bush had been ''private conversations.''

Fitzwater said that Bush had spoken with world leaders on the Iraqi pipelinesand that they were ''part of the equation.''

''We are working for a solution and we are trying to involve as many leaders in the region as we can...,'' Fitzwater said.

Ramadhan said in Ankara before leaving for Baghdad that he briefed Ozal on the reasons for the Iraqi invasion and ''neither economic sanctions nor military intervention would stop Iraq from reaching its aim.''

A Foreign Ministry source said Friday that Ankara may consider closing the Iraqi pipeline if Riyadh decided to close another Iraqi pipeline passing through Saudi Arabia.

The pipeline through Turkey runs from the Kirkuk oilfields in northern Iraq to a terminal at Yumuxtalik on the Mediterranean, some 275 miles south of Ankara.

Turkey is a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization and the United States maintains military bases there. Analysts said the bases could take on increasing significance in the Middle East as relations between Moscow and Washington improve.

Ramadhan's visit to Ankara indicated Baghdad was concerned about moves its northern neighbor might make. Turkey is militarily one of Iraq's most powerful regional neighbors but remained neutral during the Iran-Iraq war.

Officials hinted that if Ankara remained neutral between Iraq and Kuwait, it might leave open to Ozal opportunities to play a mediatory role in the conflict.

Ramadhan said Turkey was pursuing a policy of neutrality as of now, but if it yielded to pressure to apply economic sanctions against Baghdad ''these pressures would yield no results.''

BEIJING (AUG. 5) UPI - Floods caused by Typhoon Tasha have killed at least 108 people since the storm slammed ashore July 31 in southern Guangdong and Fujian provinces, it was reported Sunday.

The deaths brought to well over 1,000 the number of people killed in China this year in severe weather and other natural disasters.

Chinese officials said Sunday this year's particularly vicious weather had even forced the cancellation of plans to light the Asian Games torch at the foot of Mount Everest in Tibet. The games begin next month.

Typhoon Tasha moved ashore in Guangdong and swept across much of the southern province, increasing its distruction as it moved to northern Fujian, the official Xinhua news agency reported.

In Lhasa, the Tibetan capital, Xinhua reported that foul weather and severe transportation problems have forced Beijing Asian Games organizers to abandon plans to light the international sports festival's torch at Mount Everest.

WILMINGTON, OH (AUG. 5) UPI - Cincinnati Bengals running back James Brooks has signed a new contract with the team and will be on the practice field Monday.

Brooks, who could well pull down a club rushing record this season, was seeking a $1 million salary. No terms of the transaction were revealed, in keeping with the Bengals' new non-disclosure policy.

But Brooks smiled when asked if he was pleased about the contract he signed Saturday.

''Oh yeah, no doubt about it,'' he said ''Now I'll get in here and get my timing down and I'll be ready to go.''

Last season, Brooks ran for 1,239 yards, bettering his own club record by 152 yards. Barring an injury, he should surpass Pete Johnson's career club record by mid-season. Johnson had 5,421 yards in seven seasons. Brooks has 4,872 in six and needs 550 this year to break the record.

Receiver Tim McGee was also expected to sign over the weekend and be on the practice field Monday.

PITTSBURGH (AUG. 5) UPI - A nine-month investigation by The Pittsburgh Press of emergency response by the Red Cross to more than 200 disasters showed there was a widespread pattern of deficiencies, the newspaper reported Sunday.

The Press said in a copyright story that its reporters conducted on-site obervations of every major disaster in the country in the past year and more than 1,500 interviews.

It said it found that Red Cross shortcomings anger government officials who count on the organization, disillusion victims often desperately in need of services, outrage donors and bewilder the organization's local staff and volunteers, who often see their best efforts hampered or destroyed by actions of national Red Cross Leaders.

The Red Cross claims it was criticized unfairly last year after Hurricane Hugo and the northern California earthquake hit in quick succession.

''It's absurd to look at last fall's hurricane and say the Red Cross can't do the job,'' said Barbara Lohman, a national Red Cross spokeswoman in Washington. ''The Red Cross may have had a few little problems, but we were dealing with two unprecedented disasters.

''If you want to be fair and get an accurate picture, look at the hundreds of other disasters that we worked on and you'll find the Red Cross performance was almost flawless.''

The Press said its investigation showed the Red Cross response to some disasters was flawless. Among the deficiencies the newspaper found in the organization's response to other disaters, however, were:

-Long delays before adequate numbers of trained workers get to the scene.

-After workers arrive, an ''arrogant'' drive to take charge that thwarts cooperation with local agencies and disrupts recovery operations.

-Double standards and discrimination in providing assistance to minorities and the poor.

-A bureaucracy so cumbersome that its rules and regulations often shut out the people they are supposed to help.

-An overemphasis on raising the Red Cross flag and staging media events, rather than getting to the work at hand.

-Advertising and public statements that take credit for work Red Cross did not do and that routinely exaggerate accomplishments and abilities.

-Refusal to give details of its billion-dollar-a-year budget to the public or to state officials who routinely monitor other charities.

-Masking the fact that all money donated by the public for a specific disaster may not be spent on that disaster, as the donor believes.

LONDON (AUG. 5) UPI - Iran could bolster its reported desire to restore diplomatic ties with Britain if it helped secure the release of British hostages in the Middle East, the Foreign Office said Sunday.

A Foreign Office spokesman welcomed reports out of Tehran that Iran will seek to restore diplomatic relations with Britain, which were severed 17 months ago in outrage over British author Salman Rushdie's novel, ''The Satanic Verses.''

''It is a step in the right direction, there is no doubt about that, and from that point of view it is welcome,'' the spokesman said of the reports in a telephone interview with United Press International. ''Nevertheless, obstacles to better relations remain.''

Britain hopes Iran can play a role in helping to free British hostages held by pro-Iranian Shiite radicals in Lebanon, and in the release of British businessman Roger Cooper, held on spy charges in an Iranian jail, he said.

''It would signal an improvement in the atmosphere between us if the Iranian authorities could make a gesture of goodwill on one or both of these subjects,'' the spokesman said.

The Foreign Office, which heard of Iran's plans only from a Tehran radio dispatch Saturday, has so far received no official communication from Iran on the matter, the spokesman said. He said his office was hoping to receive confirmation through the Swedish Embassy in Tehran.

Tehran radio said the decision was made at a session of the Iranian National Security Council held Thursday under the chairmanship of President Akbar Hashemi-Rafsanjani to discuss the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Iran said its decision stemmed from recent remarks by Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd, who emphasized Britain's ''greatest respect for Islam.''

Hurd's comments, and similiar respectful statements made earlier this year by Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, were intended to mollify Iran and Britain's Moslem community which were outraged over Rushdie's book, condemned by many Moslems as blasphemous.

But several British newspapers suggested Iran was seeking to take advantage of worldwide condemnation of Iraq to improve its ties with the West.

Iran broke relations with Britain in March 1989 after the late Iranian leader, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, issued a religious decree calling for Rushdie to be killed.

The move to restore ties is not expected to formally affect the death sentence against Rushdie, who has remained in hiding since it was issued.

CONCORD, NH (AUG. 5) UPI - Investigators believe a missing indicted New Hampshire judge is alive, and the focus of the search for him has shifted to likely homosexual contacts, the New Hampshire Sunday News reported.

Former Newport District Court Judge John C. Fairbanks has been missing since Dec. 29, 1989, the day after a grand jury indicted him on charges of stealing $1.8 million from clients.

Despite an 8-month-long investigation by New Hampshire authorities, no trace of Fairbanks has been found.

Cpl. Robert J. Adams, a state police detective, said Fairbanks had traveled extensively and authorities in 150 countries have been alerted to watch for him. But he said the search, which includes investigating homosexual contacts, is concentrated on Key West, Fla., Montreal, northern New England and the Adirondack region of New York state.

''His wife admitted to me that he is homosexual,'' Adams told the newspaper. ''She told me and my partner: 'You know, it's no secret. People in (Newport) have probably already told you.'''

Adams said Miriam Fairbanks suggested that her husband's frequent trips to Montreal before his indictment were ''because of his homosexuality.''

Adams said he believes Fairbanks is alive and living off of the money he allegedly stole from legal clients.

Fairbanks, 66, was a district court judge for more than 30 years. He resigned from the bench and the bar in June 1989 as investigators closed in on him.

In addition to the criminal charges, about 50 former legal clients have filed claims totaling $2 million against Fairbanks in U.S. Bankruptcy Court. Among the creditors are three sisters of Fairbanks who are seeking to recover trust funds that the former judge was supposed to have invested on their behalf.

Adams said he believes Fairbanks has been in touch with his family and is probably in the area.

''He may be in Europe, but I personally think he is still close by because of the ties he has in the area,'' Adams said. ''There is a strong possibility he could be under a totally new identification.''

CHARLOTTE, NC (AUG. 5) UPI - The bombardier who dropped the atomic weapon that destroyed Hiroshima 45 years ago said in an interview published Sunday he has no regrets or apologies, because his action ended World War II.

Thomas Ferebee, 71, told the Charlotte Observer he did not know the blast he unleashed on Aug. 6, 1945, would wipe out the city and kill an estimated 140,000 people instantly.

Nor did he know that it would be an irrevocable turning point in history.

That summer morning 45 years ago, Ferebee, then 26, a native of Mocksville N.C., knew he was getting ready to drop a special bomb, a secret weapon that could end the war.

''People have to go back and study the history of the war and the attitude of the people at that time,'' he said. ''Everybody wanted the war to end. That's what I wanted the most. I wanted the bomb to work and end the war.

''So I felt good, since the first time we used it, it worked. I don't care how much confidence you have in science, until that bomb goes off, you're not certain,'' he said.

Following the atomic bombing of Nagasaki, three days after Hiroshima, Japan surrendered, ending World War II on Aug. 15, 1945.

Ferebee, now a resident of Windemere, Fla., joined the Army in 1940. After two years of flying school in the Army Air Corps, he was assigned to be a bombardier.

After flying missions to Europe and North Africa, he was assigned in 1944 to a B-29 bomber air crew with Col. Paul Tibbets, the pilot, Capt. Theodore ''Dutch Van Kirk, the navigator, and nine other men.

''There was no way that I was going to get into an airplane without Ferebee and Van Kirk,'' Tibbets said. ''They did exactly what they were supposed to do when they were supposed to do it. We were all young kids ... but they were as professional as anybody you could possibly find.''

On Aug. 6, 1945, the bomber Enola Gay lifted off while two technicians armed the huge, strange-looking bomb.

About two hours from Hiroshima, Tibbets told the crew exactly what they were carrying, but Ferebee didn't hear. He was asleep.

It took 43 seconds for the bomb to fall and make its mark on history.

''At first, I saw this boiling on the ground and the stem (of the mushroom cloud) was going up and you could see buildings going up in the stem,'' Ferebee said.

''It was all colors. You can imagine, I think - brown, red, white - and it was spreading out in all directions. Then, finally, the stem formed completely and the top was there and it kind of broke off.''

The inferno killed 80,000 to 200,000, according to assorted estimates, reducing victims nearest the blast to blackened shadows on walls. Ferebee and Tibbets were blinded temporarily because they neglected to wear their dark glasses.

Van Kirk, 69, left the Army Air Force in 1946, returned to college for a master's degree in chemical engineering. From 1972 to 1978, he lived in Charlotte. Today he lives in San Francisco.

Tibbets stayed in the service, retiring in 1966 as a brigadier general. At 75, he lives in Columbus, Ohio.

Ferebee did not retire until 1970 after flying as an observer on bombing missions over Vietnam.

(AUG. 5) UPI - The White House says 225 U-S Marines have been sent into Liberia to evacuate American citizens and protect two Voice of America transmitters. Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says the troops were sent into the capital of Monrovia to ''safeguard lives'' and provide additional security for those Americans who remain. Fitzwater says the Marines are ''in a battle situation,'' and Congress has been notified of that. He says an additional 21-hundred Marines are on ships off the coast of the West African nation.

The U-S action comes after Liberian rebel leader Prince Johnson said yesterday he had ordered his troops to begin arresting foreigners. Johnson said he hoped the arrests would spur international intervention in Liberia's civil war between the rebels and forces loyal to President Samuel Doe. Johnson said American, British, Lebanese and Indian civilians would be singled out for detention, but he promised they would NOT be harmed.

The Kuwaiti Embassy in Washington denies that Iraqi troops are withdrawing from the tiny Persian Gulf nation, despite reports to the contrary by Egypt's Middle East News Agency. The second quake was located east of Tokyo, 18 miles beneath the sea bottom.

His public struggle against the virus highlighted the tragedy of AIDS in young Americans. The measure now goes to the White House.

A 15-hundred-acred wildfire prompted officials in Oregon to evacuate a heavily populated area in the central part of the state this morning. An Oregon forestry department spokesman says it's NOT clear exactly how many people were evacuated from the 10-mile area southwest of the town of Bend. Dave Morman says the fire has destroyed at least 10 or 12 structures and still is growing.

Tropical storm Diana is shaping up as the Caribbean's fourth named storm with 40 mile-an-hour winds that threaten the Yucatan Peninsula. Last night Diana was centered about 335 miles southeast of Cancun, Mexico. Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center in Florida say the storm is moving northwest at 14 miles an hour and is expected to continue on that track through today.

CHICAGO (AUG. 5) UPI - A utility substation explosion and fire Sunday cut off electricity to some 25,000 West Side and suburban customers, including 20,000 hit by an outage eight days earlier that led to scattered looting and millions of dollars in losses.

There were no immediate reports of major problems associated with the latest outage. Power was expected to be restored by Monday morning.

Witnesses reported seeing flames shooting 100 to 150 feet into the air at the Columbus Park electrical substation. The fire, which broke out about 9:10 a.m. was put out about 75 minutes later, leaving West Side and some suburban Oak Park customers in the dark.

Two Commonwealth Edison employees in the substation office to review their work orders for the day ''heard an explosion and exited the building as fast as they could,'' utility spokesman Steve Solomon said. ''These employees were saying this was a serious and powerful explosion. It wasn't just a transformer tripping. It was a major explosion.''

Edison spokesman Margaret Winters said the utility was ''real concerned'' about what started the fire, adding that the possibility of arson was being investigated.

''The cause has not been determined. We're not even sure if it was an electrical fire to begin with,'' she said. ''We did not have any electrical lines that tripped, so we do not believe this is an electrical fire origination.''

''We're not ruling out anything,'' said Solomon.

A July 28 fire at the Crawford substation left some 40,000 West Side residents without electricity, some for as long as three days. Damage from lost business, damaged food, scattered looting and other problems has been estimated as high as $10 million.

The first outage prompted an Illinois Commerce Commission investigation of the circumstances and potential liability for the fire. Edison is mounting its own investigation into the cause of the earlier outage.

The Columbus Park substation had been used by Edison to reroute power to 20,000 customers affected by the earlier outage and was continuing to serve those customers until Sunday's fire.

''It's a very unfortunate situation for the people on the West Side,'' Solomon said.

He added, however, that five of the six transformers in the area were operable and switching gear at Columbus Park suffered far less damage than similar equipment at the Crawford substation damaged in the previous fire.

He estimated customers should have electricity returned by Monday morning and said, ''It doesn't seem like it's going to be days like last time.''

The affected area was entirely blacked out near the substation, but outages became more scattered farther east, he said.

BY LEE STOKES - UPI

CAIRO, EGYPT (AUG. 5) UPI - The Arab world's appeasement of Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein's occupation of Kuwait is drawing clear parallels to futile Anglo-French attempts to stop Hitler from taking over Europe in World War II.

Western diplomats who watched Iraqi troops and tanks roll over the Kuwaiti border last Thursday were disappointed with Arab foot-dragging on the issue and the weak statements condemning Saddam's aggression that eventually trickled out from only 14 of the 20 Arab capitals.

The Saudis - who maintained the closest ties to the ousted Kuwaiti emir and form the military backbone of the six-member Gulf Cooperation Council of which Kuwait is a member - never even mentioned news of the invasion on Riyadh Radio and waited more than 48 hours before hinting the Iraqi invasion was wrong.

''There appears to be an absence of backbone in Saudi Arabia and Egypt when it comes to Iraq,'' said a government official from one of the smaller Persian Gulf states. If it comes to the crunch, the West can only help Arabs help themselves.''

''It remains to be seen if the deserts of Saudi Arabia will become Saddam's Stalingrad,'' the official said, referring to the city where Hitler's thrust into the Soviet Union stalled and eventually began to be repelled.

The official suggested that a move into Saudi Arabia would trigger a military reaction from Western powers.

According to the diplomats, a joint Saudi-Egyptian plan drafted Sunday ''smacks of 1938" in its attempt to offer Saddam a compromise solution, defuse the crisis and prevent any escalation that might oblige outside powers to intervene.

They drew parallels to Hitler's step-by-step occupation of the Rhineland, Czechoslovakia and Austria under the guise of national aspirations and economic necessity, and Hitler's correct calculation that Britain and France would sit back and do nothing.

''The parallels between the Anglo-French appeasement of Hitler after the Nazi takeover of Czechoslovakia's Sudetenland in 1938, and the position of Arab states towards Saddam today, have never been closer,'' said one Middle East-based Canadian diplomat.

The Saudi-Egyptian plan envisions that Kuwait's emir, deposed in the Iraqi invasion, never be reinstated, and that in return Saddam will allow a genuine Kuwaiti civilian government, whose first goal would be to acquiesce on Iraq's claims over disputed oil and territory.

''The Arabs will realize sooner or later that appeasement of bullies with the firepower of Saddam Hussein is not in their interests. ... But like Europe before the Second World War, internal difficulties and economic woes have made them weak and unable to respond effectively.''

West European diplomats have also reflected the deep concern of their governments over the Arab world's apparent lack of will to confront Saddam and force him to back down.

Baghdad's state-run media have made no secret of the fact that Iraq's ruling Ba'athist revolutionary council regards with scorn the royal families of the strategically vital gulf states. In 1958, Iraqi Ba'athists cut their own king into little pieces.

But swift British and Arab League military intervention in the early 1960s prevented Iraq from taking over Kuwait and expanding into the gulf region. Iranian troops fighting an eight-year war with Iraq foiled Baghdad's attempt to seize the strategic Shatt al Arab waterway, Iraq's only outlet to the gulf.

Even though Saddam now has access to gulf waters via occupied Kuwait, diplomats believe he will not stop there.

''All the signals indicate that Saddam will not stop at Kuwait ... and yet none of the Arab states want to admit this even to themselves,'' one European diplomat said.

''The interests of the West in the region are clear. ... We want stability, the free flow of oil and freedom of navigation in the Persian Gulf.

''Those interests are not so different from the aspirations of most Arab states. And yet if Saddam wins the battle over Kuwait, the regional policy not only of the West but also of the moderate Arab states will be in tatters.

''We might as well start redrawing the maps from now.''

The Western-oriented kings, sheikhs and emirs of the oil-rich Persian Gulf have the most to fear from Saddam's expansionist Ba'athist ideology.

But their inaction also reflects satisfaction over soaring oil prices and booming oil revenues.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 5) UPI - Marines evacuated 61 Americans wishing to flee the war in Liberia Sunday, and the United States said it would keep a skeletal staff at its embassy in the West African nation.

Fifteen helicopters from U.S. warships off the Liberian coast carried 255 Marines into the capital city of Monrovia to protect the Americans. Two Harrier jets provided cover for the operation.

The Marines evacuated 61 U.S. personnel from three sites - 40 from the U.S. Embassy, 18 from a communications site and three others from another communications site. Fifty-nine were flown to the USS Saipan in the Atlantic, and the remaining two stayed at the embassy.

The State Department said the ''drawdown'' of embassy staff was successful. An official said 41 embassy personnel, including the U.S. ambassador, would remain in Monrovia.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said a Marine reinforced rifle company was flown into war-torn Monrovia about 5 a.m. EDT to ''safeguard lives ... and provide additional security for those (Americans) who remain.''

About 70 U.S. diplomats and 300 other Americans had remained in Liberia, which has been the scene of fighting between government troops and rebels.

After the operation's completion, 237 Marines were left to secure the embassy. The operation ended at noon EDT, lasting about seven hours. There were no casualties, the Pentagon said.

The Americans aboard the Saipan were being taken to Freetown in neighboring Sierra Leone.

Fitzwater said U.S. troops will remain in Liberia ''as long as necessary.''

President Bush decided Saturday to send the Marines, who were stationed off the coast, into Liberia after rebel faction leader Prince Johnson threatened to arrest Americans and other foreigners to provoke international intervention in the 6-month-old civil war.

''It was a very clear indication of a threat against American citizens as well as foreign people in that country,'' Fitzwater said.

The Marine unit's mission was to secure the U.S. Embassy, remove workers from two Voice of America transmitter sites and evacuate Americans wishing to leave Liberia.

Liberian President Samuel Doe, who has been holed up in the presidential palace in Monrovia, was notified, Fitzwater said. He said he could not confirm whether the United States had been able to notify Johnson's breakaway rebel faction or the original rebel group headed by Charles Taylor, now a bitter rival of Johnson's.

Doe was told the United States had no intention to intervene or take sides in the war, which has claimed thousands of lives, Fitzwater said. U.S. allies in the region were notified of the president's decision.

Fitzwater said that ''on Saturday, sporadic shooting was heard near the embassy in the downtown district'' of Monrovia, ''a contested area between the Johnson-led rebels and the government.''

Johnson, whose troops have occupied much of the city in their battle to oust Doe, had said he told his men to single out American, British, Lebanese and Indian civilians for detention first. He said the arrests would start Monday.

Liberia was founded around 1822 by U.S. black freedmen who settled there with the assistance of the American Colonization Society, a private organization dedicated to the African repatriation of freed slaves. It became a republic on July 26, 1847.

BEND, OR (AUG. 5) UPI - More than 2,000 homes were evacuated Sunday as firefighters battled a 2,200-acre central Oregon wildfire that had already destroyed 27 suburban houses and was burning out of control in residential areas.

State forestry officials said the blaze in a heavily populated area southwest of Bend had caused an estimated $4.5 million damage, while hot, dry weather hampered efforts to contain it.

''The fire is literally growing on all sides,'' said Doug Decker, a spokesman for the Oregon Forestry Department. ''With the weather conditions forecast today, it's going to be extremely difficult to hold the fire.''

Temperatures reached 97 degrees Saturday afternoon and 100-degree heat was predicted for Sunday.

Decker said 1,000 firefighters were battling the blaze, calling in six air tankers and six helicopters to drop retardant and water from above.

He said the fire was burning on privately owned land in residential subdivisions.

''The area where the fire is, if it goes anywhere, it's going to affect more homes,'' Decker said. ''It's not commercial timber. It's timber around people's homes.''

The blaze spread rapidly because of high temperatures and low moisture levels in the pinelands where it began. Decker said it was 90 percent contained Sunday, but could easily jump firelines if the winds picked up.

About 600 firefighters spent Saturday night and early Sunday carving a line around the blaze, then burning the fuel between the fire's front line and the fire break, forestry officials said.

About 700 residents in the path of the fire were evacuated Saturday afternoon from the residential subdivisions of Sunrise Village, First on the Hill, Homestead and Deschutes River Woods between the Cascade Lakes Highway and U.S. Highway 97.

Evacuated Sunday as a precaution were the Mount Bachelor Village and Pinebrook subdivisions. The Inn at the Seventh Mountain, a popular area resort, also was evacuated as the fire burned about a mile away.

Decker said friends and relatives took in some of the displaced residents and others were taken to Red Cross shelters in the Bend and Mountain View high schools. He said an accurate count of the number of people evacuated was not available.

Decker said several evacuating residents suffered bruises and sprains, but no major injuries were reported.

The blaze, dubbed the Awbrey Hall fire, grew Saturday from about 300 acres to 1,500 acres in less than eight hours, officials said. The fire's cause was unknown.

The population of the greater metropolitan area of Bend about 75,000. The city has about 20,000 residents.

Oregon Gov. Neil Goldschmidt Saturday night declared Deschutes County a disaster area and the state fire marshal invoked the state's Conflagration Act, which allows rural fire departments to leave their jurisdictions to aid departments in other districts.

(AUG. 5) UPI - The White House says 59 Americans were evacuated from Liberia today by Marine helicopters, and officials say more will be evacuated if they want to leave. Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says the initial stages of the evacuation went well, and he said he's UNaware of any shots being fired or resistance being encountered. Today's evacuations come after 225 U-S Marines were flown into the capital of Monrovia to prevent a threatened rebel roundup of U-S citizens.

The U-S action comes after Liberian rebel leader Prince Johnson said his troops would begin arresting foreigners in the capital city of Monrovia tomorrow. Johnson made the statement yesterday, saying he hoped the detentions would provoke international intervention in Liberia that would help resolve the country's bloody civil war. Rebels continue to battle government troops loyal to President Samuel Doe.

Egypt's Middle East News Agency reports Iraqi troops have started withdrawing from Kuwait, but the Kuwaiti Embassy in Washington say that is NOT true. A spokesman for the Kuwaiti Embassy says the Iraqis are playing games and says NO Iraqi forces have left Kuwait. The news agency report did NOT specify how many of the 100-thousand Iraqi soldiers in Kuwait had left the oil-rich nation.

Coast Guard officials have revised their initial estimate of how much oil was spilled in last week's barge-tanker collision in the Houston Ship Channel. Authorities say it now appears 700-thousand- NOT 500-thousand-gallons of oil was spilled into Galveston Bay. Salvage crews lifted one of the barges which had sunk in the bay yesterday and discovered virtually NO oil aboard.

(AUG. 5) UPI - Jurors in the drug and perjury trial of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry deliberated for four hours yesterday without reaching a verdict. The panel did ask to see all exhibits entered into evidence during the trial. The jury is scheduled to resume deliberations tomorrow morning as the trial enters in 10th week.

The Florida judge who sentenced Roswell Gilbert to jail for killing his ailing wife says he does NOT believe Governor Bob Martinez should have granted the 81-year-old man clemency. Broward County Judge Thomas Coker sent a sharply worded letter to Martinez this week criticizing the governor's decision to let Gilbert go free. Gilbert says he killed his wife to end her suffering. Emily Gilbert suffered from Alzheimer's disease and osteoporosis.

Officials in Eugene, Oregon, say a teen-ager who was splashed with gasoline and set afire by his friends is in a Portland hospital in serious condition with burns over 12 percent of his body. Two of the victim's friends, including the one who set him on fire, told police the boy agreed to be ignited. The 12-year-old has been charged with first-degree arson and first-degree assault.

The fourth attempt at a transcontinental solar-powered flight from west to east has made headway. Pilot Eric Raymond took off from Wilcox, Arizona, yesterday in his 195-pound solar aircraft, named Sun-Seeker, and landed near Columbus, New Mexico. He is trying to fly to Kitty Hawk, North Carolina, within seven days. Raymond says he wants the flight to demonstrate the possibilities of solar transportation.

GALVESTON, TX (AUG. 5) UPI - The backlog of vessels waiting to use the Houston Ship Channel improved significantly Sunday, although traffic was still bottlenecked from a barge-tanker collision that dumped 700,000 gallons of oil into Galveston Bay.

Meanwhile, state officials planned to use more oil-eating microbes Sunday to break up oil threatening environmentally sensitive Merril Marsh near the mouth of Cedar Bayou in the upper reaches of the bay.

Coast Guard crews continued manning skimmers on the water and using vacuum trucks on the beaches around the bay to scoop up the oil spilled in the collision of a Greek tanker and a string of barges July 28.

Officials said Friday they feared as much as 700,000 gallons of oil had leaked from one partially submerged barge in the bay portion of the ship channel, which leads from Houston across Galveston Bay to meets the Gulf of Mexico just east of Galveston Island.

The busy waterway, closed since the collision, initially was reopened to outbound ship traffic after the crippled barge was moved Friday. Later, inbound ships and outbound tow traffic were permitted to move until 8:40 p.m. Saturday, Coast Guard officials said.

The traffic pattern was then reversed to allow inbound tow traffic - tugs with one to three barges - that had been stacked up in Galveston, Texas City and the Gulf Intracoastal Waterway to head toward port.

''It's like driving on a highway under construction - going from six lanes down to two - plus you have the backlog of traffic,'' said watch supervisor Tim Hicks at the Coast Guard's vessel traffic services office.

''The backlog is greatly reduced from what it was earlier in the week,'' he said at midmorning Sunday. ''We've already brought in about 90 tows in since last night.''

About 40 tows bound for Houston were waiting in the intracoastal canal Sunday, but Hicks was unsure about the outbound tow traffic. He said eight ships in port were waiting permission to sail, while another 11 to 12 ships remained offshore waiting to come in.

Petty Officer Mark Sedwick said Sunday the area of greatest environmental concern remains the upper reaches of the bay.

''Basically, it's from the Houston Point area to Point Barrow, up near Trinity Bay,'' Sedwick said.

Applying of the microbes, a process known as bioremediation, was being carried out by the Coast Guard, the Texas General Land Office, the Texas Water Commission and the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

The Texas Department of Health Authorities reopened portions of Galveston Bay to fin fishing Saturday, but the bay, a rich source of oysters, remained closed to shellfishing.

Environmentalists voiced growing concern that much of the oil had not evaporated and was lingering beneath the water's surface.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 5) UPI - President Bush declared Sunday that Iraq's aggression against Kuwait ''will not stand'' and the installation of a puppet government in the oil-rich emirate is unacceptable to the rest of the world.

''That signal has gone loud and clear to Iraq,'' Bush said, his voice rising in anger as he also insisted that his options are ''wide open.''

Bush made the remarks at the White House upon returning from the Camp David retreat in Maryland, where he spent much of the weekend on the telephone with world leaders in an effort to isolate Iraq economically for its Aug. 2 invasion of Kuwait.

While at Camp David, Bush also ordered 255 marines into the West African nation of Liberia to rescue 61 Americans caught up in civil war fighting.

For the first time, Bush expressed his disappointment with Arab leaders, particularly King Hussein of Jordan, who have failed to come up with a promised resolution to the Iraqi conquest of Kuwait.

Bush scorned Iraq's contention that it would begin pulling its troops out of Kuwait on Sunday.

''Iraqis lied once again. They said they were going to begin moving out today and we have no evidence they are moving out,'' Bush said.

The president spoke a couple of hours before summoning his top advisers to the White House Sunday to review military options. He planned to meet Monday with NATO Secretary-General Manfred Woerner and with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, with whom he conferred last week at Aspen, Colo. Thatcher is stopping in Washington while on her return to London.

A White House spokesman declined to comment on reports that Defense Secretary Dick Cheney had been dispatched to Saudi Arabia.

Bush said the world is united against Iraqi President Saddam Hussein's aggression against his country's neighbor.

''There is a united front that Iraq, having committed brutal aggression, ought to get out, and this concept of their installing and leaving some puppet behind is not acceptable,'' Bush said angrily.

Bush repeatedly sidestepped questions concerning his next possible moves to thwart the Iraqi takeover.

''I'm not going to discuss moving forces, but I view very seriously any threat to any other countries and our view to take out this aggression,'' he said.

''We will will be working with all for collective action,'' he asserted. ''This will not stand - this aggression against Kuwait,'' Bush said.

''All options are open, and there is a strong feeling on the part of the NATO countries to whom I've talked,'' he added, ''Turkey being one of them that we must have concerted action to isolate Iraq economically.''

''You can assume those matters are being discussed,'' Bush said, adding that he could not discuss ''the state of play'' that threatened Saudi Arabia. Bush spoke twice by telephone with Saudi King Fahd.

Bush discussed with Fahd and Turkish President Turgut Ozal the status of the Iraqi oil pipelines that run through their countries. Bush told reporters that he spoke to Ozal during the weekend and planned to contact him again Sunday afternoon before meeting with his advisers.

Calling Saddam and his forces ''international outlaws and renegades,'' Bush responded laconically as to how he plans to prevent a puppet regime from replacing Kuwait's Emir Jabar al-Sabah: ''Just wait. Watch and learn.''

Bush revealed that he had given "assurances" to the emir, who fled his country and was taking refuge in Saudi Arabia. Bush did not say what the assurances were.

Bush said he would not discuss the intelligence situation on the ground in Kuwaut right now but he had not heard a figure of 18 army divisions moving in, as has been reported.

The president said he did ''not have the feeling'' that any Americans ''are in imminent danger right now.''

''The threat is the vicious aggression against Kuwait and that speaks for itself, and anything collaterally is just simply more indication that these are international outlaws and renegades,'' Bush said.

''And I want to see the United Nations move soon with Chapter 7 sanctions and I want to see the rest of the world join us as they are in overwhelming numbers to isolate Saddam Hussein,'' he added.

If invoked by the United Nations, Chapter 7 would permit a worldwide economic blockade of Iraq and allow other sanctions.

(AUG. 5) UPI - U-S Marines flew into the capital city of Liberia today to protect Americans from a threatened roundup by rebels opposed to the government of President Samuel Doe. The White House says a re-inforced rifle company of 225 Marines flew into Monrovia by helicopter. Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says their mission is to secure the U-S Embassy and evacuate any of 300 other American citizens who want to leave.

President Bush decided to send the Marines into Liberia yesterday. He acted after rebel faction leader Prince Johnson said his forces would arrest Americans and other foreigners to force international intervention in the bloody six-month civil war in Liberia. The White House says about 21-hundred other Marines are on four U-S ships off the Liberian coast. A spokesman says the Marines will remain in Liberia ''as long as necessary.'' 59 people were flown by Marine helicopters to the Navy vessels off the coast this morning.

The Kuwaiti Embassy in Washington, D-C, is denying reports that Iraqi invasion forces have begun withdrawing from the oil-rich emirate. The Middle East News Agency reported in Cairo that an unspecified number of the 100-thousand Iraqi troops in Kuwait began withdrawing this morning. The report says the U-N Security Council had been informed of the planned withdrawal. But the Kuwaiti Embassy spokesman in Washington said the Iraqis are- his words here- ''playing games.''

An administration official says President Bush has postponed a five-nation trip to Latin American that had been scheduled for mid-September. The official says the action has NO relation to the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. He says the postponement comes so Bush can deal with the continuing negotiations with Congress on the budget deficit and the fiscal 1991 spending plan.

JERUSALEM (AUG. 5) UPI - Left-wing Israeli Parliament members and prominent Palestinians Sunday agreed to a set of guidelines for holding negotiations to resolve the Israeli-Palestinian conflict.

The guidelines, believed to be the first such informal accords reached by Israeli politicians and Palestinians, proposed talks leading to Palestinian self-determination.

Left-wing Israeli leaders said Sunday's document would establish a framework for future meetings between the two sides.

''I don't expect breakthroughs,'' said Dedi Zucker of the Citizens' Rights Movement. ''I just expect to launch a permanent forum that would allow us, Israelis and Palestinians ... to meet and to speak frankly and in the open.''

The four-point plan called for negotiations between the Israeli government and ''the internationally recognized legitimate representative of the Palestinian people,'' an reference to the Palestine Liberaton Organization.

Yosi Beilin of the Labor Party said he believed at least half of the 38 Labor members in Parliament would support the initiative.

''I believe that this is actually building the atmosphere and the background for such negotiations (in the future),'' he said.

The 12 Israelis and 15 Palestinians, who drew up the document, did not sign it. Palestinian journalist Radwan Abu Ayash said the agreement was intended to send a message to the Israeli public showing the Palestinians' desire for a negotiated peace. He said Sunday's agreement would ''push forward the peace process.''

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir's right-wing government opposes talks with the PLO and supports and 1989 Israeli peace initiative calling elections leading to limited autonomy in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip.

CHETUMAL, MEXICO (AUG. 5) UPI - Tropical Storm Diana swept over the Yucatan with 45 mph winds Sunday, but U.S. forecasters predicted it would cause little damage in its passage across the peninsula from the Caribbean to the Gulf of Mexico.

Diana was expected to re-emerge over gulf waters sometime Monday morning, at which point it could move north to threaten the U.S. coast, said Bob Case of the National Hurricane Center near Miami.

''The people along the Gulf Coast certainly need to keep a wary eye on it '' Case said.

Tropical storm warnings were raised for the east coast of the Yucatan peninsula from Cancun, Mexico, south to Belize City, Belize.

At 2 pm CDT, Diana was centered near latitude 19.3 north and longitude 87.6 west, on the coast about 70 miles northeast of Chetumal, on the border with Belize, forecasters said.

The storm was moving northwest at near 15 mph, with maximum sustained winds of about 45 mph. Forecasters said only slight weakening was likely while the storm passed across the peninsula.

Tropical storm force winds extended outward up to 100 miles, mainly to the north, the hurricane center said.

Diana was considered a weak tropical storm. Meteorologist Daniel Petersen said strong thunderstorms often generate winds of similar strength.

''We're looking at broken tree limbs, that kind of damage. We are not looking at wrecked homes here,'' Petersen said.

Coastal residents in the Yucatan could expect tides of 3 to 5 feet above normal, he said.

''The biggest problem is going to be the rainfall. Locally heavy rains are going to be occurring, on the order of 5 to 8 inches along the path of the storm,'' he said. ''There could be a problem with some flash flooding as the storm moves across the peninsula, late this afternoon and tonight.''

Roberto Vargas, director of the Civil Protection Committee for the Mexican state of Quintana Roo, said the navy and coast guard had been put on alert and that shipping was suspended in the region at 6 a.m.

Vargas said preparations were under way to shelter anyone left homeless by the storm, although he added that weather reports indicated the situation was unlikely to be serious.

Case said forecasters expect the storm to gain strength once it emerges over the warm gulf waters.

''I think it will go ahead and strengthen, possibly even to a hurricane,'' he said. ''It doesn't take much encouragement.''

Case said models prepared by the hurricane center staff showed several possible paths for the storm.

Diana may move west onto the coast of Mexico, or north toward the United States, depending on how the storm is influenced by another weather system over the Gulf of Mexico, he said.

Meanwhile, Tropical Storm Cesar continued to churn across the Atlantic.

At noon EDT, the storm was centered near latitude 25.8 north and longitude 45.7 west, or about 1,225 miles southeast of Bermuda.

Cesar was moving north-northwest at near 8 mph, and forecasters said that motion was expected to continue through Sunday.

Maximum sustained winds were near 50 mph, and little change in strength was expected during the next 24 hours.

(AUG. 5) UPI - 225 U-S Marines are in Liberia's capital in what the White House describes as ''a battle situation.'' The troops were flown into Monrovia today to evacuate and protect Americans from a threatened rebel roundup of foreigners. About 21-hundred more Marines are stationed on four ships off the Liberian coast.

There are reports today that Iraqi forces have begun withdrawing from Kuwait in a move that apparently would leave behind a puppet Kuwaiti government. But the United States and its allies in the Middle East are on guard against a possible Kuwaiti push into neighboring Saudi Arabia.

China says it is suspending the sale of weapons to Iraq in keeping with a U-N resolution calling for sanctions against Baghdad in response to its invasion of Kuwait. A Western diplomat in Beijing says the United States had expressed concern to China's government over the lucrative arms sales.

The White House says President Bush is making some changes in his schedule to to allow for more time for negotiations with Congress on reducing the federal deficit. An administration official says Bush is delaying a five-nation tour of Central America that had been scheduled for the middle of next month.

Firefighters were up all night in central Oregon, fighting a 22-hundred acre wildfire that has damaged or destroyed 22 homes. About 700 people have evacuated the heavily populated area southwest of Bend. The fire was 85 percent contained this morning, but the flames may increase if winds pick up.

ASPEN, CO (AUG. 5) UPI - British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher said Sunday the United Nations should enforce a total economic blockade against Iraq unless Baghdad removes its invasion force from Kuwait ''without delay.''

''If we let (the invasion) succeed, no small country can ever feel safe again,'' Thatcher said at the Aspen Institute's 40th anniversay symposium.

The British leader visited the institute, a think tank for international and public affairs, to receive its prestigious Statesman's Award.

''Iraq's invasion of Kuwait defies every principle for which the U.N. stands,''Thatcher said at the symposium's closing ceremonies.

''The U.N. must assert its authority and apply a total economic embargo unless Iraq withdraws without delay,'' said Thatcher, asserting ''the law of the jungle'' must not ''take over from the rule of law.''

Thatcher had planned to stay in Colorado for several days, but decided to return early to London to deal with the Middle East crisis touched off by Iraq's military action against Kuwait.

She met with President Bush last Thursday in Aspen and planned to stop by for ''final consultations'' at the White House Monday before leaving for London.

Thatcher said that to be fully effective, sanctions ''will need the collective support'' of all U.N. members.

''They must stand up and be counted, because a vital principle is at stake: An aggressor must never be allowed to get his way,'' she said.

WEST BERLIN (AUG. 5) UPI - West Germany's Lufthansa airlines landed in West Berlin Sunday for the first time since the end of World War II, picking up Soviet children who had spent their vacation in East Germany and returning them to the Soviet Union.

The airline, which had not been allowed to fly to Berlin since 1945, needed special permission to land in the long-divided city from the victorious World War II allies - France, Britain, the United States and Soviet Union.

After the war, the allies had reserved all rights for air traffic to Berlin for their own airlines.

''There is no better way to spend a weekend, coming by plane to Berlin for the first time and then for such a good purpose,'' said Lufthansa pilot Robert Salzer.

The Lufthansa 747 jumbo jet landed at Berlin Schoenefeld airport. It picked up 200 Soviet children from the Soviet region around Chernobyl who were returning to Minsk after spending three weeks vacation in East Germany.

Although the children were excited to see Russian-language cartoons and comics on the Lufthansa plane, most said they were sad to leave.

''The three weeks passed much too quickly,'' said an 11-year-old named Igor, who now lives in the Soviet town of Gomel.

The East German airline Interflug had flown the youngsters to Berlin from Minsk in cooperation with Lufthansa.

In Minsk, Lufthansa will pick up another 360 Soviet children and deliver them to East and West Germany where they will spend their vacations.

The holiday program is organized by East German and Soviet citizen groups to give summer vacations to children who live around Chernobyl, many of whom still suffer health problems from the 1986 nuclear reactor explosion.

LOS ANGELES (AUG. 5) UPI - Wholesale gasoline prices surged upward by as much as 25 cents a gallon last week as the invasion of Kuwait caught distributors already scrambling for supplies during the peak driving season, an industry analyst said Sunday.

On a nationwide average, the wholesale price for unbranded unleaded gasoline jumped 9.5 cents during the week ended Friday, according to a survey conducted by Trilby Lundberg of the Lundberg Letter.

Some wholesalers also have increased prices by an additional 6 cents since Friday, Lundberg said, but she did not have a broad enough sample to compute a new average.

She said price increases vary greatly, with some wholesalers up 25 cents and some unchanged. Generally, the Midwest saw the biggest increases.

In two other classes of wholesale trade, price increases were less dramatic. Brand-name gasoline sold to distributors moved up less than 5 cents, and gasoline delivered by major brands to their own dealers moved up only 2.5 cents.

Lundberg, who found a nationwide average retail gasoline price of just over $1.05 on July 20, does not have another retail survey scheduled until Aug. 10.

She said the wholesale price increases are being rapidly reflected at the pump.

''It is logical and expected that dealers will act on any potential of protecting or improving profit margin,'' Lundberg said. ''Our system doesn't work without a profit margin in each point in the system.''

The current events in the Middle East increased gasoline prices so rapidly because of the structure of the industry and the time of year, said Lundberg, whose father, the late Dan Lundberg, gained international fame in the 1970s for his surveys during the Arab oil embargo.

News of the invasion of Kuwait sent prices up sharply on the international market for future delivery of crude oil. The jump in the futures market was quickly reflected in the ''spot'' market for immediate delivery of oil and refined products such as gasoline and heating oil, Lundberg said.

Because of peak summer driving demands, wholesalers without sufficient refining capacity to serve the needs of all of their customers were caught up in the skyrocketing spot market.

Lundberg said environmental requirements of different types of gasoline for different areas of the country make it harder for distributors to respond to a crisis without bidding up prices on the spot market.

She said she expects prices to rise further throughout the peak driving period, but said it would take a serious and sustained crude oil shortage to keep prices rising beyond the end of the month.

LONDON (AUG. 5) UPI - The Emir of Kuwait, Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah, pledged Sunday that his nation's independence would be restored and urged his subjects not to surrender.

In a televised statement from an undisclosed location in Saudi Arabia, the emir pledged that the Iraqi invasion ''would never conquer our will, and we would never surrender to aggression.''

''We will never give in to the invaders,'' said the emir, who appeared hesitant and subdued in his first public statement since the assault, which is reported to have left between 600 to 800 Kuwaitis dead.

His remarks came about an hour before a delegation of six Kuwaitis, including one member of the ruling family, landed in Britain after flying from Saudi Arabia, where they, the emir and other ministers had fled to escape capture by Saddam Hussein's troops.

''The delegation will be visiting Kuwaiti citzens in capitals of Europe to pass on a message of hope and resassurance from the emir and the Kuwaiti government,'' a spokeswoman at the Kuwaiti Embassy in London said.

She said the delegation flew to London's Heathrow Airport aboard a special Kuwaiti Airlines flight. She said they came ''on their own accord,'' for a short visit which includes plans to hold a news conference on Tuesday.

Included in the delegation was Dr. Mohamed al-Sabah, who described the situation in Kuwait in an interview with the British Broadcasting Corp.

''The Iraqis are going through looting everything, rampaging, stealing the homes, taking people out of their cars, getting their money, breaking into banks,'' he said.

In his speech, the emir said he despaired of the invasion, but praised his country's courage in remarks to the Kawaiti people distributed by the Kuwaiti Embassy in London.

''What makes our hearts filled with sadness is that the source of this unjustified aggression was not an enemy, but came from a brother and a close neighbor to whom we have lent our support during his time of difficulty,'' he said.

''The Kuwait people have always, through determination and steadfastness, remained free, dignified and proud, despite previous calamities and painful experiences,'' he said, noting the ''brave and relentless resistance demonstrated by the Kuwaiti armed forces, the national guard, the police and the ordinary people in the face of the invasion.''

He stressed that Kuwait was not alone in confronting the Iraqi aggression and said he was encouraged by the strong and swift international support it had received from around the world.

(AUG. 5) UPI - The White House says President Bush spent part of the morning on the telephone, speaking with world leaders about the crisis in the Persian Gulf. Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says Bush's talks included discussions with the leaders of Turkey and Saudi Arabia, apparently to encourage both nations to block the Iraqi oil pipelines that run through both countries. Fitzwater adds that the administration welcomes Japan's announcement that it will boycott Iraqi oil exports. Tokyo is a major importer of Iraqi oil.

Iraq's News Agency reports today that ''thousands'' of military vehicles and troops in Kuwait began leaving today under a timetable Baghdad claims it delivered to the United Nations. In Washington, however, the White House says it has ''NO independent or confirmable information'' to back up the Iraqi report. Officials say U-S intelligence shows that Iraqi troops are near the Saudi Arabian border- quote- ''generally in the five to 10 mile range.''

The White House say U-S troops will remain on Liberian soil ''as long as necessary.'' Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater says a 225-member reinforced rifle company was flown into Monrovia today to protect and evacuate Americans in Liberia. About 21-hundred more Marines are stationed on four ships off the Liberian coast. Fitzwater says the U-S military will NOT intervene in Liberia's civil war.

Forestry Department spokesman Dave Morman says firefighters face ''tough'' conditions as they battle a blaze burning ''out of control'' in central Oregon. Morman says firefighters are dealing with near 100-degree temperatures, low humidity and winds along with the flames. Officials say the 22-hundred-acre wildfire has already destroyed 22 homes and may threaten hundreds more.

Chicago's West Side is once again in the dark. Utility officials say a fire at a Commonwealth Edison sub-station cut off electricity to about 25-thousand West Side and west Suburban customers. Those affected by today's outage include 20-thousand homes hit by another outage eight days ago that led to scattered looting and Millions of dollars in losses. There is NO immediate word on the cause of the blaze or when power would be restored.

(AUG. 5) UPI - President Bush was on the telephone today with world leaders, pushing for a boycott of Iraqi oil exports. Japan's prime minister told Bush that his country will impose various sanctions against Iran... including an embargo of Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil. Bush welcomed the Japanese boycott, saying he is confident that such measures would help drive Iraq out of Kuwait.

Iraq says its invasion force is pulling out of Kuwait, but leaving behind a ''popular army'' of Iraqi volunteers. The White House and other observers are skeptical of the reported withdrawal. The Iraqi-installed government is threatening to close the Kuwaiti embassies of hostile nations.

A reinforced rifle company of 225 U-S Marines is in the war-torn capital of Liberia. The Marines were flown to the west African nation this morning to protect Americans against a threatened rebel roundup of foreigners. They also will evacuate Americans who wish to leave the country.

Firefighters are racing to protect hundreds of homes threatened by a fast-moving 22-hundred-acre wildfire in Oregon. The blaze has already destroyed 22 houses and forced the evacuation of 700 residents near Bend, which is in the central part of the state. Fire officials fear triple-digit temperatures and low humidity today may make their job particularly tough.

Tomorrow marks the beginning of crucial peace negotiations between the South African government and the black nationalist African National Congress. This will be the second round of talks, which began in May. Government officials and A-N-C sources say they believe more will be accomplished at these talks because the sides have gained some trust in each other.

(AUG. 5) UPI - Sources say that President Bush has dispatched Defense Secretary Cheney to Saudi Arabia, which the administration fears may become Iraq's next target in the Persian Gulf. Saudi Arabia has long refused to permit U-S forces on its bases, but the crisis in the oil-rich region presents a new emergency opportunity for the administration to press its case. Bush met late today at the White House with top aides to again review the situation in the Persian Gulf, where Iraqi troops occupy Kuwait and have moved within miles of the Saudi border. Without a Saudi base of operations, it would be difficult, if not impossible, for the United States to help fend off an attack by Iraqi troops.

Kuwaiti residents are contradicting Iraqi claims that invasion forces are withdrawing from Kuwait. The residents say the troops are actually moving within the conquered emirate toward the Saudi border. President Bush is one of a number of observers who do NOT believe Iraq's claim that a pullout is underway. Bush says there's NO such evidence and the Iraqis were UNtruthful about their vow to withdraw.

Italy's government averted a collapse today when the ruling coalition won final parliamentary approval for a bill regulating broadcasters. The measure limits the amount of advertising on public and private television channels. It also says a company or individual can hold NO more than 25 percent of the total media market. Government use of confidence votes to force the bill through prompted the resignation of five government ministers.

Commonwealth Edison managed to restore electricity to 25-thousand Chicago customers late this afternoon... but NOT before the company was harshly criticized for the city's second black-out in eight days. The lights went out after a fire ripped through a ComEd sub-station used to restore power after last week's power outage on the city's west side. Mayor Richard Daley says he plans to create a task force to investigate all utilities that serve the city.

DAYTON, Ohio (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - NCR Corp. announced that Wal-Mart Stores Inc., the discount retail chain, has selected NCR PACESETTER scanners and personal computers for installation throughout its enterprise.

The contract with Wal-Mart is valued at approximately $6 million over the next several years.

''We selected the NCR PACESETTER scanner because it can scan and decode even the most difficult-to-read product labels, thus improving customer service,'' said Robert Martin, senior vice president of Corporate MIS, Wal-Mart. ''It also results in improved checker productivity and accuracy. For instance, the scanner has the capability, on the first pass to read bad labels that previously required the POS cashier to scan the label a second time.''

For example, in a medium-sized Wal-Mart store, 20 NCR PACESETTER Scanners would be connected to point-of-sale terminals in order to scan UPC (Universal Product Code) labels on products and coupons, and to capture information for inventory.

The NCR PACESETTER Scanner units will be installed primarily in Wal-Mart's 175 new stores planned for this year and next year.

According to Tony Fano, vice president, NCR Retail Systems Division, ''Based on industry standards, PACESETTER fits in with NCR's Open, Cooperative Computing strategy of providing enterprise-wide computing solutions based on open systems components and cooperative processing.''

Under the current contract, Wal-Mart has installed 125 NCR personal computers with plans to install up to 500 units. The NCR personal computers are connected to a Novell LAN and are used in a personal productivity role.

''This is a significant milestone for us with Wal-Mart, a company we have had a long-standing relationship with,'' said Frank Farrell, area vice president of NCR's Southwest retail division. ''In fact, we already have NCR personal computers installed in more than 900 stores.''

Stores in the 27-year-old Wal-Mart chain are designed as one-stop family shopping centers featuring a variety of merchandise in 36 departments. Wal-Mart has 1,438 stores and 129 wholesale clubs operating in a 30-state trade territory. The company also operates 16 distribution centers nationwide.

Service and maintenance support for NCR products is provided by NCR's 5,000 field and software engineers at over 400 locations throughout the United States.

SANTA CLARA, CA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - National Semiconductor Corp.'s Computer Enhancement Group (CEG) Monday expanded its EtherNODE family of Ethernet adapter cards with the introduction of two new products for Apple Macintosh computers.

The adapter cards join CEG's Ethernet solutions for IBMR PCs and compatibles introduced in June 1990 and allow Macintosh computers to connect to Ethernet Local Area Networks (LANs).

National's new boards, the first products to come to market as the result of the company's technology agreement and joint engineering development with Dove Computer Corp., are designed for Apple's Macintosh II and SE/30 computers.

EtherNODE 16 NB is a 16-bit NuBus board for all models of the Macintosh II and EtherNODE 32 SE/30 is a 32-bit DMA (direct memory access) board for the Macintosh SE/30 Processor Direct Slot. Both boards feature the latest IC technology from National Semiconductor and include software drivers that are fully compatible with Apple's EtherTalk.

Paul Jain, general manager of CEG, said: ''National Semiconductor is committed to supplying Macintosh users with the latest and most reliable LAN technology. We offer a fully compatible Ethernet system that will enable Macintosh users to gain the maximum benefit from the large networks and increased throughput made possible by Apple's Phase II networking.

''We expect the number of Ethernet connected Macintosh systems to grow rapidly from the current 7 percent to nearly half of the systems shipped by the end of 1992 and plan to be a major supplier to those systems.''

EtherNODE 32 SE/30 utilizes National's next-generation DP83932 SONICTM (System-Oriented Network Interface Controller) device, which eliminates network bottlenecks and maximizes system performance in 32-bit microprocessor based systems.

It uses surface mount technology wherever possible to maintain the highest level of technology and provide the most reliable product available.

EtherNODE 16 NB is based on National's DP839X, the industry's most widely used Ethernet LAN chip set. It is designed to use the minimum number of components, resulting in the first half-card Ethernet adapter for NuBus and ensuring maximum reliability. The board features total compatibility, even to the level of supporting operation with Apple's EtherTalk driver.

Both boards incorporate connectors for both thick and thin Ethernet coax cable. On-board support for 10BaseT twisted pair Ethernet is planned for introduction later this year.

CEG plans to expand its Macintosh networking line with the introduction of additional new products during 1990 within the scope of the National and Dove agreement. These will include two boards, a new Ethernet adapter for the Macintosh SE and a 32-bit, SONIC-based, ultra high-performance board for the Macintosh II.

In addition to CEG's Apple and PC Ethernet adapter products, the group also offers other connectivity system solutions for IBM PCs and compatibles, including 3270 terminal emulation, PC fax and SNA gateway products.

Ethernet is the most popular network for connecting IBM PCs, UNIX workstations and Digital Equipment Corp. VAX Computers. It has evolved into the de facto LAN standard because of its numerous connectivity options and its ability to carry copious amounts of data between large numbers of connected computers and other devices.

Because of the high reliability of National's board and IC technology, EtherNODE products carry the only five-year warranty available on Ethernet controller boards. Suggested retail price for the EtherNODE 16 NB is $495.00. EtherNODE 32 SE/30 is priced at $595.00. Orders for both products are now being accepted for delivery within 30 days.

The boards are available from leading dealers and distributors. For additional information, call 800/538-8510 or 408/721-5020.

National Semiconductor Corp., with headquarters in Santa Clara, is a leader in the design, manufacturing and marketing of advanced proprietary semiconductor and system products for high-growth markets such as data communications, telecommunications, office peripherals, mass storage and automotive electronics.

Dove Computer Corp., based in Wilmington, N.C., designs, manufactures and sells enhancement products for use in the Apple Macintosh personal computer market. Dove designs and markets memory, networking, accelerator and communications products. Dove products are available through dealers and distributors worldwide.

DALLAS (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - At the Siggraph '90 conference Monday, Sun Microsystems unveiled visualization workstations powered by the new VX and MVX visualization accelerators.

These new visualization models of Sun's powerful deskside SPARC workstations deliver high performance across the full range of visualization techniques, including image processing, volume rendering, 3-D graphics and high-quality rendering.

Such visualization capabilities have previously been available only on the most costly graphics supercomputers or on multiple special-purpose accelerators.

These latest additions to Sun's visualization product line -- the broadest of any workstation vendor -- will be utilized by developers and sophisticated end users in areas such as medical imaging, remote sensing, earth resources, scientific visualization, pharmaceutical/chemical, geographic information systems and mechanical computer-aided design.

The new SPARCstation VX models contain the single-board VX accelerator, which offers 40 MIPS and 60 peak MFLOPS (double precision). This accelerator has twice the performance and memory of Sun's TAAC-1 accelerator, at a lower price.

A multi-processor MVX board can be added to VX models to boost accelerator performance to 160 MIPS and 240 peak MFLOPS, or more than four to six times faster than the TAAC-1.

Sun already offers a broad range of graphics hardware and software products, including the industry's fastest desktop 2-D graphics systems. Now, Sun has become the leader in visualization by offering a variety of technologies spanning graphics, imaging, rendering and animation. This is in contrast to other vendors, who specialize in only graphics or only imaging technologies.

''Today's leading-edge applications require more than just lines and polygons used in graphics; they need the full range of visualization capabilities,'' said Mary Whitton, director of marketing for visualization products at Sun.

''Our focus is on making visualization more accesible to mainstream applications by integrating technologies, simplifying use, increasing performance at the high end and lowering the cost of entry-level products.''

With the introduction of its visualization workstations, Sun now offers visual computing solutions in a wide range of price points. These solutions begin at under $20,000 for a 15.8-MIPS desktop SPARCstation 1+ running SunVision software up to a 22-MIPS SPARCstation 470VX with the MVX for under $120,000.

An important feature of systems including the VX and MVX is that they boost the performance of SunVision applications by two to 15 times. SunVision visualization software, which will be shipped beginning in August, and XGL, Sun's 2-D/3-D graphics software library (already shipping), are bundled with the VX.

SunVision includes libraries and advanced tools for easy development of visualization applications. All SunVision visualization tools are easy to use, since they share OPEN LOOK, an intuitive graphical user interface.

In addition to using SunVision's tools and libraries, developers can take advantage of the robust C development tools that are bundled with the VX and MVX. With these tools, developers can harness the full processing power of the VX and MVX to extend the capabilities of SunVision or to develop new visualization software.

REDMOND, WA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Microsoft Corp. Monday announced the availability of several gateway products which provide additional connectivity capabilities to users of Microsoft Mail version 2.0 for AppleTalk networks.

These products, which allow Microsoft Mail systems to be connected to VMS Mail, All-In-One, MCI MAIL, UNIX SMTP and other external systems, provide connectivity solutions that offer enterprise-wide capabilities for diverse networked environments.

The well-defined set of APIs (application programming interfaces) in Microsoft Mail allows for the development of gateways that offer the highest level of performance and reliability between two systems. The Microsoft Mail architecture is designed to allow developers to seamlessly integrate gateways for a completely transparent connectivity solution. This capability allows developers to provide gateway products that let Mail users communicate with users on external systems without having to learn cryptic addressing protocols or leave the familiar and easy-to-use Microsoft Mail environment.

AlisaMail from Alisa Systems is a Microsoft Mail-compatible VMS Mail server that runs on a VAX and directly communicates with Microsoft Mail servers. AlisaMail's unique Information Switch architecture also provides easy-to-administer gateways to All-In-One, IBM PROFS and X.400. In addition, Alisa offers MailMate/MM, a gateway that resides on a Mac-based Microsoft Mail Server that provides connectivity between Microsoft Mail and DECnet-based mail services.

PacerPost from Pacer Software enables VAX systems running the VMS operating system to function as a fully compatible Microsoft Mail server, gateway or client. PacerPost has been constructed according to Microsoft specifications and is 100 percent compatible with Mail's sophisticated store-and-forward messaging, client-server architecture.

GatorMail-M from Cayman Systems Inc. provides UNIX connectivity, which lets Microsoft Mail users exchange mail directly with any mail system using SMTP (Simple Messaging Transport Protocol), the mail protocol most widely used by UNIX computers. GatorMail-M can be used with or without a GatorBox, Cayman's LocalTalk to TCP/IP bridge.

CommGATE, from Solutions Inc., takes advantage of the Microsoft Mail programmable gateway architecture to provide efficient access to a wide variety of MCI MAIL services. In particular, CommGATE supports the sub-addressing capabilities of MCI MAIL, allowing multiple users to send and receive messages through a single account.

(ASE:SIE) Monday reported that income before litigation judgment reserve for the second quarter ended June 30, 1990 was $1,620,000 or 28 cents per share compared to net income of $718,000 or 12 cents per share for the second quarter of 1989, an increase of 126 percent.

The company also recorded a reserve of $6.5 million, or $1.12 per share, as a result of a previously disclosed legal judgment. Including the $6.5 million reserve, the company recorded a net loss of $4,880,000 or 84 cents per share compared to net income of $718,000 or 12 cents per share for the second quarter of 1989.

Revenue for the quarter ended June 30, 1990 was $40,691,000 compared to $33,396,000 for the same period in 1989, an increase of 22 percent.

The above mentioned legal judgment found against the company, Anthony M. Marlon M.D., chairman, president and chief executive officer of the company, and David B. Willis, a former director and officer of the company resulted from a class action lawsuit originally filed on Oct. 10, 1986.

The company and the other named defendants disagree with this verdict and have asked the court for a judgment notwithstanding the verdict. Failing a favorable ruling on this motion, the defendants intend to file an appeal.

SALT LAKE CITY (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Laser Corp. (NASDAQ:LSER) Monday announced results for the second quarter ended June 30.

Net sales for the three months ended June 30 were $2,359,000, a decrease of 6.4 percent from $2,521,000 in the second quarter of 1989. Net income for the quarter was $148,000 or 4 cents per share, as compared with $219,000, or 6 cents per share, for the comparable period in 1989.

Net sales for the six months ended June 30 were $4,725,000 compared with $4,800,000 for the comparable period in 1989, a decrease of 1.6 percent. The decrease in net sales is primarily due to a decrease in new unit sales offset by an increase in service revenues. Net income for the six month period was $188,000, or 6 cents per share, as compared with a loss of $227,000, or (3 cents) per share, for the like period in 1989.

Larry Levy, president and chief executive officer of Laser Corp., commented that he was pleased with the continuing improvements in the areas of cost of products sold, with the resulting gross margins providing the necessary cash for new product development.

''The company is anticipating that third quarter profits will remain low as a result of increased R&D spending, and still estimates a full-year profit before taxes of approximately one million dollars as a result of increased revenues associated with these new products later in the year.''

SAUSALITO, CA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Autodesk (NASDAQ/NMS:ACAD) one of the nation's largest software companies, announced Monday that growing anti-piracy awareness among software consumers, as well as increased assistance from law enforcement agencies, combined to net the company over $2 million in payments recovered from those found to have infringed on Autodesk's copyrights.

The $2 million mark was reached just 18 months after the inception of Autodesk's Special Projects Department -- an innovative task force established to fight software piracy aggressively through interdiction, education and legislation.

Special Projects Director Sandra Boulton commented on the milestone saying ''Our efforts are paying off -- literally.'' According to Boulton, Autodesk's programs concentrate their efforts on developing a spectrum of anti-piracy educational materials and on strengthening ties to key law enforcement agencies worldwide.

''We've seen a marked increase in the number of reported piracy cases, even though piracy itself is not on the rise,'' continued Boulton. ''This tells me that our education programs are creating increased sensitivity towards software piracy issues.

''We've also had tremendous support from law enforcement agencies worldwide, specifically the Royal Canadian Mounted Police in Canada and the FBI here in the U.S., that are converting suspected software pirates into apprehended software pirates.''

Autodesk's Special Projects department augments their ''software police'' actions with the distribution of anti-piracy kits. These kits include brochures detailing the consequences of software piracy, information on current copyright law and sample corporate policy statements to aid organizations in establishing guidelines for software use.

In addition to these information kits, Autodesk also maintains membership in a variety of industry organizations that combat software piracy.

Autodesk also works with organizations like the Business Software Alliance (which includes industry leaders such as Microsoft, Lotus Development and Ashton-Tate among its members) to prosecute software pirates, educate customers and promote clearer copyright legislation to protect against infringement.

Autodesk Inc. develops, markets and supports a family of computer-aided design, engineering and animation software solutions for desktop computers and workstations.

POWAY, CA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Patriot Financial Corp. (OTC: Pink Sheets) announced that it has entered into a nonbinding letter of intent with Mel Fisher concerning a $1 million equity investment to provide development financing for Patriot's ground penetrating radar technology (GPR) and concerning the grant to Fisher of limited rights to use the GPR technology.

An early version of the GPR technology developed by Elwood G. Norris, president and chief executive officer of Patriot, has successfully penetrated the earth's surface, during initial field testing, to depths of 200 feet with resolution of approximately 12 inches in diameter at depth. The company's GPR employs visual color display vs. graphs and charts and the company believes it provides greater penetration depth and clarity than existing devices.

The financing is planned to be used to purchase equipment and develop a prototype GPR device. Development is scheduled to take six to 12 months. The GPR technology, if successfully developed, is expected to have broad applications in such areas as water drilling, construction, pollution control, treasure recovery, military, natural resource and medical applications.

The proposed financing terms contemplate the issuance of 10 million units of Patriot. Each unit would consist of one share of common stock and one Class A common stock purchase warrant exercisable at 10 cents each into one common share and one Class B common stock purchase warrant. The Class B common stock purchase warrant is exercisable at 20 cents each into one common share. The warrants are intended to have the same terms and conditions as the existing outstanding warrants of Patriot.

Patriot presently has 22.5 million common shares outstanding, 15 million subject to an earnout escrow arrangement with Norris related to the performance of the GPR technology. There are presently 3.5 million Class A common stock purchase warrants outstanding.

Fisher would also receive certain rights to use the proposed GPR technology for the locating and recovery of treasure. Patriot shall receive a percentage of all treasure recovered with the technology by Fisher. Patriot retains all other rights to the technology.

The terms of the transaction would also result in Fisher becoming a director of Patriot. Fisher is engaged in locating and salvaging treasure.

The terms of the non-binding letter of intent require the execution of a definitive agreement and negotiation and agreement on a number of material terms and conditions. The proposed closing date is on or before Sept. 21 and until that time Patriot has agreed to work exclusively with Fisher on financing through this proposed transaction.

SAN JOSE, CALIF. (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - The Superior Court of Santa Clara Monday refused to grant Link Technologies and its parent company Wyse Technology of San Jose, a temporary injunction against the Sherwood Division of Inkel Technology Inc. which would have stopped Sherwood from marketing a recently announced line of alphanumeric terminal products.

Link Technologies filed the suit against Sherwood and its parent company, et al., June 1, 1990, alleging misappropriation of Link confidential information in conjunction with the design and development of the Sherwood 750 and 760 CRT-based terminal.

Link was unable to show the court that the Sherwood products contained any technology which was proprietary or unique to Link's product designs.

According to Phil Graham, senior vice president: ''Link's intention in filing its suit against us is clear. They wanted to stop us from entering the market and competing against them with what they perceived to be a competitively threatening product.

''As we said in the beginning, the suit is preposterous and without foundation. This organization worked very hard to develop this line of products which do have competitive advantages over the Wyse and Link product families.

''This attempted delay has been a nuisance, but has had no harmful effects on the introduction of our new product line, which is receiving very favorable reviews in the marketplace.''

Sherwood is an operating division of Inkel Technology Inc. The company specializes in the design and manufacture of CRT-based alphanumeric terminal systems and offers a line of products compatible with most major host computers. Sherwood's products are sold by a direct sales force and qualified resellers throughout the world.

CLEVELAND (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Cleveland-Cliffs Inc announced today it has entered into an agreement to sell its forest lands and associated assets in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan to Ben Benson of Accomac, Virginia for approximately $25 million. Closing of the transaction, which is subject to certain conditions, is expected in the third quarter with an after-tax gain of approximately $15 million or $1.28 per share. Cliffs will retain mineral interests on the lands.

M. Thomas Moore, chairman and chief executive officer, said ''This will complete our planned exit from the forest products business. Upon closing, Cliffs will have received $40 million proceeds from various forest products asset dispositions since 1988, which we believe substantially exceeds what could have been realized during the period by sale to a single buyer.'' Cliffs sold its timber mills for $10 million in 1988, Grand Island, now a national recreation area, for $3.3 million in 1989, and other selected land parcels for $2.3 million in the 1988-1989 period.

The lands are held by Cliffs Forest Products Company, a wholly owned subsidiary headquartered in Munising, Michigan, which had a 1989 operating profit of $630,000 from its harvesting operations. The 10 employees of Cliffs Forest Products Company will be offered employment by Benson, who intends to continue present operations. In 1987, Cliffs decided to concentrate on the iron ore business and began disposition of substantially all of its non-ferrous interests.

PASCO, WA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Increases in the number of daily flights linking Seattle with both Portland and Spokane are featured in a United Express schedule adjustment effective Sept. 10, the airline announced Monday. United Express is operated by Pasco-based NPA Inc., a subsidiary of WestAir Holding Inc. (ASE: WAH).

United Express said that its prop-jet service between Seattle and Portland will increase from 20 to 23 roundtrips every business day, nearly a 14 percent increase in seats available on the route. Service on the Seattle-Spokane route will increase from seven to ten roundtrips, a 43 percent increase in available seats.

"This adjustment enables us to deploy our aircraft to routes which have clearly demonstrated a demand for increased capacity and flight frequency " said Craig Belmondo, the airline's president.

According to Belmondo, the increase in service on the two routes is made possible by an adjustment on its Spokane-Kalispell, Mont., route. United Express said that it will offer seasonal service on the route with flights operating from mid-May to mid-September each year.

The airline said that its new schedule between the two cities reflects the strong customer demand during the summer months and the significant decline in demand the remainder of the year.

NPA/United Express is a subsidiary of WestAir Holding Inc., headquartered in Fresno, Calif. WestAir Holding Inc. is the largest regional airline company in the United States, operating over 800 daily flights to 60 cities in 13 states and the District of Columbia. MENTOR, OH (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - RB&W Corp. (AMEX: RBW) announced sales for the second quarter and first half of 1990 were $47,001,000 and $89,595,000, respectively, as compared to $51,171,000 and $102,662,000 for the prior year periods.

Net sales for the second quarter and first half 1990 were down from the prior year's record highs due to weaker transportation markets and the sale of the Powdered Metal Products Division (PMP) in August 1989.

Net income (loss) for the respective 1990 periods was $1,136,000 or 22 cents per share and ($3,336,000) or (66 cents) per share. Net income for 1989 second quarter and first half was $1,686,000 or 33 cents per share and $3,294,000, or 65 cents per share.

Net income from operations was down due to the lower sales and the sale of PMP (discussed above). The 1990 year-to-date loss is due to a $4.5 million charge recorded in the 1990 first quarter for the closing of the company's Cleveland plant.

John J. Lohrman, chairman and chief executive officer, said RB&W was experiencing an improved sales trend, especially in the company's manufacturing segment for which sales rebounded 20 percent over the prior quarter.

Lohrman also stated that union contracts were successfully negotiated at the company's Toronto; Kent, Ohio; and Chicago and Rock Falls, Ill. plants. In addition, he indicated that the company had completed $30 million in debt refinancing on favorable terms with existing lenders.

FRANKTOWN, CO (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - DCX Inc., a manufacturer of high quality wire harnesses and cable assemblies for defense and industry applications, Monday announced profitable third quarter results as of June 30, 1990.

The company reported net income of $61,209 on $617,629 of sales for quarterly earnings of 2 cents per common share outstanding. This represents profit margins of 9.9 percent on third quarter net sales.

President John Anderson attributed third quarter performance, which entirely reversed current year operating losses, to close attention to core business and careful cost controls implemented upon his return as president and chief executive officer.

The company recently completed the hearings phase of the formal appeal process to the Department of Defense to reverse the termination for default actions on two of three significant government contracts for which the total claims of $6.7 million have been filed.

DCX Inc. also announced that Frederick G. Beisser recently accepted the position of chief financial officer, shortly after the departure of James Kirby. PICKERINGTON, Ohio (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - R.G. Barry Corp. (AMEX:RGB) today reported a loss of $3,428,000, or 92 cents for the second quarter ended June 23, 1990.

Last year in the second quarter the company had a loss of $1,617,000, or 44 cents per share.

Second quarter sales totaled $10,339,000 vs. $14,683,000 in the second quarter of 1989.

For the first half Barry lost $6,079,000, or $1.63 per share vs. $1,584,000, or 43 cents per share in 1989. Six month sales were $20,423,000 against $34,521,000 for the comparable period last year.

''We continued to feel the impact of the softening in the stretch slipper market during the second quarter,'' said Gordon Zacks, chairman and chief executive officer. ''In most classes of stores, retailers ended 1989 with an excess of stretch slipper inventory. Although we are a secondary supplier of stretch products, many retailers opted to not order additional non-stretch goods until the excess stretch slipper inventory was reduced.

''We also continued to feel the effects of lost low margin, high volume mass merchandise business. The business was temporarily sacrificed last year when we faced production limitations. Those capacity limitations have been corrected and we expect to recapture much of the lost volume during the second half of 1990 and the first half of 1991.

''The company's already successful boxed giftable slipper business is expected to increase in the second half as stores convert space from the declining stretch slipper category to the growing boxed giftable slipper classification.

''As the leader in boxed giftable slippers, our business has been and will continue to be heavily influenced by Christmas gift buying. Approximately 75 percent of our annual sales take place in the second half. This year will be no exception.

''Despite the very disappointing first half, we expect a good fall season and remain confident about the future.''

MOUNTAIN VIEW, CA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Semiconductor Equipment and Materials International Monday forwarded a proposal to CoCom to link export controls on semiconductor equipment and materials to decontrolled end products.

The board of directors of SEMI, representing 1,400 companies from Europe, Japan and North America, unanimously adopted the initiative at its annual planning meeting. If adopted by CoCom, the three important technology sectors of manufacturing, components and end products would, for the first time, share a consistent export control rationale.

''Computers, work stations and telecommunication systems which contain advanced semiconductors are either being exported to Eastern Europe, or soon will be. Our industry believes it no longer makes sense to maintain controls on manufacturing tools materials associated with this level of technology,'' observed William H. Reed, president of SEMI.

Reed explained that the SEMI proposal was developed in response to higher than expected levels of technology found in Eastern Europe and because governments were not acting quickly enough to revise export control regulations.

''SEMI's proposal is a simple concept and would be easy to implement. It obviates the need to reconcile many different governmental positions,'' he added.

The SEMI proposal provides a natural, dynamic indexing mechnanism, linking the level of manufacturing products decontrolled to the level of devices.

Copies of the proposal were sent to all 16 nations making up CoCom. CoCom is a multinational organization, based in Paris, that regulates export controls on strategic products.

SEMI is an international organization representing the $20 billion semiconductor equipment and materials industry. Headquartered in Mountain View, Calif., SEMI has offices in Brussels, Belgium; London; Seoul, Korea; Tokyo and Washington.

The board of directors of Semiconductor Equipment and Materials International recommends to CoCom that the level of export control restrictions on semiconductor equipment and materials be coupled to the availability of the most advanced semiconductor devices contained in decontrolled end products. Unanimously adopted on July 24, 1990.

HONOLULU (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Matson Navigation Co.'s 3.6 percent general rate increase, which became effective March 10, 1990, has been found ''just and reasonable'' in an initial decision by Administrative Law Judge Norman D. Kline, Federal Maritime Commission.

Judge Kline states his decision was based on ''reliable, probative and credible evidence presented by 16 expert witnesses'' on issues set forth by the commission for determination.

One of the key issues in the decision concerned whether ''Matson has an unreasonable amount of excess vessel capacity or has imprudently overinvested in an unreasonably anticompetitive way.''

Judge Kline found: ''The record rather shows that Matson has acquired vessels and improved its facilities in order to maintain first-rate service in response to the reasonably foreseeable needs of its customers and to maintain its position as the premier carrier serving the trade.''

Judge Kline stated in his decision: ''The most important and difficult issue concerns what rate of return should Matson be allowed to seek to earn in the test year.'' In the test year ending March 31, 1991, Matson calculates its 3.6 percent general rate increase will earn a 10.58 percent rate of return.

Judge Kline commented that, ''in view of the definite upsurge in competition,'' Matson would be allowed to seek to earn a rate of return as high as 12.68 to 12.93 percent. He also noted that Matson ''will probably not even earn what the average U.S. manufacturing corporation was able to earn in recent past period (11.93 percent).''

While parties opposing Matson's rate increase sought to limit the company's rate of return to the 9.00 to 10.00 percent range, Judge Kline determined: ''These returns are so low that they even fall below Matson's embedded cost of debt and, if a cost-of-capital test can be used for comparison purposes, it can be seen that such low rates of return would probably adversely affect Matson's ability to attract capital contrary to fundamental principles of rate-making law.''

Exceptions to the initial decision are due August 21 and responses to the exceptions are due August 31. The final decision by the Federal Maritime Commission is due November 5.

MOUNTAIN VIEW, Calif. (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - IntelliCorp. Inc. (NASDAQ:INAI) a leader in knowledge systems development and delivery software, Monday reported a net loss of $2,142,000, or 28 cents per share, for the fourth quarter ended June 30, 1990.

This compares to a net profit of $394,000, or 5 cents per share, for the comparable quarter a year ago. Fourth quarter revenues were $4,399,000, compared to $6,001,000 reported for the like period a year earlier.

For the fiscal year, the company reported a net loss of $826,000, or 11 cents per share, on revenues of $22,762,000, compared to a net profit of $914,000, or 12 cents per share, on revenues of $21,963,000 for the like period a year earlier.

Thomas Kehler, chairman and chief executive officer, stated: ''We are in the midst of introducing our new KAPPA product line and are seeing a greater than anticipated slow-down in sales of our existing KEE product line.

''Going forward, substitution of KAPPA product sales for originally projected sales of the KEE line will make revenue and earnings difficult to predict during the first half of fiscal 1991. On the positive side, the target market for the new product family is a significantly larger mainstream application development market.

''We are pleased by the initial market performance of the first offering in this family -- KAPPA PC, which began shipping during the last month of the fourth quarter.

''We demonstrated the second offering in this family, the PROKAPPA system at an industry conference in Boston last week; the response to this product, which will be available for general delivery during the second quarter, was very encouraging.''

ALAMEDA, CA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Ingres Corp. (NASDAQ:RELY) Monday became the first company to offer a heterogeneous distributed database management system (DBMS) that automatically ensures information at multiple sites remains consistent after being updated by any type of transaction.

The new capability, automatic two-phase commit, is built into the latest release of INGRES/STAR and allows programmers to easily create more flexible distributed database applications.

INGRES/STAR allows any transaction to update information stored at any site. The same transaction can, without modification, update information stored at a single site or at multiple sites. STAR also performs automatic recovery management to ensure related information stays consistent in the event of database, network or computer failure.

Automatic two-phase commit ensures the integrity of transactions that, for example, span multiple warehouse locations. When items are shipped from one warehouse to another, the databases at each site must be updated in the same transaction to show the change in inventory at each location.

If an error occurs at either site while the transaction is in progress, the inventory system may record an inaccurate number of items on hand. Two-phase commit is required to ensure that both databases remain consistent. With INGRES/STAR, this is automatic and transparent to both the programmer and the end user.

''Ingres is the only portable database vendor offering this capability today,'' said Eric Wasiolek, manager of distributed INGRES product marketing. ''Programmers have the choice of trying to do the work themselves, or using distributed INGRES and letting the system do the work for them.''

The automatic two-phase commit feature is built directly into INGRES/STAR. Other implementations of two-phase commit currently on the market are ''programmatic,'' requiring programmers to anticipate all transaction requests users may submit to the system in advance (limiting the number and type of transactions that can be run) and manually recover databases when they fail during or after transactions commit.

Release 6.3 of INGRES/STAR is part of Ingres' second generation distributed DBMS which includes global optimization for the efficient collection and reporting of data at multiple sites, and a global data dictionary to simplify the management of distributed data.

Ingres Corp. is a world leader in information integration products for mission-critical applications. The company's primary product is the INGRES relational database management system (RDBMS).

Installed on 10,000 manufacturing and enterprise-wide commercial systems worldwide, and available on 40 types of computers including PCs and UNIX workstations, the INGRES RDBMS enables organizations to quickly access data spanning a variety of computer systems connected in a network.

HERCULES, CA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Bio-Rad Laboratories Inc. (ASE:BIO.A/BIO.B) Monday reported that sales for the first half of 1990 were up 18 percent over the first half of 1989 and established a new record.

Sales were up in all three segments of the company's business with diagnostic products continuing to show particular strength. However, lower-than-expected shipments in research products and analytical instruments reduced first-half earnings to 73 cents per share from the 78 cents per share reported last year.

Sales in the second quarter were a record $68.8 million. Earnings in the second quarter were 26 cents per share.

Assessing the prospects for the balance of the year, the company said that the uncertain economic outlook and delays in the release of government funded research grants were leading to slower-than- anticipated growth in sales of research products and analytical instruments, but that in other areas of the company's business, particularly diagnostics, sales growth was ahead of expectations.

BILLERICA, MA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - BTU International Inc. (NASDAQ:BTUI) Monday announced that it signed contracts with three manufacturers in the past two months, totaling $1.4 million, to provide its new equipment for manufacturing surface mount pc assemblies without producing ozone-damaging chloroflurocarbons (CFCs).

Conventional surface mount assembly processes require a cleaning step that produces CFCs, which are hazardous to the environment. BTU's new equipment called ''Turbo Reflow Solder System'' (TRS), completely eliminates the need for a cleaning step.

''BTU's novel approach includes reflowing a special synthetic-based solder paste in both reactive or standard inert nitrogen atmospheres within a controlled-atmosphere furnace. Because solder flux is consumed by this reflow process, no harmful residue or waste is produced.

''Our new system will yield printed circuit boards as clean as those processed through a solvent cleaner,'' said Paul van der Wansem, BTU's president and chief executive officer. ''Additionally and most importantly, our new system completely eliminates the need to deflux surface mount assemblies and then dispose of hazardous chemicals, solvents or contaminated water.

''Not only do electronics manufacturers have an important environmental reason for using our new product,'' added van der Wansem. ''They also will have economic incentives, because our system is less expensive than the traditional multi-step reflow-and-cleaning process.''

The company expects the worldwide market opportunity for its new product to grow to $168 million by 1993, up from an estimated $85 million market in 1989.

BTU International is one of the principal suppliers worldwide of advanced wafer-processing systems which are used in the manufacture of integrated circuits. In addition, BTU is the leading international supplier of thermal-processing systems used to package and seal integrated circuits.

SANTA MONICA, CA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - NoRad Corp. Monday introduced the NoRad SuperShield, a radiation, glare and reflection shield designed for 19-inch and two-page display monitors which have a curved bezel, or housing, surrounding the glass display.

The SuperShield is optimized for the Sony 1950 and fits the SuperMac 19-inch Display, Radius Two-Page Display, RasterOps 19-inch Display, MegaGraphics Rival, Hitachi Superscan Plus, Sigma Laserview, and other similarly sized and shaped monitors.

Glare and reflections are eliminated by the NoRad SuperShield's high-resolution, precision monofilament mesh, metalized to drain static and block radiation. It is grounded to discharge the static electric field, which attracts dust and ambient particles to the VDT operator's skin and eyes.

Like other NoRad radiation shields, the SuperShield provides broad spectrum electromagnetic radiation attenuation: better than 99.99 percent E-field (electric) radiation above 20 kiloHertz, and better than 50 percent of H-field (magnetic) radiation above 30 kiloHertz.

NoRad Shields have been independently tested to U.S. Military Specification and certified as the most effective at blocking VDT radiation of the many products claiming the ability to block VDT electromagnetic radiation.

According to Bruce Sperka, director of marketing, the growing demand for higher-resolution, larger displays led to development of the SuperShield. ''VDT radiation levels increase with the size of the display, the level of resolution, and with color.

''And, as larger monitors, especially those with curved bezels, become more popular, it made sense for us to extend our product line to take advantage of the two-page display market,'' Sperka said. ''Certainly, demand from our current customers alone warranted development of the SuperShield.''

The NoRad SuperShield measures 17-3/8 inches by 13-3/4 inches from frame to frame. The usable display area is an inch less in each dimension. The fabric within the frame is cut on a bias to eliminate moire patterns which can be a problem on some color monitors. Attached to the bezel by velcro tabs, the SuperShield's frame is shaped to conform to the horizontal curvature of the bezel.

Suggested retail price for the SuperShield is $349. It is available now directly through NoRad Corp. and authorized dealers and distributors.

NoRad is the leading developer of VDT radiation-blocking products designed for computer and terminal operators. For more information, contact NoRad Corp., 1549 11th St., Santa Monica, Calif. 90401. Telephone: 800/262-3260. Fax: 213/458-6397.

Two of the investment community's most respected firms, they will be raising equity capital for the new basic cable service.

''The Sci-Fi Channel is a truly original programming idea, one that I am confident will prove exciting and attractive to investors as well as to prospective advertisers and viewers,'' said Frederic M. Seegal, co-head of Salomon Brothers Corporate Finance Department.

''Working with the Channel since inception has been a rewarding and exciting experience. We look forward to completing the financing which will transform this original idea to a new reality in cable television,'' said James A. Stern, head of Lehman Brothers Investment Banking and Merchant Banking Groups.

Commenting on the announcement, Rubenstein said: ''Both investment banking firms have a remarkable track record of advising emerging media companies through their development into large-scale media enterprises. The support of these eminent investment banking firms evidences the enormous strength and viability of the Sci-Fi Channel concept and business plan.''

The Sci-Fi Channel is a basic cable service designed to provide the broadest spectrum of program choices ever brought to television in the genres of science fiction, fantasy and horror -- 24 hours a day, 7 days a week -- and will enlist the creative skills of some of the television and motion-picture industries' most stellar talents.

As members of Sci-Fi Channel's board of advisors, Star Trek creator Gene Roddenberry is advising the Channel along with famed science fiction author Isaac Asimov, who also serves as the Channel's official spokesperson.

Already on the drawing board are plans for an original drama series created by Isaac Asimov, a comic-book show and a haunted house game show.

The Channel will also show science fiction and horror films and series, and recently acquired the exclusive rights to all 1,225 episodes of ''Dark Shadows,'' the classic gothic soap opera, the all-new version of which will be reappearing as a prime-time series on NBC during the upcoming season.

The Sci-Fi Channel has announced major tie-ins with Bantam Doubleday Dell Publishing Group Inc. (for the publication of books on the Channel's programming), Omni Magazine (for joint advertising) and Fan Clubs Inc., the publishers of the Star Trek Official Fan Club Magazine (for a Sci-Fi Channel Fan Magazine).

IRVINE, CA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - The federal Food and Drug Administration has accepted for filing the pre-market approval (PMA) application from Irvine-based Advanced Interventional Systems for its DYMER 200+ Excimer Laser Angioplasty System.

''We at AIS feel proud of our record of 'firsts' in the challenging field of laser coronary angioplasty,'' said Robert Wall, AIS president and chief executive officer.

''While we are excited at being the first company to receive acceptance for filing of our PMA on Excimer Laser Coronary Angioplasty, we also recognize that this is the initial step in a very complex process of proving our devices 'safe and effective.' Although the Food and Drug Administration has high standards and strict rules and regulations, we are hopeful that our smooth progress will continue.''

More than 1,000 ELCA cases have been performed with the AIS system at leading cardiovascular centers nationwide including:

-- Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, Los Angeles

-- Emory University Hospital, Atlanta

-- Georgetown University Hospital, Washington

-- The Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn.

-- South Miami Hospital, Miami

During the procedure, laser energy is channeled through a fiber-optic catheter and administered in pulses, until it literally breaks down the plaque into a gaseous liquid and micro-miniature particulate form that is carried through the bloodstream and eliminated in the body's natural waste system.

Dr. Frank Litvack, co-director of the cardiac catheterization lab at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center in Los Angeles, said the ongoing clinical studies of the AIS laser system show that ''ELCA's potential advantage is in treating conditions that are not effectively addressed by PTCA 'balloon angioplasty' -- specifically, unfavorable lesions that may be long, diffuse, ostial or calcified.''

The excimer energy used in these clinical trials is a ''cool'' laser. Although the excimer is capable of cutting through steel, its cool energy makes a clean, precise cut without significant temperature change to adjacent tissue.

AIS, founded in 1986, is a technological leader in the development of laser systems for cardiovascular applications.

SAVANNAH, GA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Byrd Cookie Co. of Savannah, Ga., recently won first place at the International Fancy Food Show in New York.

The Key Lime Cooler was selected 1990s NASFT (National Association for Specialty Food Trade) Products Awards WINNER for Most Outstanding Dessert from among 400 international entries.

Dessert entries ranged from elaborate cakes, pies, tortes and other exotic specialties. The Key Lime Cooler received 99 out of 100 votes from the judges. Byrd Cookie Co. President Benny Curl said, ''Considering the stiff competition, winning this award is very exciting. It is also personally gratifying to me, because the cookie was my original idea.''

Benny Curl is the grandson-in-law to company founder B.T. Byrd Sr. Byrd Cookie Co. began as and remains a family business, with the delicious cookie recipes handed down by one generation to the next.

Founded in 1924 in the Old Fort Section of Savannah on St. Julien and Habersham streets, the first cookies were mixed and cut by hand, cooked in black iron pans, packed bulk in wooden boxes and delivered to retailers in a Model ''T'' Ford. Byrd Products are now baked and sold in the Cookie Shanty on Norwood Avenue, Savannah, and available at gift and specialty stories nationwide.

Original favorites are still best sellers, including Benne Wafers (cookies) and Benne Bits (cocktail bits). Each of these and many other Byrd products are made with Benne seeds, sesame seeds originally brought to America by African slaves for good luck.

The Key Lime Cooler is the most recent addition to the Byrd Cookie Line. Benny Curl wanted a cookie resembling his favorite dessert, Key Lime Pie. Once baked and dipped in confectioner's sugar, the tart cookie was an instant success, outselling all other Byrd products. As winner of the NASFT Most Outstanding Dessert, the Key Lime Cooler's popularity can only continue to expand.

Vernon Hills, Il (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Scotsman Industries, Inc. (NYSE: SCT) announced Monday that its subsidiary, Scotsman Group, Inc., has signed a letter of intent with ITV, a privately held manufacturer of ice machines headquartered in Valencia, Spain, providing for the acquisition of 75 percent of the shares of ITV by Scotsman Industries through subsidiary corporations, subject to completion of a definitive agreement and the arrangement of satisfactory financing, for approximately

The purchase price represents a multiple of 1.65 times sales and 11-12 times projected earnings. The current owners will retain a minority interest and continue to operate the company. Scotsman expects to close the transaction in the fourth quarter.

Organized in 1981, ITV is the largest manufacturer of ice machines in Spain, and one of the largest in Europe. Approximately 80 percent of ITV's sales are in spain, with the remaining 20 percent in other European countries. ITV's annual sales are approximately $20 million.

Commenting on the letter of intent, Richard C. Osborne, president and chief executive officer of Scotsman said, ''ITV is a perfect fit with our strategic plan to increase Scotsman's ice machine market share in Europe. This acquisition complements our two italian ice machine businesses resulting in three independent distribution networks in a market that is growing at 10 to 12 percent per year.''

Osborne concluded, ''Scotsman's new product technology, procurement synergy and knowledge of foreign markets will add significant value to ITV as it expands its export efforts.''

The acquisition will be financed through existing cash and additional borrowings with the increase in debt expected to be less than $5 million from the current level.

SAN JOSE, CA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Businessland Inc. (NYSE:BLI) reported fiscal year 1990 revenues of $1,353,634,000, and a net loss of $23,066,000, inclusive of a fourth quarter restructuring charge of $6 million, as compared to revenues of $1,188,741,000, and net income of $32,876,000, for fiscal year 1989.

The company reported a fully diluted net loss, before an extraordinary item, of 80 cents per share for fiscal 1990, as compared to fully diluted net income of $1.04 per share for fiscal 1989.

The fiscal 1990 fully diluted net loss per share, after giving effect to the extraordinary item, was 76 cents.

For the fourth quarter ended June 30, revenue was $339,344,000, an increase of 5.2 percent over the fourth quarter last year of $322,553,000. The company posted a fourth quarter loss of $21,546,000, or 73 cents per share, inclusive of the restructuring charges, compared to net income of $7,407,000, or 23 cents per share, for the fourth quarter of last year.

In addition, Businessland announced its intention to restate the financial results reported for the second and third fiscal quarters of 1990 to reflect adjustments for accounting errors primarily related to expense accruals in the second quarter, and the recognition of vendor credits in the third quarter.

These adjustments, net of certain related tax effects, are expected to increase the net loss previously reported for the second and third fiscal quarters of 1990 to a total loss of $2,140,000, (7 cents per share) and $3,643,000, (12 cents per share), respectively.

The company stated that the fourth quarter loss principally reflected increased spare parts inventory reserves and other accruals, lower operating margins which were impacted by deferred vendor credits reflecting recent contract revisions and program changes, as well as operating losses in international operations and ComputerCraft.

In addition, the company took a restructuring charge of approximately $6 million as a results of its decision to close down some additional under-utilitzed facilities. The reported losses placed Businessland in violation of certain covenants of its $50 million outstanding senior notes. The company is in contact with its lenders. In addition, the company needs to improve its liquidity position in order to fund growth of its core business. Businessland said its previous decision to aggressively pursue worldwide expansion through acquisitions and internal growth, coupled with changing industry dynamics, strained the company's infrastructure and information systems.

''We are taking a critical look at our business and operating systems in the context of our business and the industry in order to allow Businessland to be positioned for future profitability and growth,'' said David A. Norman, Businessland chairman, president and chief executive officer.

''Our priority is to ensure that the fundamentals of the business are sound and that we recover our balance and strength in fiscal year 1991.''

Founded in 1982, Businessland Inc. is an international leader in the distribution, integration, and support of microcomputer and workstation systems for business.

The company integrates microcomputer products from selected manufacturers to create systems tailored to meet specific customer needs and provides the service and support to maximize their productivity.

This certification assures users that Novell's NetWare 3.0 will meet performance standards on the Tricord system.

In addition, within 30 days, NetWare 3.1 will also run on the PowerFrame 40; making the PowerFrame the first super-server to support this advanced operating system.

Novell encourages hardware vendors to assure proper operation of their machines in the NetWare environment, by submitting hardware for testing and certification. The PowerFrame 40 passed all tests without limitations including the dedicated server tests, bridge tests, and workstation tests.

The PowerFrame family was designed for local area networks and client/server computing. It incorporates the newest Intel 486 and 860 technologies to provide mainframe-like processing power. Its multiprocessor architecture supports large numbers of users and compute intensive applications.

Besides, NetWare, the PowerFrame supports other popular operating systems including Microsoft OS/2 and SCO Unix System V. TUCSON, AZ (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - American Southwest Mortgage Investments Corp. (AMEX:ASR) announced earnings for the second quarter ended June 30, 1990, of $2,704,000, 19 cents per share, compared to $826,000, 6 cents per share, for the same period in 1989.

Earnings for the six months ended June 30, 1990 were $5,294,000, 37 cents per share, vs. $2,633,000, 18 cents per share, for the comparable period in 1989.

Jon Grove, chairman and chief executive officer, said: ''LIBOR rates continued to decline in July. At the current one-month LIBOR of approximately 8 percent, earnings for the second half of 1990 should continue in an upward trend.''

The higher 1990 earnings reflect lower short-term interest rates. The average one-month LIBOR incurred by the company during the second quarter of 1990 was 8.38 percent compared with 9.88 percent during the second quarter of 1989. The benefit was reduced by higher mortgage prepayment rates in the second quarter of 1990 than in the second quarter of 1989. Increases in mortgage prepayment rates typically reduce earnings. The earnings for the second quarter and six months ended June 30, 1990 were net of amortization of hedging costs of $864,000 and $1,678,000 respectively.

The company also announced that its estimated taxable income for the second quarter of 1990 was $3,607,000, 25 cents per share, bringing the year to date estimated taxable income to $7,390,000, 51 cents per share. The company has declared and paid dividends totalling 17 cents per share for the second quarter and 32 cents for the six months ended June 30, 1990. As a real estate investment trust, the company must distribute annually at least 95 percent of its annual taxable income as dividends to its stockholders.

The company also is pleased to announce that the United States District Court dismissed all four counts in the previously disclosed class action complaint. The company cannot assess whether the plaintiffs will attempt to appeal or seek modification of the U.S. District Court's ruling.

DALLAS (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Chief Auto Parts, the first company to introduce free used motor oil recycling, Monday expanded its program with the addition of nearly 35 reclamation centers in Houston, San Antonio and Waco.

This brings the total number of Chief recycling centers to 180 in California, Arizona, Tennessee, Nevada and Texas.

Since Chief introduced this recycling program in November last year, over 100,000 gallons of used motor oil have been delivered to reclamation centers. Since one quart of motor oil can pollute 250,000 gallons of water, the program has saved a potential of 100 million gallons of water from contamination.

In addition to the oil recycling program, Chief Auto Parts recycles used auto batteries and through its S.A.F.E. program (Specially Adapted For The Environment). The company has introduced 36 environmentally safe products to customers.

CAMARILLO, CA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Quad Design Technology Inc., a pioneer of advanced digital-circuit timing analysis software, has signed a distribution contract valued at $12 million with C.Itoh Techno-science Corp. (CTC), the premier Japanese vendor of electronic design automation

The agreement launches Quad Design's products into a Japanese EDA marketplace valued at $670 million in 1990 and predicted to grow at an extremely fast 200 percent rate in 1991.

Quad Design's contract with CTC comes just two months after it entered into a cooperative marketing relationship with the leading domestic EDA supplier, Mentor Graphics Corp.

With the top-ranking EDA players in both Japan and the United States selling its timing verification and signal integrity tools, Quad Design can point to rapid success for its recently instituted marketing partnership program, according to Larry Rubin, president of Quad Design.

''We've found the demand for advanced timing analysis software is outpacing that for EDA products overall by a wide margin because of the burgeoning international need for tools to support today's complex, high-speed designs,'' Rubin said.

''By selling Quad Design's tool set, we can give our customers the means to rapidly and automatically minimize timing errors and maximize system performance early in the design cycle -- before the building of hardware prototypes,'' said Kazuo Miyamoto, president of CTC.

A division of Japan's C.Itoh, Tokyo-based CTC serves as an importer and distributor of a wide range of EDA software and hardware, including engineering workstations made by Sun Microsystems Inc.

In 1989 CTC generated $470 million in revenue and currently holds a 30 percent share of the overall Japanese EDA market. It counts Mitsubishi, NEC, Sanyo and other major Japanese electronics vendors among its customers.

Founded in 1987 and based in Camarillo, Calif., Quad Design Technology Inc. is the pioneer of digital circuit timing-analysis software for complex, high performance circuits. The company's family of software tools provides manufacturers with accurate and detailed system timing information early in the electronic design cycle.

DALLAS (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Zfax Image Corp. (NASDAQ:ZFAXF) Monday announced financial results for the first quarter ended June 30, 1990.

The increase in the average number of shares outstanding in the quarter ended June 30, 1990 was the result of the Company's initial public offering of 1,150,000 shares of common stock in September 1989.

Higher sales in the Company's facsimile equipment and supply operations resulted in increased revenues in the current quarter. The net loss in the quarter ended June 30, 1990 increased due to higher selling, general, and administrative expenses incurred in expanding the retail operation and continued research and development costs associated with the Company's portable facsimile machine, the PF4003.

Harmon F. Hardy, Chief Executive Officer, commented, ''Production design on our portable fax machine is in the process of being finalized. Based on the reception the PF4003 met with at a major trade show last month, we are optimistic that our fax machine will be equally well received in the marketplace.

Zfax Image Corp. has developed a lightweight, portable 9600 baud facsimile machine, the PF4003. The Company also operates a retail store in Dallas, Texas, and shortly, in Seattle, Washington, for the sale of facsimiles and complementary products.

DALLAS (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Spectrum Cellular Corp. (NASDAQ: SPCL) Monday announced an agreement with NEC America Inc. of Dallas, to develope and manufacture a line of cellular data communications products for use with NEC's cellular telephone products.

According to John Rule, president of Spectrum Cellular, the agreement calls for the development of several products designed to provide NEC cellular phone users the ability to transmit facsimile and error-free data via the cellular telephone network.

In specific, the products to be produced include a version of Spectrum's IntelliJack(TM) intelligent cellular telephone interface, simple interfaces for RJ-11 to cellular telephone connection and other data communications products.

Each is designed for use with standard RJ-11 devices such as facsimiles, answering machines and Spectrum's new BridgePlus(TM) cellular/landline modem.

The BridgePlus supports Spectrum's SPCL Protocol(TM), designed for error-free data communications via the cellular network. Using SPCL Protocol, the BridgePlus (V.22bis) provides error-free data throughputs via landline or cellular networks from 5000 to 8000 bits per second, depending on the environment quality and type of information transmitted.

''NEC's packaging approach for the products is particulary exciting,'' noted Rule. ''Each will be available in a compact enclosure which will snap-on to the new NEC P-300 handheld cellular phone.'' A 9 volt battery and cellular telephone connector are included within the enclosure which provides direct RJ-11 for external device connection.

Special packaging will also be available for use of the products with NEC's in-vehicle and other model transportable cellular telephones.

Combined with any of the widely available handheld or notebook computers, the products are ideal for vertical applications requiring true portable computing and connectivity without the encumberances of larger packages.

NEC America is one of the first cellular phone manufacturers to commercially introduce Spectrum's IntelliJack cellular telephone interface. Concluded Rule, ''NEC's cellular telephone products are among the highest quality, smallest, most attractive packages available.

''This combination of NEC and Spectrum technology will offer users an ideal solution for reliable voice and data applications in the field.''

All of the new data products are being developed and manufactured by Spectrum Cellullar in Dallas for distribution by NEC America Inc. this fall.

Spectrum Cellular Corp. is a subsidiary of Spectrum Information Technologies (NASDAQ: SPCL). The company is located at 2710 Stemmons Freeway, 800 North Tower, Dallas, Texas 75207, 214/630-9825.

TRUMBULL, CT (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - DataEase International Inc., a developer of professional and end user application development software and the DataEase relational DBMS, Monday announced DataEase SQL 1.0, an application development front-end to a variety of database engines in the client/server environment.

DataEase also announced that the first database engine to be supported in the product, as delivered in September, will be the Microsoft/Sybase SQL Server version 1.1 or higher. Under development is support for Oracle Server, IBM OS/2 Extended Edition Database Manager, Micro Decisionware's Database Gateway for DB2, and Teradata DBC/1012.

The DataEase SQL product is comprised of three components: DataEase SQL Professional, a complete application developers tool that supports one user and connectivity to one server type; the DataEase SQL Workstation Master, which allows server-specific execution of an application with limited development and ad hoc query capabilities; and the SQL Workstation Pack, which adds workstation support in five-user increments.

DataEase SQL 1.0 features DataEase's Processing Router for Integrated SQL

Management (PRISM) technology that provides transparent access to distributed server data. DataEase is developing a series of PRISM drivers that integrate the DataEase application development interface with multiple database servers.

The PRISM technology automatically translates all DataEase functions into SQL, optimizing the SQL constructs it generates for the specific server on which the data is located.

Applications developed with DataEase SQL are portable and can be moved from one system platform to another. Users can migrate applications and data from a single user or file server configuration to client/server, or from one server to another by performing a DataEase backup and then restoring the application under DataEase SQL.

DataEase SQL also supports native databases, allowing users to combine existing corporate data resident on an SQL server with personal data stored in a local DataEase database.

Founded in 1982, DataEase International Inc. develops and markets professional and end user application development software. The company's flagship product, the DataEase RDBMS, is distributed in more than 40 countries and 14 languages. GREENVILLE, SC (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - The Liberty Corp. (NYSE:LC) Monday announced operating earnings for the second quarter ended June 30, 1990, of $9.3 million, or $1.09 per share, compared with second quarter 1989 operating earnings of $5.8 million, or 69 cents per share.

Total net income for the quarter was $8.4 million, or 98 cents per share, compared with net income for the year-earlier period of $8.2 million, or 97 cents per share. The second quarter net income comparison includes realized investment losses of $976,000, or 11 cents per share, compared with realized investment gains of $2.4 million, or 28 cents per share, for the year- earlier period. Revenues from operations for the quarter increased 7 percent to $90.0 million, compared with $84.4 million last year.

Operating earnings for the first six months were $14.5 million, or $1.69 per share, compared with $6.5 million, or 76 cents per share, last year. Total net income was $12.8 million, or $1.50 per share, compared with $9.4 million, or $1.10 per share in the year-earlier period. Revenues from operations were up 5 percent, but essentially unchanged from last year on a total basis including realized investment losses in 1990 compared with gains in 1989.

Liberty Life's operating earnings of $8.9 million were 26 percent ahead of last year's second quarter earnings of $7.1 million. Earnings for the first six months were $15.9 million, up 40 percent from $11.4 million last year. Revenues for the quarter increased 15 percent and were up 13 percent for the first half of 1990.

Favorable lapse experience in the home service line, increased real estate sales, and strong premium growth had a positive effect on the quarterly earnings comparisons.

Cosmos Broadcasting reported net earnings of $4.2 million for the second quarter of 1990 compared with earnings of $3.1 million last year. Earnings for the first half were $6.1 million compared with $3.4 million a year ago. An ongoing weakness in national and local advertising was offset by continued expense control, increased political revenues and a substantial decrease in interest expense due to debt payoff.

NEW YORK (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Strings Ltd. (NASDAQ:STGS), the nation's only retail gift chain specializing in items priced under $10, Monday reported that it opened three new stores between July 18 and Aug. 1 including its first major regional mall location.

The new units doubled the chains' size from a year ago to 12 stores, or 50 percent higher than its Feb. 3 fiscal year end when eight operating units delivered net sales of $2.7 million.

Expressing pride in Strings' ability to ramp its new store openings in a short period of time, Richard Karp, Strings' president, reported that ''sales at these new stores are exceeding our expectations.''

On July 18, Strings opened a 1,400 square foot unit in the CrossRoad Shopping Center, White Plains, N.Y. This was followed by the July 27 opening of a 1,200 square foot unit in the Myrtle Avenue Shopping District (Ridgewood, N.Y.).

Last Wednesday, the company opened its first regional mall site -- a 1,200 square foot unit in the Freehold Raceway Mall, a new Wilmorite Inc. major regional mall in Freehold, N.J.

In keeping with its previously announced expansion schedule, a 950 square foot unit in the Newport Center, a Melvin Simon & Associates project in Jersey City, N.J., is slated for October.

With the momentum of these store openings, and two other stores opened earlier in the year, ''We are ahead of the planned timing of openings for the current fiscal year and are on target with our expansion for the year '' said Karp.

''Our first mall location opened in February 1990 at the New Rochelle Mall. Based on the exceptional results of that store, we expect that our mall/shopping center locations will predominate our store mix as we expand throughout the Northeast,'' he added.

Strings Ltd. (NASDAQ:STGS) is the nation's only retail gift chain specializing in items priced under $10. The company which has 12 Metropolitan New York stores in business, residential and suburban shopping areas is positioned for 25 percent annualized growth in the next few years as it sets the foundation for more rapid expansion.

#90218b0705 08/06/1990 ~Business Wire

WATERTOWN, MA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - MUSE, the microcomputer industry's first fully featured, language-driven data analysis software, was introduced Monday by Occam Research Corp. to bring users a new level of control over data retrieval, manipulation and visualization.

MUSE converts raw data into finished analysis faster than any other program in the industry and enables users to access its power through the most natural command interface possible -- everyday English. Ask MUSE a question in English -- through keyboard or other input device -- and you'll get your answer quickly and clearly in the most appropriate format: a simple one-line response if it's a one-dimensional question, or a fully labeled, fully functional WorkBook containing numbers and/or test if it's a multi-dimensional answer.

MUSE enables users to simultaneously reference, manipulate, reformat, calculate and visualize large data sets. Its strength lies in its natural language core, which boasts an advanced data dictionary that expands to reflect the individual user's way of thinking and working.

MUSE's relational database manager easily imports data in a variety of forms and familiar formats, from simple text to mainframe databases. MUSE organizes data as it is imported into WorkBooks. WorkBooks are easily converted into DataBooks that can fully cross-referenced with as many as 15 DataBooks open at once.

When users ask questions, MUSE automatically accesses the relevant data from DataBooks and places the answer into a WorkBook. For example, MUSE can automatically reference and manipulate data from a corporate sales DataBook, a manufacturing DataBook, a personnel DataBook and externally published data, then combine all pertinent information in a single entity to be displayed on a WorkBook with precisely the level of detail needed.

MUSE's natural language architecture also has the potential to utilize input and output for questions and answers beyond keyboard and display, including devices performing speech recognition, speech generation and handwriting recognition.

At present, desktop computer users typically employ spreadsheets, database managers and business graphics packages for data manipulation and analysis. While powerful as standalone products, each requires the users to learn separate command structures, as well as special procedures to transfer, translate and manipulate shared data.

MUSE benefits anyone in a corporate or scientific environment whose job requires them to extract meaning from data sets of all sizes and dimensions. In fact, MUSE is well-suited to any environment where users of 32-bit Macintosh machines are responsible for developing, evaluating, connecting and reviewing large amounts of data to arrive at a recommendation, decision or educated point-of-view.

MUSE can run on any Macintosh of the SE level or higher with 2 MB of RAM, a hard disk and System Version 6.0.5 or higher. It fits easily and completely into almost any environment where Macintosh computers are used. MUSE supports most standard files formats including flat files, ASCII, DBF, WKS, WK1, WK3, SYLK and DIF.

The first shipment of MUSE to key developers and large user sites is scheduled for October, with general distribution targeted for the first quarter of 1991. A single copy of MUSE is $695 without an extended support and development kit.

Occam Research has developed a close working relationship with Apple Computer through the computer maker's Evangelism Program.

Occam Research Corp. is dedicated to the development and marketing of innovative software for PCs and Macintosh computers with an emphasis on ease-of-use and user productivity. Its products are for users in a wide variety of corporate and scientific settings.

BILLERICA, MA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Pacer Systems Inc. Monday announced that net profit for the six months ended June 30, 1990 increased by 104% to $368,000 ($.07 per share).

Net profit for the same period last year amounted to $180,000 ($.04 per share).

Revenue for the period ended June 30, 1990 amounted to $13.1 million, an increase of 14% over the $11.5 million recorded last year.

Contract backlog at June 30 was $73 million, a small increase from the $71 million reported a year ago. Cash on hand at the end of the first half rose to over $3 million, due primarily to improved cash collections and continued growth.

Pacer, principally a provider of engineering services to the U.S. Department of Defense, maintained its strong position in Antisubmarine Warfare (ASW) markets. Approximately one-half of Pacer's revenue is derived from ASW and ASW-related programs.

According to Chairman John C. Rennie, ''The growing realization that over 40 nations now have military submarines adds to the potential threat to commercial sea lanes and strategic waterways. Due to the worldwide proliferation and continuing improvements in the Soviet submarine fleet's quality and capability, ASW remains the U.S. Navy's highest priority mission.''

In its flight simulator line, Pacer's SD-360 Flight Training Device (FTD) was accepted by the customer, WestAir Inc., while work continued on the Embraer EMB-120 FTC contract. Quotations are also being supplied to several domestic and international customers.

Pacer's digital signal processor products continued to gain favor with government customers. During the first-half, Pacer received a second order for a production version of the SPS-8100 communications signal processor. Work continued on U.S. Navy contracts for the SPS-1000 signal processing systems for simulating undersea acoustic environments.

Under contract to the U.S. Navy, Pacer began operational installation of its BALLAST-r ship stability expert system, with eight additional installations scheduled through early 1991.

Pacer maintained its efforts to expand the helicopter air data market, building on its ongoing role as the supplier of that product to the U.S. Army's AH-64 Apache program. Marketng efforts were targeted at the U.S. Army's Light Helicopter program, as well to NATO, Israeli and Japanese programs. The company experienced continuing difficulties with some components.

Correction of these problems has been implemented which should allow Pacer to catch up with production schedules by early fall.

''Growth by acquisition remains a viable strategy for Pacer,'' said Rennie. ''Management,'' he said, ''will examine acquisition opportunities but will only proceed with candidates which show potential to contribute substantially to company operating strength and earnings per share.

The directors declared an interim dividend of $0.03 per share payable Dec.

17, 1990 to shareholders of record on Oct. 31, 1990.

NASHVILLE, TN (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Dollar General Corp. (NASDAQ/NMS:DOLR) Monday reported increased sales for July and the second quarter.

Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Cal Turner Jr. said sales for the period ended July 31, 1990, totaled $48.5 million, compared with $44.9 million in 1989, an increase of 8 percent. Same store sales for the period increased 3.8 percent.

''We are pleased with July sales,'' Turner said. ''However, while we ended the second quarter with this sales improvement, it was not enough to result in positive same store sales for the entire quarter. As a result, we expect our earnings for the quarter to be slightly below last year's level. We look forward to a strong third quarter in both sales and earnings and are encouraged by our customer's early August reponse to the back to school season.''

For the quarter ended July 31, 1990, retail sales totaled $151.6 million, a 3.4 percent increase over sales of $146.7 million during the second quarter of 1989. Same store sales for the quarter decreased 1.2 percent.

NEW YORK (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Community National Bancorp Inc. (AMEX:CNB) -- the holding company for Staten Island-based Community National Bank and Trust Co. of New York -- Monday reported lower second quarter results, as expected.

The company said that its continued strength in operating earnings was offset by additional provisions for actual and possible loan losses.

The company said further, however, that despite the large loan loss provisions it has taken and the problems that have plagued the banking industry, Community National Bancorp has continued to show a profit.

John J. Amodio, president and chief executive officer of Community National Bancorp, said that the company did not expect to set aside any further large reserves for the remainder of the year and that he looked for an upturn in earnings, probably in the third quarter.

''Though quarterly and mid-year earnings are lower than last year, we are generally satisfied with our overall performance in light of large loan loss provisions we have taken,'' said Amodio. ''While the entire banking industry was heavily impacted by loan delinquencies and loan losses in first half 1990, our delinquencies have actually stabilized in recent months and we feel the worst of our loan loss problems are now behind us.''

For the second quarter ended June 30, Community National Bancorp had earnings of $51,000 or 2 cents per share, after a loan loss provision of $1.8 million, compared with $1,009,000, or 37 cents per share, after a provision of $600,000, in the same period last year. For the six months ended June 30, the company earned $262,000, or 8 cents per share, after a loan loss provision of $3.1 million, compared with $1,802,000, or 66 cents per share, after a provision of $800,000, a year ago. Total assets at mid-year were $406,000,000 compared with $354,000,000 last year.

Operating income for the second quarter, before the loan loss provision, was $1,838,000, compared with $2,474,000, before a provision, in the same period last year. For the half year ended June 30, operating income before the loan loss provision was $3,441,000, compared with $4,157,000, before a provision, in the year earlier.

Amodio said that despite the recent improvement in delinquencies, the company feels it was most prudent in its decision regarding its second quarter provision.

Amodio added that while he is optimistic about the comapny's overall future prospects, he emphasized that the bank will continue its highly conservative posture in both lending activities and in the evaluation of its loan portfolios. Community National Bank and Trust Co. of New York is the largest independent community-oriented commercial banking institution with headquarters in Staten Island. BIRMINGHAM, AL (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Birmingham Steel Corp. (NYSE: BIR) Monday announced net income of $16,306,000 and earnings per share of $1.33 for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1990.

Earnings in fiscal 1989 were $39,099,000, or $3.16 per share. Net sales were $442,523,000, essentially unchanged from $442,975,000 reported in the prior fiscal year. Steel shipments increased four percent to 1,279,000 tons from 1,234,000 tons in fiscal 1989.

For the fourth quarter, the company reported a net loss of $(512,000), or (four cents) per share, compared with net income of $7,349,000, or 59 cents per share, in the same period last year.

The fiscal 1990 fourth quarter results reflect a pretax accounting charge of approximately $8 million associated with the May shutdown of the melt shop at the company's Norfolk facility.

Net sales for the quarter were $114,889,000 compared with $119,791,000 a year ago. Steel shipments rose slightly to 338,000 tons from 336,000 tons in the fourth quarter of fiscal 1989.

James A. Todd Jr., president and chief executive officer commented: "Fiscal 1990 was a difficult year for the company. Overall financial performance was substantially below the level achieved in fiscal 1989. Although steel shipments remained strong in fiscal 1990, margins were adversely affected by declining steel selling prices.

"In addition, net income was reduced because of construction and start-up delays of the Kankakee melt shop and expenses incurred in connection with the abandoned Buffalo Steel project and the aborted merger transaction with affiliates of Harbert Corp.

"In the fourth quarter," Todd continued, "the most significant factor impacting earnings was the $8 million pretax accounting charge related to the shutdown of the Norfolk melt shop. Without this writedown, earnings for the quarter would have been greater by 43 cents per share.

"We expect business conditions will be competitive in fiscal 1991, but margins should be significantly improved. Although the recent capital improvements have not yet reached full potential, the Kankakee mill is setting production records and continues to reduce operating costs. In addition, the reduced scale of operations at Norfolk should improve profitability in fiscal 1991," Todd concluded.

Birmingham Steel operates steel mini-mills producing steel and steel products, primarily reinforcing bar, and is the largest U.S. manufacturer of steel roof support systems used in underground coal mining.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - AT&T and OTC, the international telecommunications carrier in Australia, Monday announced a less expensive and more flexible way for businesses to communicate between the United States and Australia.

Global Software Defined Network service (GSDN), currently available between the U.S. and the United Kingdom, will be extended to Australia in September, according to a filing with the FCC.

''This expansion of Global Software Defined Network service reflects AT&T's continuing commitment to meet our customers' international networking needs,'' said Frank Ianna, vice president of Marketing for AT&T's International Communications Services Group. ''During the next year we plan to announce several enhancements to GSDN, which will allow customers to use a wide range of network options as their businesses begin to globalize.''

AT&T Global Software Defined Network service allows businesses to design their own private seven-digit dialing plan for international calls within the network. It features fast call-set-up times, high-quality transmission and greater management over their international communications.

The service is particularly useful for voice and facsimile transmissions at speeds up to 9.6 kilobits per second. It allows customers the cost savings and customization normally associated with private line services, together with the flexibility of switched service.

AT&T said the new service addresses the needs of customers with medium to heavy calling volumes to Australia. It also helps businesses who use AT&T's domestic Software Defined Network service or Virtual Telephone Network service to extend their networks overseas at a reduced cost.

Global Software Defined Network service rates are significantly below direct-dialed rates and are billed in economical six-second increments after the first 30 seconds.

The peak rate, 2 p.m. to 8 p.m., is 77.5 cents for the first 30 seconds and 6.25 cents for each additional six seconds. A call to Australia during off-peak hours, 8 p.m. to 2 p.m., will be billed at 62.5 cents for the first 30 seconds and 4.8 cents for each additional six seconds. By comparison, direct-dialed rates to Australia are $3.10 for the first minute and $1.25 for each additional minute during the standard rate period.

In Australia, GSDN connects with the OTC's Call Plan service, which is an international extension of the Virtual Private Network concept, offering both additional services and lower rates.

For International Direct Dial customers, OTC Call Plan offers more efficient access to international networks, by providing direct lines between the customer's office and OTC. Other features include network-wide abbreviated dialing, call re-direction and management reports.

SAN FRANSISCO (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Phoenix Laser Systems Inc. Monday announced the successful conclusion of preclinical trials at the Barraquer Institute, Bogota, Colombia, for corneal sculpting procedures with its Ophthalmic Surgical Workstation (OSW).

According to Phoenix Director of Research and Development, H. Alfred Sklar ''The preclinical test conducted by the staff of Institute Barraquer de America under the direction of Dr. Jose Barraquer have allowed us to identify the working parameters of the workstation to perform refractive correction.'' Sklar explained that the workstation ionizes material inside the cornea to create mid-stromal ''bubbles'' without generating Tindall or other inflammatory response and which seem to disappear within 30 minutes. ''Refractive corrections of one to nine dioplers have been observed,'' he said.

Sklar noted that the diagnostics component of the Workstation has provided accurate measurement of corneal curvatures. ''The high resolution provided by the workstation to indentify corneal curvature within the central three millimeters surrounding the visual axis has proven indispensable in accurately positioning the laser effect.''

''The quantitative experience gained in performing Transepithelial Stromal Keratectomy (TSK) in more than 50 eyes has encouraged the staff at the Institute to proceed with human clinical experimentation under FDA guidelines,'' Sklar announced. He added that patient selection and preoperative preparation are currently underway, with actual testing expected to commence during the week of Aug. 6.

The Phoenix Ophthalmic Surgical Workstation is a self-contained proprietary workstation that combines on-line diagnostic measurement, advanced laser beam positioning, high speed tissue tracking, and therapeutic devices for the precise control of laser surgery. The company's technology permits surgery at cellular levels without creating significant thermal damage to surrounding cells.

When performing corneal refractive surgery, the OSW provides a method of correcting nearsightedness, farsightedness and astigmatism without the stromal dehydration, endothelial cell loss and structural eye trauma associated with ultra-violet, high pulsed energy laser-based surgical devices.

The findings of the preclinical and clinical trials at the Barraquer Institute will be made available through medical literature.

The company also announced that the board of directors of Phoenix Laser System has authorized a plan for the company to buy back up to 5 percent of the outstanding preferred and common stock in the open market over a period of time. That announcement was made by Steven Schiffer, president of Phoenix Laser Systems Inc.

''The buy-back represents our confidence in our technology based on the intitial preclinical results and the expected results of the testing of the unit with human subjects over the next two to three weeks,'' Schiffer stated.

Phoenix Laser Systems currently has 9.5 million shares outstanding.

CLEVELAND (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - The following interim report was mailed to Oglebay Norton stockholders on Monday, Aug. 6, 1990.

Oglebay Norton's second-quarter net income amounted to $913,000 or 35 cents per share on sales and revenues of $45,398,000 as compared to net income of $1,639,000 or 64 cents per share on sales and revenues of $47,720,000 for the same period in 1989.

The company, in the first six months of 1990, incurred a loss of $324,000 or 13 cents per share on sales and revenues of $74,704,000 as compared to net income of $1,458,000 or 57 cents per share on sales and revenues of $73,999,000 for the same period in 1989. Included in gross operating revenues in the 1989 second quarter and 1989 year to date are $771,000 and $1,191,000, respectively, (both pretax) which are onetime miscellaneous income items.

The comparative unaudited results for the second quarter ended June 30, 1990 and 1989, and for the year to date are set forth on the attachment hereto.

Oglebay Norton Co. has signed a letter of intent to purchase two Great Lakes self-unloading vessels from Bethelem Steel Corp. -- the 1,000-foot M/V Lewis Wilson Foy and the 698-foot S/S Sparrows Point. The Foy, built in 1978, can carry more than 61,000 gross tons of iron ore pellets; the Sparrows Point, built in 1952, carries almost 22,000 tons.

The purchase is subject to several conditions and is expected to be completed this fall. Addition of the two vessels will make Oglebay Norton's combined Columbia Transportation Division and Pringle Transit Co. operations the largest U.S.-flag bulk carrier on the Great Lakes.

Oglebay Norton's vessel transportation segment currently is operating 12 vessels, as demand for its services remains strong. Segment profits, however, are slightly below the prior year, due to a late sailing-season start and other factors, but this is not necessarily indicative of results anticipated for 1990.

Sales of iron ore pellets for the first six months in 1990 were less than for the first half of 1989. The company, therefore, reduced its share of production from Eveleth Mines and charged to expense certain production costs that could not be absorbed into inventory. Eveleth Mines, under the company's management, negotiated a satisfactory 39-month labor agreement in the second quarter.

DALLAS (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Super Club Retail Entertainment (SCRE) has signed an agreement to purchase 15 retail video units from a subsidiary of Vestron which are located in New Jersey and currently operate under the name ''The Video Store.''

Final closing of the transaction is expected within 30 days.

The existing regional management and store personnel will remain in place -- and overall management responsibility will be under the direction of Video Towne Entertainment, the Dayton-based subsidiary of Super Club.

In making the announcement, Darrell Baldwin, CEO of Super Club, said: ''Through a combination of new-store openings and the incorporation of 40 other Vestron units that we acquired earlier this year, Video Towne has grown from a 22-store chain when we purchased them in September of 1989 to an 86-store chain today. This acquisition will move them over the 100-store mark.

''During the past few months,'' he continued, ''Video Towne has been successfully incorporating audio products into their market through a joint project between our audio and video speciality chains. All 15 of the New Jersey units produce high annual revenue streams from video rental and preliminary studies indicate that a high percentage of the new locations will be suitable for the retailing of audio products and video sell-through.

''Strategically speaking, we see this acquisition as a natural continuation of our expansion plans.''

NEW YORK (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - FolioTech, an interactive computer software application program capable of selectively retrieving and displaying videotaped images on the computer screen was released Monday by Al Blanco, president of The Team Works, an advertising talent placement agency headquartered in New York City.

FolioTech, more than two years in development, will enable showcasing of a freelancer's entire portfolio, television and radio commericals as well as print work on demand to advertising agencies and corporate communications departments in need of advertising creative talent.

Because FolioTech is interactive, it can be used to recruit talent efficiently and precisely from among the potentially thousands of freelancers that can be included in the database.

The Team Works, with offices in Detriot as well as New York, will be marketing FolioTech, as a subscription service, providing updated disks quarterly.

Since its founding in 1987, The Team Works principals have had visions of creating a means to facilitate the agency-freelancer matching process. As the company's talent lists grew, increasingly sophisticated data base development was necessary to keep track of the unique combinations of skills and experience that each freelancer presented.

However, the nature of advertising assignments is such that the hiring process almost invariably requires a personal interview and presentation of portfolio materials before a project can commence.

FolioTech expands the boundaries of traditional databases. It brings the freelancer's work, in all media (print, audio and/or video) to the computer screen. The freelancer whose resume and work is included on the disk is "available" for interviews 24 hours a day.

Freelancers also may videotape a personal statement to be viewed in addition to their portfolio presentation. For the agencies, precise and efficient recruitment of talent can be achieved in a fraction of the time it might otherwise have taken.

By subscribing to FolioTech, advertising agencies can bring under their control the entire recruiting process for freelance assistance (as well as for permanent staff, if desired). No intermediary is necessary; recruitment fees are eliminated. FolioTech enables targeting of talent for short or long-term assignments through its interactive, virtually instantaneous sorting capabilities.

DALLAS (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Uranium Resources Inc. (''URI'') announced a net loss for the second quarter ended June 30, of $76,000, or 0 cents per share vs. net income of $1,101,000, or 16 cents per share in 1989.

Revenue for the period was $2,836,000 compared to $6,500,000 in 1989.

Net income for the six months ended June 30 was $652,000, or 9 cents per share in comparison to net income for the same period of 1989 or $3,435,000 or 48 cents per share.

Revenues for the six months ended June 30, were $8,061,000 compared to $16,149,000 for the same period in 1989. All per share amounts in this release reflect the adjustment of previously reported amounts for the effect of the 1 for 4 reverse split which became effective on Aug. 1.

The anticipated decline in revenues and earnings in the quarter and the six months ended June 30, was primarily related to lower scheduled deliveries and delivery prices in the first half of this year as compared to the last year's first half.

The company indicated that it expects deliveries for the full year to be comparable to 1989 with the third quarter of this year being the most profitable quarter.

The second quarter also reflected an unusual write off of $327,000 of capitalized costs associated with a prior credit facility, which was replaced by the Citibank facility in May 1990.

Commenting on the quarterly results, Raymond G. Larson, CEO, said ''We continue to look forward to very solid year in 1990 with results comparable to 1989, and a further improvement in 1991. We are encouraged by the continued tightening of supplies available in the spot market for uranium which has resulted in uranium spot price increases from $8.70 per pound in February 1990 to $11.70 per pound currently.

''We believe that a continuation of this trend will assist us in obtaining additional contracts for deliveries in future years. Our efforts this year continue to be focused on our major projects, including putting our Rosita property into production early in the fourth quarter continuing our aggressive marketing efforts and continuing to prepare the New Mexico properties for production over the next few years.''

URI sells uranium to utilities under long-term contracts. At June 30, the company had contracted deliveries of over $100 million through 1997 under its six existing contracts at average selling prices of over $20 per pound.

Uranium Resources Inc. is a Dallas-based uranium mining company, whose shares trade on the Toronto Stock Exchange under the symbol URX and on NASDAQ under the symbol URIXD. The company's warrants and units trade on NASDAQ under the symbols URIWD and URIUD, respectively. DFW AIRPORT, TEXAS (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - American Airlines Inc. flew 7.2 billion revenue passenger miles in July, making it the third largest traffic volume month in the airline's history.

Two of the top 10 traffic days, July 12 and July 26, occurred last month.

For the first seven months of the year, American's passenger traffic was up 4.3 percent.

On the cargo side, American continued its outstanding performance. In July, freight alone increased 18.9 percent; for the seven-month period it was up 19.8 percent.

''There are some bright spots in the picture, in spite of the fact that overall passenger traffic was flat,'' said Michael W. Gunn, senior vice president-marketing. ''Our international traffic increased 28.1 percent year over year. European traffic remains strong, and early results from our South American start-up, which began in July, are encouraging.

''In addition, July 1989 traffic was artificially inflated by the 'Kids Fly Free' promotion -- which was not repeated this summer.''

American's available seat miles increased 7.2 percent in July, to 10.9 billion from 10.1 billion. Passenger boardings for the month were down 5.6 percent, to 6,575,230 from 6,964,833. The July system load factor of 66.8 percent was a 4.8 point drop from last year's 71.6 percent.

For the year-to-date period, American's revenue passenger miles were 44.16 billion, up 4.3 percent from last year's 42.32 billion. Available seat miles jumped 6.8 percent for the seven months, to 70.50 billion from 66.03 billion. The system load factor was down 1.5 points to 62.6 percent from 64.1 percent. Passenger boardings were up 1.8 percent to 42,453,151 from 41,682,156.

American's freight ton miles increased 18.9 percent in July, from 55.0 million to 65.5 million. System mail ton miles totalled 20.3 million in July, an 8.2 percent increase from 18.7 million a year ago.

BOSTON, Mass. (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Directors of The Pioneer Group, Inc. (NASDAQ:PIOG) declared a quarterly dividend of 20 cents per share, payable September 14, 1990 to shareholders of record September 4, 1990.

This is the 46th consecutive quarter that the Company will have paid a dividend. Dividends declared or paid to date in 1990 total 60 cents per share. The indicated annual rate for 1990 is 80 cents per share. Dividends totaled 77 cents per share in 1989.

Pioneer Group also announced that its 90% owned subsidiary, Teberebie Goldfields, Ltd. (''TGL''), has experienced delays in gold production at its mine in Tarkwa, Ghana. Sandy, weathered surface ore has proven to be less permeable than necessary for adequate leaching and is being replaced on the leaching pad by coarser ore from below the surface. It had been hoped that the surface ore, which is of a relatively higher grade and required no crushing, would have permitted TGL to commence gold production even before the crusher, agglomerater and stacking conveyor sytems had become fully operational. The surface ore will be stockpiled for processing in the future, when it can be agglomerated and/or mixed with coarser ore. Gold production, which had been expected to commence this summer, will be postponed until at least the fourth quarter, with significant production now scheduled to commence in 1991. Notwithstanding this delay, an unusually mild rainy season has permitted mine development personnel to make great strides toward the completion of the mine and all related facilities and the Company continues to expect that the mine will be operating at full capacity in the second half of 1991.

The Company is primarily an investment manager for the Pioneer Mutual Funds (the ''Funds'') and various private accounts. The Company also distributes shares of the Funds, provides shareholder services to the Funds and serves as trustee for retirement plans and accounts for shareholders of the Funds. In addition, the Company makes venture capital investments and is majority owner of Teberebie Goldfields Limited, a venture formed to mine gold from government-granted concessions in Ghana.

NEW ALBANY, Ind. (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Robinson Nugent Inc. (OTC:RNIC) reported net sales of $14,294,000 for its fourth quarter ended June 30, 1990, up 3 percent over sales of $13,804,000, a year ago.

Net income for the quarter was $95,000, or 2 cents per share, compared to $515,000, or 9 cents per share, in the prior year.

Net sales for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1990, were $55,031,000, an increase of 3 percent over sales of $53,149,000 in the prior year. Net income for the year was $696,000, or 13 cents per share, compared to $1,950,000, or 33 cents per share, for the prior year.

The operating results for the three months and twelve months ended June 30 1990, were adversely affected from lower gross margins. The electronic connector industry is generally characterized as having excess manufacturing capacity, which has caused higher costs for the company and pricing pressures from the marketplace.

The operating results for the year included a one-time pretax charge of $650,000 from a settlement agreement with the company's former president and chief executive officer, who resigned in January 1990, and other one-time charges for various consulting engagements.

Other nonoperating income declined on a year-to-date basis from a reduced level of short-term investment income and currency losses on business transactions in several European currencies.

In addition, net income for the year ended June 30, 1990, included an income tax benefit of $382,000, a change in estimated taxes provided in prior years due to an extended income tax holiday granted to the company's operations in Switzerland.

Unshippped customer orders at June 30, 1990, were $11.7 million, compared to $11.9 million a year ago. Incoming orders for the year amounted to $54.8 million, compared to $53.5 million for the prior year.

The company believes its growth in sales for the year was comparable to activity in the industry as a whole. In anticipation of a continuance of current market conditions, particularly in the United States, the company is reducing costs and its investments in inventories. A number of new products has been intiated with introductions planned in the first quarter of fiscal year 1991.

Short-term financial benefits from these new products will be minor; however, it is expected these new products will contribute to the company's long-term performance.

Robinson Nugent Inc. designs, manufactures, and markets electronic connectors, integrated circuit sockets and cable assemblies. Its products are sold throughout the world for use by manufacturers of computers, telecommunications equipment, automobiles and industrial controls, and a wide variety of other products to interconnect components of electronic systems.

NEWTOWN, PA (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Tseng Labs (NASDAQ/NMS:TSNG) Monday announced results for the three and six months ended June 30. Second quarter revenues increased to $9,723,085 from $9,427,652 in the comparable period last year. Net income was $1,627,750 or $.09 per share compared to $1,759,157 or $.10 per share in the second quarter last year, the best quarter in the company's history.

Revenues for the first half of 1990 were $18,001,833, compared to $18,449,504 in the same period last year. Net income was $2,864,040 or $.16 per share versus $3,355,433 or $.18 per share in the comparable prior year period.

Jack H-N Tseng, president, commented, ''The second quarter continued to demonstrate the strong recovery that the company has made from the second half of 1989. Strong bookings and positive customer response continue for our new VGA products, based on the ET4000, which according to industry experts is the fastest and most sophisticated VGA controller available.

''Design 'wins' with the ET4000 have effectively doubled our VGA OEM customer base, and we expect significant additions to that base during the balance of the year.''

Tseng continued, ''Given the strong demand for ET4000 based products and the new OEM customers recently signed-up, assuming we receive the necessary delivery of chips from our semiconductor manufacturers, the second half of the 1990, and particularly the fourth quarter when the full impact of ET4000 market share gains begin to be experienced, will be substantially ahead of last year's comparable periods and should compare favorably to the first half of 1990.''

HOUSTON (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - Tescorp Inc. (NASDAQ:TESVC) Monday reported net income for its first quarter ended June 30 of $379,000, or 5 cents per share, compared with net income of $136,000, or 2 cents per share, for the first three months of last year.

According to C. Robert Bunch, president and chief executive officer of Tescorp, the favorable results are attributable to improved performance by the company's geophysical products segment.

HERNDON, Va. (AUG. 6) BUSINESS WIRE - C3 Inc., a metropolitan Washington-based systems integrator, announced Monday that it had completed the previously announced major financial recapitalization with its shareholders and banks.

The recapitalization infuses new equity capital into the company to enable it to continue to grow and by converting a major portion of its debt into equity.

Under the agreement, C3's common stockholders injected $3 million of cash into the company for preferred stock. Also, a significant amount of the company's subordinated debt was converted into preferred stock, including a series of preferred stock convertible into 30 percent of the company's common stock.

As a result of the recapitalization, in addition to the company's working capital facility ($6.1 million at June 30), the company's long-term debt consists solely of (i) $6,750,000 in three year senior notes and (ii) $19,500,000 in five year senior debentures. The new series of preferred stock issued in the recapitalization has a face value totalling in excess of $40 million and will be senior to the company's publicly traded preferred stock.

''The completion of this recapitalization, which provides new equity and a substantially reduced debt load, coupled with the company's all time high funded order backlog of $40.9 million, positions the company for future success in the government, applications and systems integration markets,'' stated the company's chairman, Fred Knoll.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) - The State Department has ordered "non-essential" members of U.S. diplomatic missions in Kuwait and Iraq to leave "as soon as possible," the White House said Monday.

Spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Washington had no immediate plans to break diplomatic relations with Iraq.

He emphasized that U.S. diplomatic presence in Baghdad "is important in terms of influence as well as communications at this time," in view of the Gulf crisis sparked by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait last week.

He also said there was no new information from the British Foreign Office concerning U.S. and British citizens reportedly seized by Iraqi forces at the Kuwaiti airport and the SAS hotel for transport to Iraq.

"The situation is pretty chaotic" between Baghdad and Kuwait, Mr. Fitzwater noted.

"It's our understanding that people are able to leave (Kuwait)," he said, although he indicated that travel was tightly restricted.

MOSCOW (AUG. 6) - Moscow welcomed United States plans to slash its armed forces by a quarter by 1995, a foreign ministry spokesman said Monday calling the decision "positive for future Soviet-American disarmament dialogue."

The Soviet statement came in response to U.S. President George Bush's speech in Aspen, Colorado, Thursday, when he explained the cuts saying that a surprise Soviet invasion of Western Europe was "today more remote than at any other point in the postwar period."

Soviet spokesman Yuri Gremitskikh told journalists the decision was an "important advance in the American position."

"For the first time at this level, the United States has recognized that its military strategy and the structure of its forces can and must be modified in response to changes in world politics," he said.

Mr. Gremitskikh nonetheless expressed regret that the United States intended to press ahead with the development of a rail-based intercontinental missile, and did not include its B2 strategic bombers and submarines in the cuts.

A U.S. official in Aspen estimated the cutbacks would eliminate 500,000 positions in the active forces and 200,000 civilian jobs in the military. He said U.S. military bases at home and abroad would be radically reduced.

Khartoum (AUG. 6) - The Sudanese government denied Monday claims that Sudan and Libya were planning to invade neighbouring Chad.

Major General al-Tijani Adam al-Tahir, a member of Sudan's ruling military council, described reports that the two countries were amassing troops on Sudan's western borders as ''unfounded''.

Chad had alleged that Sudan and Libya were assembling an army of dissidents and merceneries to launch ''a total war'' against it.

Al-Tahir said Chad was using the allegation as an excuse to cross into Sudan to pursue Chadian opposition groups.

Meanwhile the Sudanese news agency Suna reported that Sudanese armed forces launched an operation against rebels in the south, inflicting heavy losses in men and equipment.

It quoted an armed forces communique as saying the ''successful'' operation took place in the southern region of Equatoria.

A number of weapons were captured, the communique said but it gave no precise details of casualties.

PARIS (AUG. 6) - France broadened its embargo on buying Iraqi oil to include all merchandise and announced that a shipment of Iraqi oil headed for a French port will have to go elsewhere.

The embargo on transporting all merchandise between France and Iraq and Kuwait was announced by the Sea Minister, Jacques Mellick. "No merchandise is excluded" from the ban, he said.

The shipment of 200,000 tons of Iraqi oil, loaded a month ago at the Saudi port of Yanbu and carried by a Shell tanker, was expected at Le Havre in mid-August but will be denied permission to dock, the officials said.

MOSCOW (AUG. 6) - Russian President Boris Yeltsin on Monday began a three-week tour to assess the extent of regional problems across the Soviet Federation, TASS news agency reported.

According to the report, Mr. Yeltsin will examine inter-ethnic relations, regional efforts at economic self-determination and the setting up of new power-wielding regional councils.

Mr. Yeltsin was due to start his tour in the southern Tatar autonomous republic, then continuing to the Bashkir autonomous republic, the iron-ore rich Urals, the mining regions of Kemerovo in western Siberia and Vorkuta in the Far North, finishing up in the Far East.

The Russian Federation occupies over 76 percent of the total area of the Soviet Union, stretching from the Far North to the Black Sea in the south, and from the Far East to Kalingrad in the west. Its population is in the large majority Russian, the rest being some 38 national minorities.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) - A U.S. Embassy official in Baghdad held two hours of talks with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein Monday to seek a troop withdrawal and the safety of 28 U.S. detainees.

The State Department said U.S. charge d'affaires Joseph Wilson met Saddam in the first direct contact that the U.S. government has had with the Iraqi leader since his forces invaded Kuwait last Thursday.

''We view this as a very serious meeting,'' U.S. State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said.

She declined to give details of the meeting or to describe how Saddam responded to Wilson's demands, but there were few indications that the meeting produced any positive results.

The State Department confirmed reports that Iraqi troops had gathered 28 American citizens from three Kuwaiti hotels and put them on buses bound for unknown destinations.

The State Department's Middle East troubleshooter John Kelly called in Iraqi Ambassador Mohammad al-Mashat Monday to register U.S. concern about the safety of the Americans.

The move has added new tension in what has already become a virtual face-off between Saddam and the industrialised world, led by the United States.

An earlier 14 U.S. oil workers reported detained by Iraqi forces last Friday were said to be safe in a Baghdad hotel and apparently free to leave, Tutwiler said. Three have already left the nation.

In Washington, President George Bush and Secretary of State James Baker kept up a frantic pace of international telephone calls and consultations over the crisis, which Tutwiler described as ''extremely serious''.

Baker spoke on the telephone with his Soviet counterpart Eduard Shevardnadze for about 30 minutes, agreeing to try and expedite passage of a U.N. Security Council resolution that would impose an almost total military, trade, and economic embargo on Iraq.

She said Baker and Shevardnadze had discussed the detention of the 28 Americans and agreed to stay in close touch on developments.

Tutwiler said Iraqi forces in Kuwait seemed to be increasing in number rather than withdrawing, as Iraqi authorities had said they would in an announcement late last week.

As Defence Secretary Richard Cheney flew to Jeddah for consultations with Saudi leaders, and Baker prepared a trip later this week to Turkey, Tutwiler declined comment on press reports that Washington was planning to topple Saddam from power.

A washington Post report said the administration had concluded that unless Saddam was stopped, he would take control of Middle East oil production, a move that could ruin the U.S. economy.

The Post said the White House had therefore decided to overthrow the Iraqi leader using covert means. Asked to respond, Tutwiler said there had been mistakes in recent press reports and that she could not comment on intelligence-related subjects.

She said U.S. policy in the Gulf currently hinged on four issues: an Iraqi troop withdrawal, the restoration of the ousted Kuwaiti government, the safety of all Americans in the region, and the freedom of navigation and free flow of oil in the Gulf.

Over the weekend, Baker spoke by telephone to his counterparts in Egypt, France, Japan, and Oman, while Bush made contacts with regional leaders from his Camp David retreat.

Bush was slated to meet Monday afternoon with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher and Nato secretary General Manfred Woerner to coordinate plans to toughen the Western response against Iraq for refusing to withdraw its troops from Kuwait.

Bush was scheduled to dine with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney in the evening.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Jordan's King Hussein had called Bush Sunday night after the U.S. president criticised the monarch for backing Iraq.

Fitzwater said the two leaders wanted to be sure their positions were understood. He said the conversation had been ''frank and cordial''.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) - About 900 anti-nuclear protesters attended nationwide demonstrations marking Monday's 45th anniversary of the dropping of the atom bomb on Hiroshima, Japan. Thirty-eight people were arrested.

About 70 people gathered outside the gates of the Rocky Flats nuclear weapons plant northwest of Denver, Colorado. Twenty-five were arrested as they tried to enter the plant, police said.

On Sunday, a prayer vigil at the plant drew about 100 participants.

Artists staged a parade in Boulder, Colorado, Sunday to protest the planned resumption of plutonium production at the plant. No resumption date has been released.

The plant's production of plutonium triggers for nuclear weapons was suspended last November for safety reasons.

In Oak Ridge, Tennessee, 10 protesters were arrested Sunday for trespassing at the Y-12 Plant, where uranium for the Hiroshima bomb was prepared. About 150 peace activists gathered at the gates for a religious service and hours of speeches.

At the Savannah River nuclear weapons plant near Aiken, South Carolina, more than 250 people attended a vigil Sunday to remember Hiroshima's victims and to protest plans to restart a reactor.

About 30 peace activists spent Saturday night near a site in Liberty Township, Pennsylvania, that would be used as a command center in the event of nuclear war. Three people were arrested for trespassing on the site Sunday.

In Minneapolis, Minnesota, about 250 people attended the city's annual Hiroshima memorial service Monday.

The United States dropped the world's first atomic bomb on Hiroshima August 6, 1945, in an attack to end World War II. It killed about 140,000 people.

Three days later, the United States dropped another atomic bomb on Nagasaki, killing 70,000 people.

Japan surrendered on August 15, 1945.

ISLAMABAD (AUG. 6) - After dismissing the Bhutto government, Pakistani President Ghulam Ishaq Khan declared state of emergency late Monday, Pakistan Press International said.

The proclamation issued said the security of Pakistan was threatened by ''external aggression and internal disturbance beyond the power of the provincial governments to control'', and so a state of emergency was being declared throughout the country.

A few army vehicles were seen patrolling the main streets in the capital and guarding the television headquarters. But there appeared no unusual movement of troops in the city in the late Monday hours.

Earlier, Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto was dismissed by presidential decree Monday after less than two years in office and replaced for the time being by opposition rival Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi. New elections were set for October 24.

President Ghulam Ishaq Khan announced the dissolution of the Bhutto government at the President's House in the capital.

He said constitutional violations, corruption, failure to maintain law and order and inability to run the government in accordance with the federal constitution were the reasons.

Khan nominated Jatoi, leader of the Combined Opposition Parties (Cop), to be caretaker minister. He was sworn in with four other ministers.

Bhutto, 37, came to power on December 2, 1988 following general elections in November of that year. In her first reaction, she said the dismissal decision was ''unconstitutional and illegal''.

The central executive committee of her Pakistan Peoples Party (Ppp) would consider the decision and might challenge it in the higher court, she said. It is the second Ppp government to have been dissolved.

General Zia ul-Haq, who ruled the country for 11 years, had dismissed her father Zulfikar Ali Bhutto's regime in July 1977.

Announcing his decision, Khan said ''the government of the federation has wilfully undermined and impaired the working of the constitutional arrangements and usurped the authority of the provinces'' which resulted in discord confrontation affecting the integrity and solidarity of Pakistan.

On May 29, 1988 Zia ul-Haq had dismissed the government of prime minister Mohammad Khan Junejo on the same grounds. Unlike Bhutto, Junejo did not contend Zia's action, saying he had acted in accordance with the constitution.

Jatoi, who comes from Bhutto's home province of Sindh, has been leading the opposition's ''crusade against the corruption and misdoings of (the) Bhutto cabinet'' since he won a by-election from a Punjab constituency in early 1989 after failing to win in his home town in the elections of November 16 1988.

He had been a confidante of Bhutto's father and also served as the chief minister of Sindh until its government was sacked by Zia ul-Haq in July 1977.

JERUSALEM (AUG. 6) - Israeli Foreign Minister David Levy has postponed a visit to the United States he was to have started Tuesday to September 6 at Washington's request, a Foreign Ministry source said here late Monday.

"Mr. (James) Baker, the secretary of state, was obliged to ask Mr. Levy to postpone the visit due to the mission assigned to him by President George Bush to visit Turkey," he said.

The delay of Mr. Levy's first visit to Washington since he became foreign minister is a setback for the Israeli government, which wanted to appear as a privileged ally of the United States in the Middle East following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait on Thursday.

"The United States must understand that there is a link between the current situation in the Middle East and the peace process," the spokesman said earlier.

The visit would have softened the image of Israel as an obstacle to the peace process in the region because of the Likud government's hardline positions.

Israeli television said Mr. Levy's visit was pushed back so that U.S. officials would not appear to be planning any joint action with Israel against Iraq. It added that the minister was surprised by Washington's last-minute decision.

Western diplomatic sources said the U.S. had asked for a week's postponement but Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir objected, asking for a maximum delay of 24 hours.

JEDDAH, SAUDI ARABIA (AUG. 6) - Foreign ministers of the six-nation Gulf Cooperation Council (GCC) will meet here Tuesday in extraordinary session to discuss the Gulf crisis, Gulf officials said Monday.

They said the meeting -- the second since Iraq invaded Kuwait at dawn Thursday after the failure of bilateral talks to resolve a bitter dispute over oil and border markings -- will examine developments in the Gulf and the situation in Kuwait.

The meeting comes amid heightened tension in the Gulf, a U.S. military buildup, reports of Iraqi troop movements along the Kuwaiti-Saudi border and a visit to Jeddah by U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney.

The GCC ministers condemned and strongly deplored the Iraqi invasion following a meeting Friday in Cairo.

Ousted Kuwaiti Foreign Minister Sheikh Sabah al-Ahmad al-Sabah, who fled to Saudi Arabia with most memebrs of the ruling Al Sabah family, will attend Tuesday's meeting.

The GCC groups Kuwait, Saudi Arabia, Bahrain, Oman, Qatar and the United Arab Emirates.

The chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization (PLO), Yasser Arafat, meanwhile arrived here from Egypt for talks with officials on regional tensions.

The PLO, along with Jordan, Yemen and Sudan, refused to join in an Arab League condemnation of Iraq.

ISLAMABAD (AUG. 6) - The United States was following developments in Pakistan closely and hoped democracy would not be affected by the sacking of Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto and the dissolution of parliament, an embassy spokesman said Monday.

"Obviously the United States and the entire world attach great importance to the democratic process here and elsewhere," the spokesman said.

Earlier Pakistan President Ghulam Ishaq Khan had dismissed Ms. Bhutto for alleged corruption and misuse of power and dissolved parliament.

The spokesman declined to comment on the decree but said: "We will be following the developments with close attention."

BOLSWARD, Netherlands (AUG. 6) - A Dutch fishing boat captured by Liberian rebels has been commandeered to carry rebels and food supplies to the war-torn country, its crew still on board, the wife of one said Monday.

Dutchmen Gerard Kuijper and Boudewijn Boekema have been held along with fellow Ghanian and Liberian crew members since the National Patriotic Front captured their prawn trawler Treesie off the West African coast almost a month ago.

The captain Mr. Kuijper telephoned his wife Petra Kuijper Sunday to say the boat had been fitted with canons and was stationary off the coast of Liberia.

Mrs. Kuijper described the situation as "very bad", adding that the men were "very scared."

The Treesie, from the Dutch Antilles, had been chartered by a British company the Dutch Foreign Ministry declined to name.

ISLAMABAD (AUG. 6) - Ousted Pakistan Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto was not officially informed of her dismissal and had to telephone the president herself to find out what happened, her spokesman said Monday.

"Nobody had the courtesy to inform her," Kamran Shafi said.

"New elections" was President Ghulam Ishaq Khan's brief reply to Ms. Bhutto's query about the upheaval in the country, Mr. Shafi said.

Mr. Ishaq Khan dissolved the assembly and removed Ms. Bhutto after naming her parliamentary opposition chief Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi as caretaker prime minister.

He later imposed a state of emergency, saying that national security was threatened.

Meanwhile, dozens of armed soldiers in battle gear stood guard outside Ms. Bhutto's official residence late in the night Monday. Sources said they were not obstructing visitors.

Soldiers were also guarding vital installations in Rawalpindi and Islamabad, including radio and television stations, but the situation remained normal. People in some places celebrated her ouster by shooting off firecrackers and firing guns into the air.

Ms. Bhutto was to have left for Karachi on Monday, but her press secretary said she put off her departure until Tuesday.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) - The United States Monday said that ending Iraq's invasion of Kuwait was "clearly in the national interest" amid reports that the aircraft carrier USS Independence -- steaming through the Arabian Sea -- was close enough to the Gulf to deploy its fighter planes.

White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said the invasion threatened regional and world stability and the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, and could force severe economic consequences on the United States.

"From the moment the first Iraqi soldier entered Kuwait, it has been clearly in the national interest to stop (Iraqi President) Saddam Hussein " he said.

"This is an overt situation. His tanks are real and moving. Our response is real and moving on all fronts, diplomatic, economic, political and military," said Mr. Fitzwater.

Pentagon sources said the USS Independence and its carrier battle group were on station in the Arabian Sea. From that position, they would be able to launch fighter planes into the Gulf region, the sources said.

Meanwhile, Assistant Secretary of State for Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs John Kelly summoned the Iraqi ambassador to the United States, Mohamed Sadiq Al-Mashat, to demand information on the whereabouts of 28 Americans said to have been rounded up by Iraqi troops in Kuwait.

"We hold Iraq responsible for their safety...It's premature to call them hostages," said State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler.

ANKARA (AUG. 7) - A senior aide to Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani bearing a message from the Teheran leader met here with President Turgut Ozal of Turkey.

Before seeing Ozal late Monday, Ali Reza Moayyeri told reporters that Teheran would prefer a settlement of the Gulf crisis by the countries of the region.

It was ''not yet'' time for U.S. intervention, Moayyeri said.

Teheran was not against the sanctions call by the U.N. Security Council, he added.

Earlier Monday, Baghdad reduced its oil exports flowing through a a pair of pipelines to a Turkish port.

Ankara has been under pressure from its allies to block Iraqi oil exports through the pipelines. The United Nations also urged Turkey and Saudi Arabia to turn off the pipelines crossing their territory.

Ozal earlier told the U.S. television network Cnn that he ''strongly hoped there would be no need for a military intervention'' by the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (Nato).

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker is expected in Ankara Thursday for talks.

''I wish for the implementation of the U.N. resolutions and the withdrawal of Iraq from Kuwait'', Ozal said, adding that Turkey did not recognise Kuwait's new ''puppet regime''.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) - Turkish President Turgut Ozal indicated Monday that his government would obey a U.N. oil embargo against Iraq and shut down two Iraqi pipelines running through Turkey.

"I think we will obey the (U.N.) oil embargo," Mr. Ozal told U.S.-based ABC Television.

He was speaking on Turkey's likely attitude before 13 members of the 15-member U.N. Security Council voted in favor of a resolution imposing mandatory trade, financial and military sanctions against Baghdad for its invasion of Kuwait Thursday.

"If we are going to act, we are going to act legally by the Security Council decision," Mr. Ozal said.

(Iraq on Monday was to close one of two oil pipelines that carries Iraqi oil across Turkey to the Mediterranean and to cut the capacity of the second, the Anatolia News Agency said.

(Iraqi authorities gave no reason for the move nor did they say how long they would keep the line closed.)

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker is due to travel to Turkey Wednesday in an attempt to convince Ankara to shut down the pipelines.

Iraq on Sunday warned Turkey that if Ankara closed the pipeline Iraqi-Turkish relations would be adversely affected.

CARACAS (AUG. 6) - Venezuelan Energy Minister Celestino Armas Monday dismissed the possibility of an emergency meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) in response to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

"These types of meetings create expectations in the market," Mr. Armas told journalists here.

Venezuela "will not take isolated or hasty actions" on any increase in its petroleum exports because of skyrocketing oil prices after Iraq's invasion of Kuwait last week, he said.

"We are aware of the tension that this invasion in the Middle East has created and the speculation it has produced in the futures markets in the United States, Europe and Asia, but we are not inclined to contribute to a distortion in petroleum prices," he said.

"We hope that the 11 countries of OPEC uninvolved in the conflict can take concerted actions," the minister added.

"Venezuela has a policy of setting prices without sharply increasing them and because of that we have not made speculative estimates on a hike in oil prices," Mr. Armas said.

Venezuela was a founding member of OPEC, as were Iraq and Kuwait.

BERLIN (AUG. 6) - More than a third of East German army generals have gone since the fall of communism, but the force was still no smaller than planned under ousted leader Erich Honecker's regime, the East German Secretary of State for Disarmament said Monday.

In an interview with the daily Neues Deutschland, Frank Marczinek said some 73 of 199 National People's Army generals had been retired from service since Mr. Honecker was toppled last October 18.

However, discounting the effects of shorter compulsory military service there had been "no greater reduction than that envisaged under Erich Honecker", he said.

Less than a year ago, NPA forces stood at 170,000. Today the army has some 98,000, with Bonn proposing further cuts of 50,000. The West German army is 480,000 strong.

Under an agreement between West German Chancellor Kohl and Soviet President, German forces must be cut to 370,000 three to four years after German unification.

TOKYO (AUG. 6) - Japanese Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu said Monday that Japan would import more crude oil from countries other than Iraq and Kuwait.

Commenting on a Japanese government decision Sunday to suspend crude oil imports from the two Middle Eastern countries, Mr. Kaifu said, "It will not immediately cause serious damage to Japan if we import more from other countries."

Mr. Kaifu did not specify the names of the "other countries" but Jiji Press quoted government sources as saying that they included Saudi Arabia and Oman.

When Mr. Kaifu visits Saudi Arabia on Saturday and Oman next Monday, he is to ask the two countries to increase crude oil exports to Japan, the sources were quoted as saying.

Official sources said that the International Trade and Industry Ministry has asked Japanese traders to diversify crude oil imports.

Mr. Kaifu told a news conference in Hiroshima, western Japan, that Japan depended on Iraq and Kuwait for its crude oil imports at the level of six per cent each.

He was in Hiroshima to attend the 45th annual memorial service for victims killed in the U.S. atomic bombing of the city on August 6, 1945.

Mr. Kaifu said the government would ask the people to save energy in the wake of Japanese economic sanctions against Iraq for its invasion of Kuwait.

"We have to do various things, including requests to the people to save energy," the prime minister told the news conference.

BEIJING (AUG. 6) - Chinese Premier Li Peng, off on a milestone visit to Indonesia, said Monday the spotlight now is on the U.N. Security Council and the Arab League to defuse the Gulf crisis.

Mr. Li is going to Jakarta for Wednesday's long-awaited resumption of diplomatic ties between China and Indonesia, two of Asia's most populous and influentual nations, after a break of 23 years.

He is also to visit Singapore from Saturday, then go to Bangkok on August 13-14.

With him are his foreign and trade ministers, Qian Qichen and Zheng Tuobin.

But the Indonesia trip -- billed has "historic" by Chinese officials -- is being overshadowed by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, and at a pre-departure press conference at Beijing airport Mr. Li became the most senior Chinese leader so far to openly criticize Baghdad's aggression.

"We are opposed to the intrusion of Iraq into Kuwait," he said, recalling that China voted for a U.N. Security Council resolution condemning the invasion and joined the international ban on arms sales to Iraq.

China -- one of five permanent members of the Security Council -- had been one of Iraq's biggest source of weapons, according to diplomats here.

"As for the next step, we will support the mediation carried out by the Arab League and the U.N. Security Council," Mr. Li said.

"We also hope that negotiations can be carried out between Iraq and the legitimate government of Kuwait," he added, indicating that China still recognizes the emir of Kuwait -- now in exile in Saudi Arabia -- as that country's true ruler.

China itself has bitterly criticized an arms embargo imposed on it by Western nations after last year's violent suppression of democracy protests in Tiananmen Square.

But Mr. Li said the Gulf crisis was a different affair.

"I do not see there is any connection between our decision to refrain from selling arms to Iraq and interference in the internal affairs (of other countries)," he said.

The Gulf crisis is expected to come up during Mr. Li's talks with President Suharto in Jakarta, as Indonesia -- like Kuwait and Iraq -- is a member of the Organization Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC).

But the primary reason for the trip is to mark the formal resumption of diplomatic ties between the two Asian powers on Wednesday.

Indonesia suspended ties with China in 1967, accusing it of complicity in a communist coup attempt two years earlier. China denied the charge, while accusing Indonesia at the time of persecuting its small, but economically powerful, ethnic Chinese minority.

The decision to resume diplomatic relations was announced here July 3 by Mr. Qian and his Indonesian counterpart, Ali Alatas.

Singapore, which has long-standing trade links with China, but no diplomatic ties, has said it is prepared to follow Indonesia's lead and establish full relations by the end of the year.

Mr. Li said he would be discussing this question with his host, Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew, a regular visitor to China. "There are no major problems in the way of establishing diplomatic relations between our two countries... As for the specific time, I don't think it's far away," he said.

Mr. Li's two-day visit to Thailand, announced at the last minute Saturday, is expected to focus on Cambodia, following the recent U.S. decision to no longer recognize the Cambodian resistance government at the United Nations.

TOKYO (AUG. 6) - Crude oil prices on Tokyo's spot market rose to 21.9 dollars a barrel Monday morning, higher than weekend prices of 19.75 dollars at the close of trading in New York, traders said.

Spot market crude oil prices jumped by 1.5 dollars to 18.7 dollars in Tokyo soon after Iraq invaded Kuwait last Thursday.

Company managers said they were worried about crude oil price levels which they said might push up prices in Japan.

MANILA (AUG. 6) - The U.S. Peace Corps is to hold talks with the Philippine government this month on plans to reinstate its program here after the release of an American volunteer kidnapped by communist rebels, a U.S. diplomat said Monday.

"It's definitely our interest to bring back the Peace Corps volunteers," U.S. Ambassador to the Philippines Nicholas Platt told reporters.

Mr. Platt said Peace Corps officials would return to the Philippines "after two weeks" for talks with the government on a "reconstituted program."

The ambassador accompanied Peace Corps volunteer Timothy Swanson, kidnapped by New People's Army (NPA) guerrillas on June 13, on a courtesy call on President Corazon Aquino four days after his release from captivity in the central island of Negros.

Meanwhile, the private Japanese aid group Organization for Industrial, Spiritual and Cultural Advancemen (OISCA) said it had no intention of withdrawing from the Philippines following the recent kidnapping of one of its Japanese workers.

OISCA member Fumio Mizuno, who was held for 66 days by the NPA in Negros and was also released on August 2, also called on Mrs. Aquino Monday.

OISCA lawyer Edgar Uytiepo, a Filipino, accompanied him on the visit and told reporters afterwards that the organization "will not pull out" from the Philippines.

The NPA, the armed wing of the banned Communist Party of the Philippines which has been fighting the government for 21 years, said it suspected the two of cooperating with the Philippine military on counter-insurgency but released them for lack of evidence.

The Peace Corps program, begun in the early 1960's, posts volunteer experts and teachers from the United States to help developing countries.

Washington suspended its program in the Philippines on June 27 and pulled out its 261 volunteers citing the threat of possible rebel attacks against them.

On the possible resumption of the program, Mr. Platt said: "I think we'll go very carefully and we'll consult with the armed forces of the Philippines to fix the right places" to assign the volunteers.

Mr. Mizuno, 36, speaking after calling on Mrs. Aquino, said: "I would like to return but I cannot say when."

Mr. Swanson, a 26-year-old from Cheyenne, Wyoming, said: "I'm not coming back as a Peace Corps volunteer. I'm coming back as a private citizen."

Both men are married to Filipinas. Mr. Swanson was critical of the insurgent's motives in kidnapping him. "I kinda resent being used," he told reporters.

Mr. Mizuno, 36, said he lost "12 to 13 pounds" (5.4kg to 5.8kg) in his days in captivity.

Mr. Uytiepo said Mrs. Aquino told Mr. Mizuno that "she's sorry about what happened."

Mr. Swanson said he thanked Mrs. Aquino for the government's help in obtaining his freedom.

He said the NPA "has grievances but I don't think they justify what the NPA is doing."

He said the insurgents "told me not to try to escape" and his life in captivity "was generally very boring."

"Every other day we bath and washed our clothes. We ate at more or less regular times," he said, adding that he missed his Filipina wife.

"They wanted me to understand their point of view. But they didn't really expect me to agree with it," he said.

He said he thought he was singled out by the rebels "probably because I was in an exposed location."

HANOI (AUG. 6) - Municipal authorities here have declared a freeze on the activities of financially troubled private credit companies, a local newspaper reported Monday.

The firms have been unable to meet their repayment committments in recent weeks according to the capital's daily Hanoi Moi and Hanoi officials have warned depositors against "acts provoking public disorder" which they said would be punished.

The report said there had been protests by depositors who were unable to recoup their money.

These financial problems were due mainly to errors in placing collected money, high interest rates, and misappropriation of funds by some officials, official sources said.

The Hanoi Moi said a company official was recently arrested in Hanoi for having allegedly given a loan of 3.5 billion dongs (about 700,000 dollars) to a firm in return for a bribe of 60 million dongs (10,000 dollars).

Municipal authorities decided to freeze "the operations of deposits, loans, and interest payments", as well as seize "goods, documents and files" of the companies, the daily added.

Maintainance of order will be assured, authorities warned, in order to prevent "bad elements and hostile forces from taking advantage of this situation to incite trouble and provoke political instability in the capital."

Vietnamese authorities have in the last few months denounced what they describe as "an imperialist and reactionary plot" aimed at destabilizing Vietnam.

While many Eastern European countries have rejected communism Hanoi has ignored the changes and plans to pursue the socialist path.

Private financial establishments have developped haphazardly in the last year. But they have drained a considerable share of public savings away from a public banking system that offers few returns.

BAGHDAD (AUG. 6) - The pro-Iraqi provisional government in Kuwait called Monday for employees in the service, health and energy sectors to return to work, Iraqi television reported.

The call was directed to bakeries, food depots, hospitals, petrol stations, electricity and desalination plants, as well as municipal workers and telephone company employees.

"With order restored and in view of the easing of the curfew, all employees (in these sectors) are called upon to return to their workplaces," the television cited the interior ministry as saying.

The nine-man military administration, which said it overthrew the Kuwaiti government last Thursday and called on assistance from Iraqi forces, announced Sunday that a round-the-clock curfew was being eased, allowing civilians to venture out between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Iraq announced Sunday that some of its units had begun to pull out of Kuwait but the report was disputed by the United States, which is pressing for tough United Nations sanctions on Baghdad.

LONDON (AUG. 6) - The Gulf crisis sent North Sea Brent oil soaring by more than 8.5 per cent to 26 dollars per barrel on Monday.

Brent closed at 23.95 dollars on Friday.

Monday's price was the highest since January 1986, and was in response to an embargo by the United States, Japan and the European Economic Community (EEC) on oil from Iraq and Kuwait.

Market experts said that the embargo would increase pressure on supplies from other sources, consequently pushing prices higher.

Hoare Govett oil analyst John Toalster said: "We could see the oil price go to 30 dollars and possibly beyond."

But another analyst, Stephen Turner of Smith New Court, said that an increase to 30 dollars was not justified in the short term, and that such a big increase would be justified only in the event of military escalation of the conflict, or of a naval blockade of the Gulf.

SYDNEY (AUG. 6) - Australia's share prices Monday slumped more than 2.5 percent, caught up in worldwide stock market tumbles following the flare-up in the Middle East.

The main market indicator, the all ordinaries index, slumped 41.4 points to 1,548.3, its lowest level in about a month.

One broker said the market feared that rising oil prices following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait would accelerate world inflation and could spark a recession.

NICOSIA (AUG. 6) - The Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and an embargo on oil exports from the two countries will trigger profound disruption on world oil markets and could do irreparable damage to OPEC, the Middle East Economic Survey (MEES) warned here Monday.

A total ban on exports from Iraq and Kuwait would deprive world markets of more than four million barrels of oil a day, according to MEES.

"If anything like the full IraqiKuwaiti shortfall ... manifests itself," the weekly specialist review said, "the world will not be able to get by for very long without some additional supply from other sources, above and beyond the current OPEC levels."

Spare capacity at present within the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, apart from Iraq and Kuwait, amounts to around 3.5 million barrels a day, concentrated in Saudi Arabia, the United Arab Emirates, Venezuela and Libya.

Saudi Arabia with a spare potential of two million barrels a day, could prove to be reluctant to antagonize Iraq "by cooperating with measures to restrict Iraqi oil exports and increase its own production in deference to the wishes of the U.S. and the world community," MEES noted.

Washington has implicitly warned Iraq that it would intervene militarily if Iraqi forces were to expand their operation into Saudi Arabia.

An Agence France-Presse correspondent on Saturday reported that Iraqi units had entered an oil-rich neutral zone on the Kuwaiti-Saudi frontier, but the report was quickly denied in Baghdad.

"In any case, there will be considerable disruption of world oil markets as a result of steps already taken by the U.S. to embargo purchases of Iraqi oil by U.S. companies," MEES said.

The United States over the first five months of the year imported an average of 609,000 barrels a day from Iraq, or 10 per cent of its total purchases.

If imports are also banned from Kuwait, where Iraq has installed a provisional military government, the United States will have to find roughly 700,000 barrels a day from other sources.

"This will be no small undertaking for the U.S.," according to MEES, "particularly considering that it already bans the importation of oil from Iran and Libya."

Iraq's present crude exports total 2.7 million to 2.8 million barrels a day, carried through pipelines across neighboring Turkey and Saudi Arabia and the Gulf terminal at Mina al-Bakr.

"Blockading the terminals by means of U.S. naval power could ... be a tricky exercise," MEES said.

"The upshot of all this is that although effective global oil sanctions would undoubtedly cripple Iraq, they would be difficult to implement and administer in practice."

The newsletter warned that "one obvious potential casualty" of the current cisis is an OPEC accord last month to restrict output and push prices up to 21 dollars a barrel by the end of the year "in a more or less orderly fashion."

"Now the normal patterns of oil supply and trade have been radically distorted, and crisis buying has already lifted prices to somewhere around the 21 dollar OPEC basket range.

"Unless conditions return to normal pretty soon, the damage to the agreement -- and perhaps OPEC itself -- may prove beyond repair."

The Gulf crisis sent North Sea Brent oil soaring by more than 8.5 per cent to 26 dollars per barrel on Monday. Brent closed at 23.95 dollars on Friday.

Monday's price was the highest since January 1986.

NICOSIA, Aug 6 (AFP) - King Hussein of Jordan has contacted several Arab leaders in a new bid to forge a unified Arab stand on resolving the Iraq-Kuwait crisis, officials in Amman said Monday.

King Hussein late Sunday telephoned King Fahd of Saudi Arabia, Presidents Hosni Mubarak of Egypt and Hafez al-Assad of Syria, Libyan leader Moamer

Kadhafi and the emirs of Qatar and Bahrain, Sheikh Khalifa ibn Hamad al-Thani and Sheikh Isa bin Sulman al-Khalifa.

He also received a call from the Yemeni president, Colonel Ali Abdullah Saleh.

Jordan voted against an Arab League resolution condemning last Thursday's Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and calling for a withdrawal of Baghdad's troops from the emirate.

King Hussein said he feared the resolution could encourage non-Arab intervention in the crisis.

Authorized trade unions in Jordan issued a statement Monday hailing what they termed the "heroic" entry of Iraqi troops into Kuwait and marking August 2 as an "historic day."

The Iraqi operation was in keeping with resolutions adopted at the Baghdad summit of Arab leaders in May calling for "joint Arab security," the trade unions said.

The Libyan news agency JANA, monitored here, said a Libyan-Palestinian plan to resolve the crisis began to take effect Sunday, referring to Iraq's announcement that it had started to withdraw troops from Kuwait.

"All sides are satisfied and things are returning to normal," JANA said.

As part of Iraq's consultations with its allies, Parliamentary Speaker Saadi Mehdi Saleh arrived Monday in Sanaa with a message from President Saddam Hussein for Col. Saleh, who met Sunday with Egypt's President Mubarak.

Jordan, Yemen and Egypt are grouped with Iraq in the Arab Cooperation Council. Cairo was the only member to condemn the invasion.

DUBAI (AUG. 6) - Iraqi troops have seized several ships in the port of Kuwait, including a U.S. tanker and two Iranian vessels, and the crews have been detained, shipping sources said here Monday.

"The ships have not been allowed to leave. They are still there and their crews have been detained," one source said.

A U.S. tanker, the Sea Wolf, and two Iranian ships, the passenger ferry Hormuz and the freighter Safeer, are among the vessels held since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait last Thursday, the source said.

They said there were no passengers on the Hormuz at the time of the invasion. The ferry went into service last month between Kuwait and the Iranian port of Bushehr.

The source said some ships had been allowed to discharge their cargo and leave port since the invasion. These include Iranian launches that have since docked at Dubai.

According to U.S. television reports, the Sea Wolf had a 20-man American crew.

Freighters and container ships heading for Kuwait have discharged their cargos at Dubai and other ports in the United Arab Emirates and the goods are being stored pending a resolution of the crisis, port officials said here.

Lloyds Shipping Agency reported no major disruption to shipping in the Gulf due to the invasion but said "some of the ships are taking precautions."

DUBAI (AUG. 6) - Iraqi troops controlling Kuwait city are tightening restrictions on movements of residents, who are mobbing supermarkets in the fear that stocks will run out, Lloyds Shipping Agency said here Monday.

The Agency's Dubai branch said it had received a telex from the Lloyds Shipping office in Kuwait Sunday describing the situation there as "relatively calm".

"All our people are safe. They have been able to move around but the Iraqi troops are becoming more restrictive," a Lloyds official said.

"The supermarkets are open but mobbed. There are stocks for about one week, according to the latest message," he added.

He said the telex made no reference to the situation at the port of Kuwait, where according to other shipping sources here, Iraqi troops have blocked several vessels and detained their crews.

DAMASCUS (AUG. 6) - Iranian Foreign Minister Ali Akbar Velayati Monday warned here that his country would not remain indifferent to last week's Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

''We could not sit indifferently in the face of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and we will continue coordinating with our brothers in Syria,'' Velayati said at the end of a two-day stay in Syria.

The minister earlier said without elaborating that he handed a letter to Syrian President Hafez Assad from his Iranian counterpart Hashimi Rafsanjani.

Velayati reiterated that Damascus and Teheran demand the withdrawal of the Iraqi forces from Kuwait.

He left for Muscat where he is to discuss with high-ranking Omani officials the latest developments in the region, the Iranian News Agency Irna reported.

Iraq and Iran fought an eight-year war until a U.N.-sponsored truce halted battles in August 1988. Kuwait backed Iraq in the war.

BRUSSELS (AUG. 6) - A emergency NATO council meeting was held here Monday to discuss the situation in the Gulf following the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait last Thursday, reliable sources said here.

The question of a possible U.S. intervention was not raised, the sourceas said.

The council, which groups the permanent representatives of the 16 member states of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation (NATO) exchanged views about the latest developments in Kuwait.

Later Monday NATO's political committee was to meet for the same reason.

The Iraqi-installed regime in Kuwait said life was returning to normal Monday after the first phase of an Iraqi pullout, as the U.N. Security Council was set to impose sweeping sanctions on Baghdad.

In Washington government officials mapped contingency war plans and President George Bush blasted Iraqi leaders as liars and outlaws.

JOHANNESBURG (AUG. 6) - Convicted murderer and ex-body guard Jerry Richardson who killed a 14-year-old black activist on New Year's Day 1988 in the belief he was a police informer, was under the spell of Winnie Mandela, a psychologist said in court here on Monday.

The witness called by Mr. Richardson's defence to help save him from the gallows told the Rand Supreme Court that the 41-year-old coach of the so-called Mandela United Football Club was of limited intelligence, violent, aggressive, easily influenced and "seemed to take his cue from Winnie Mandela."

Mr. Richardson was found guilty in May of murdering Stompie, a child activist with a considerable following among schoolchildren in Johannesburg's black township Soweto, on New Year's Day 1988.

The trial has cast Winnie Mandela, wife of African National Congress (ANC) Deputy President Nelson Mandela, in the role of ghost defendant.

It was she who allegedly had Richardson and other footballers who served as her bodyguards snatch Stompie and three other boys from a Methodist manse in Soweto to be grilled about their supposed homosexual relationship with a minister.

Witnesses told the trial she had beaten the boys when they were brought into her home in Soweto's Diepkloof district, where they were allegedly held for more than one week.

The court also heard that she had accused Stompie of betraying four ANC activists killed by police in Parys, some 100 kilometres (62 miles) south of here.

The hearing to sentence Mr. Richardson began Monday and was expected to last well into the week.

Witwatersrand Attorney-General Klaus von Lieres began considering Monday whether or not to prosecute Mrs. Mandela, who was not called as a witness in the Richardson trial, the Johannesburg Daily Mail reported.

Mrs. Mandela faced new allegations last Friday, when at the multiple murder trial of another Mandela United Football Club member, Charles Bongani Zwane, the mother of a murder victim said Mrs. Mandela had "mandated" Mr. Zwane to kill her son.

BONN (AUG. 6) - Work goes on as normal at the Kuwaiti embassy in the West German capital Bonn despite last week's military invasion of the tiny oil-rich Gulf country by its neighbour Iraq.

Ambassador to Bonn Khalid al-Babtin, echoing remarks by other Kuwaiti heads of mission around the world, dismissed the new Iraqi-installed interim government as ''a puppet regime''.

''This regime, which consists only of Iraqis, does not represent the interests of the Kuwaiti population,'' the diplomat said.

Meanwhile, some 100 Kuwaiti demonstrators - men, women and children - staged a protest outside Baghdad's mission in Bonn, carrying banners which said, ''Kuwait is ours - Long live the Emir''.

They also waved photographs of Kuwaiti ruler Sheikh Jaber al-Ahmed al-Sabah who fled to Saudi Arabia following Thursday's invasion.

''It is terrible that we don't know what is happening to our families,'' said a 50-year-old Kuwaiti man in despair, who like others, is stranded here now. Originally he had planned to fly home Friday after undergoing an operation here.

''I want (Iraqi President) Saddam Hussein's head,'' said another irate demonstrator, standing in the garden of the Kuwaiti embassy where protestors had met for the protest march.

Al-Babtin said that Kuwaitis who travelled to West Germany for a holiday or for medical treatment will not be able to return home for the time being. Most of them had decided to travel on to Gulf states like Saudi Arabia and Bahrain.

JERUSALEM (AUG. 6) - Rioting broke out in Jerusalem Monday as Jews attacked Arabs following the brutal murders of two Jewish youths by unknown assailants.

A crowd of Jewish residents blocked the two main roads leading from the capital to Bethlehem and the main population centres in the West Bank and pelted cars belonging to Palestinians.

Other Palestinians were physically attacked by groups of irate residents.

The bodies of Lior Tubul 17, and Ronen Karamani, 18, missing since Saturday, were discovered at the bottom of a gorge separating a Jewish Jerusalem suburb, Ramot, from its Arab neighbour Shu'afat.

Eye-witnesses said the bodies were found bound and gagged with signs of numerous stab wounds and strangulation. One of the bodies also had had its skull crushed with a rock.

Israel Army Radio reported that family members attacked journalists and photographers upon learning of the deaths, and that crowds of irate Jewish residents gathered in Ramot.

The youths were last seen Saturday night on leaving their homes to visit a girlfriend. An initial investigation indicated they had been ambushed at the roadside by four people who took them on foot down to the gorge.

JAMMU, INDIA (AUG. 6) - Four elderly Hindu ascetics fell nearly 1,000 feet (300 metres) to their deaths early Monday on a mountain trek to a popular pilgrimage site in the Himalayas, Indian officials said.

Some 90 others suffered severe breathlessness due to lack of oxygen and many had to be revived by medical teams, officials said in the winter capital of the northern state of Kashmir.

Almost 4,000 people, including 500 foreigners, were on the pilgrimage to the 12,500-feet-high (3,750 metre) holy Amarnath Cave dedicated to Lord Shiva, the Hindu god of destruction, located south of the Kashmir valley.

Monday was the climax of the annual pilgrimage which Moslem separatists had threatened to disrupt unless militants jailed outside Kashmir were returned to the state.

An spokesman said the pilgrims had been provided with a heavy security escort to tackle any eventuality.

NICOSIA (AUG. 6) - The Iraqi-installed regime in Kuwait said life was returning to normal Monday after the first phase of an Iraqi pullout, as the U.N. Security Council was set to impose sweeping sanctions on Baghdad.

The Middle East waited for key decisions from both the Security Council in New York and from Washington, where government officials mapped contingency war plans and President George Bush blasted Iraqi leaders as liars and outlaws.

Kuwait was cut off from the outside world for the second straight day, but a Gulf shipping agency said residants were mobbing supermarkets in fear that stocks would run out, according to a telex received from Kuwait city.

The provisional government in Kuwait called Monday for employees in the services, health and energy sectors to return to work, Iraqi television reported.

"With order restored and in view of the easing of the curfew, all employees (in these sectors) are called upon to return to their workplaces," the new interior ministry said.

The nine-man military adminstration said Sunday that a round-the-clock curfew imposed after last Thursday's invasion was being relaxed to allow civilians to venture out between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Iraq announced Sunday that some of its units had begun to pull out of Kuwait but the report was disputed by the United States, which is pressing for tough U.N. sanctions on Baghdad.

Washington said there was no independent confirmation of the withdrawal. But Baghdad-based correspondents visited the Iraqi border post of Safwan at the invitation of the information ministry to watch hundreds of soldiers drive north from Kuwait.

An AFP reporter counted 74 loaded lorries and transporters carrying armoured vehicles heading for the southern Iraqi city of Basra.

The Iraqi News Agency reported that tens of thousands of volunteers were still flocking to recruitment centres in Iraq to register for the Kuwait's new "popular army", a force made up mostly of Iraqis.

Baghdad announced Saturday that more than 140,000 volunteers were seeking to join the force to support the provisional government. Hundreds of them have already taken up positions in the centre of Kuwait city.

The ruling Al-Sabah royal family, most of whose members have taken refuge in Saudi Arabia since the invasion, said Sunday that around 700 Kuwaitis were killed in the Iraqi operation.

In New York, the United Nations Security Council was poised to meet later Monday to vote on stiff economic sanctions and an arms embargo against Iraq to protest the invasion.

A Security Council resolution adopted Thursday condemned the intervention and called for an immediate and unconditional withdrawal of Iraqi forces.

While President Bush blasted Iraqi leaders as "international outlaws and renegades," accusing Baghdad of lying about its announced start of a withdrawal, war clouds appeared to be gathering in Washington.

U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney arrived Monday in the Western Saudi city of Jeddah for talks with King Fahd on the Iraqi invasion and the threat posed to oil-rich Saudi Arabia.

President Bush, who has warned Iraq against moving troops into Saudi Arabia, proposed that Ankara shut off Iraqi oil pipelines running through Turkish territory to the Mediterranean. Saudi Arabia also has an Iraqi pipeline that reaches terminals on the Red Sea.

The president has meanwhile instructed U.S. government agencies to study covert action to destabilize Iraqi President Saddam Hussein and stop him turning his country into an "Arab superpower", the Washington Post reported.

The paper, which cited informed sources, said Mr. Bush had given the order after discussing events in the Gulf with William Webster, director of the Central Intelligence Agency.

On the economic front, with Japan having joined the United States and the European Economic Community in an embargo of Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil, North Sea Brent oil soared by more than 8.5 per cent to 26 dollars per barrel on Monday.

Brent oil closed Friday at 23.95 dollars. The rise was the highest since January 1986.

NEW YORK (AUG. 6) - The United States and Vietnam opened talks here Monday aimed at speeding up a settlement of Cambodia's civil war.

A three-member U.S. delegation led by Deputy Assistant Secretary of State for East Asian and Pacific Affairs Kenneth Quinn sat down with a four-member Vietnamese team headed by Hanoi's chief United Nations representative, Trinh Xuan Lang, at the Vietnamese U.N. mission.

The talks, which are being held at Washington's request, are part of a revised U.S. policy on Cambodia announced by Secretary of State James Baker in Paris July 18.

Under the new policy, aimed at preventing a return to power by the communist Khmer Rouge, Washington withdrew its diplomatic support for the Khmer Rouge-dominated Cambodian resistance at the United Nations. The United States also said it was considering establishing direct contacts with the Hanoi-backed Government in Phnom Penh.

A State Department official Monday said the "get-acquainted" session would be "the first of what we hope will be many talks" on Cambodia.

Mr. Baker said last month that Vietnam's cooperation on Cambodia could lead to a full-scale normalization of relations between Hanoi and Washington, including a lifting of the 15-year-old U.S. trade embargo against Vietnam.

Vietnamese officials have expressed readiness to help bring about free and fair elections in Cambodia. But they have served notice they will not agree to pressure their Cambodian ally into accepting formation of a proposed Supreme National Council.

Formation of the council, which would bring together representatives of the four Cambodian parties -- the Phnom Penh Government, the Khmer Rouge and the two U.S.-backed non-communist factions of the tripartite Cambodian resistance -- has emerged as a key element of a future settlement along with creation of a U.N. interim authority.

The council and the U.N. authority would jointly lead Cambodia to internationally-supervised elections.

The growing military strength of the Chinese-backed Khmer Rouge, who are blamed for the deaths of hundreds of thousands of Cambodians during their rule from 1975 to January 1979 when they were ousted by Hanoi's troops, has triggered alarm in both Washington and Hanoi.

TEHERAN (AUG. 6) - Iran is opposed to any conditions set by Britain for the restoration of full diplomatic relations between the two countries, a senior foreign ministry official said here Monday.

"Iran will not accept any conditions leading to the resumption of political relations with Britain," said Hussein Moussavian, director general of European and American affairs at the foreign ministry.

He also stressed that any renewal of links between the two countries should be based on principles of "mutual respect, non-interference in the internal affairs of other countries and respect for (religious) beliefs and international regulations."

Iran's Supreme National Council said Saturday it favoured the renewal of ties after recent remarks by British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd.

The British Government noted the Iranian national council's statement with "interest" but also called on Teheran to make "a substantive gesture of goodwill."

A leading Iranian newspaper, Jomhoori Islami, said in a commentary Monday that Britain must take the next step to improve its ties with Teheran.

"The Islamic Republic of Iran, acting with great indulgence, has considered Hurd's statements enough to meet Teheran's term for resumption of diplomatic ties," said Jomhoori Islami, a paper close to anti-Western Islamic hardliners.

"Thus, it is now London's turn to show goodwill and release the Iranian student Mehrdad Kokabi from a British jail," the daily said.

It also stressed that the Iranian death decree against the Moslem-born British author Salman Rushdie would remain valid after any restoration of ties with Britain.

"As a sign of goodwill, (London) must stop protecting him and expel him or hand him over to Moslems," Jomhoori Islami added, describing Britain as a "lion with no mane, tail or belly."

Last week Mr. Hurd said Britain never intended to insult Islam and had nothing to do with publishing "The Satanic Verses," the novel by Mr. Rushdie denounced by many Moslems as blasphemous to Islam.

Iran and Britain severed ties in March 1989, one month after the late spiritual guide, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, issued a death sentence against Mr. Rushdie.

BRUSSELSHAMBURG (AUG. 6) - The European Community Commission, acting on orders by E.C. foreign ministers over the weekend, Monday began preparations to stop oil imports from Iraq and Kuwait, but some experts raised doubts about how an embargo could be enforced.

The E.C. Commission's plans for cutting off the oil imports were to be discussed by the member countries' ambassadors either Tuesday or Wednesday a Commission spokesman said.

He stressed that the oil cutoff should provide no cause for panic on the market, saying that the Community had sufficient reserves at the moment and that it being summertime, consumption was low.

Last year the E.C. imported 30.2 million tonnes of oil from Iraq, more than one-fifth of the Iraqis' output of 138 million tonnes.

Meanwhile the Dutch foreign ministry said that starting mid-week, the port of Rotterdam would be blocked to tankers carrying Kuwaiti or Iraqi petroleum.

But there were some doubts about whether an embargo could be completely enforced, some industry experts noting that an oil embargo imposed against South Africa in 1977 has been circumvented.

An oil importer in Hamburg, West Germany, remarked that ''if the Iraqis push their price down, there will always be somebody in Europe ready to push a bargain''.

Market analysts said a complete international embargo on Iraqi oil would cost Baghdad 83.2 million dollars a day in lost revenues.

In a related development, the 21-nation International Energy Agency in Paris is to meet on Thursday to review oil market developments in the wake of the Gulf crisis.

An Iea spokesman said the organisation had no plans at the moment to invoke emergency procedures for distributing oil when supplies fall seven per cent short of the member countries' needs.

''We are going to examine all option,'' the Iea spokesman said, among them a review of how strategic oil reserves could be tapped.

BANJUL (AUG. 6) - Liberia had become "the country of massacres" and its neighbours should take urgent steps to end the seven-month civil war there, Gambian President Dawda Jawara said here Monday as he opened a regional mini-summit on the continuing combat.

Sir Dawda, current chairman of the 16-nation Economic Community of West African States (ECOWAS), said it could no longer tolerate the situation in Liberia. He told his fellow heads of state from Nigeria, Ghana, Guinea and Sierra Leone, and representatives from Mali and Togo, that ECOWAS and the wider international community had been mistaken in thinking when the Liberian crisis broke out late in December that it was a purely internal affair which Liberians could settle themselves.

When rebels seeking to overthrow President Samuel Doe held abortive peace talks in Sierra Leone last month, ECOWAS proposed a ceasefire and the stationing of a peace maintenance force, Sir Dawda said. A government would be set up next to prepare for free elections.

The rebel National Patriotic Front of Liberia headed by former civil servant Charles Taylor has stated its opposition to any intervention force though on Sunday it agreed to an operation by U.S. marines to evacuate American nationals.

Senior rebel spokesman Thomas Woewiyu was due at the summit, but there was no sign of him or any other rebel delegates as the meeting got underway. There were no representatives from Mr. Doe either.

CAIRO (AUG. 6) - The chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organisation (Plo), Yassir Arafat, Monday ended talks with Egyptian President Hosny Mubarak on the Gulf crisis and continued to the Saudi Arabian city of Jeddah.

The Egyptian news agency Mena said without elaborating that the two leaders discussed in Alexandria ''the latest developments in the situation in the Gulf region in light of the Iraqi invasion of the state of Kuwait and ways to find a peaceful solution for the issue within the Arab framework''.

Mubarak's advisor, Osama al-Baz, said the Egyptian head of state would continue his contacts with Arab leaders.

Press reports said Mubarak was frustrated because Iraqi President Saddam Hussein promised him shortly before Iraqi troops invaded Kuwait that Baghdad would solve difference with Kuwait politically.

Mubarak's feels he was used by Saddam to calm the world, thus allowing the Iraqis to prepare the surprise invasion of Kuwait, the French daily Le Monde wrote.

Meanwhile, the Kuwaiti embassy in Cairo issued a communique in which it appealed to world relief organisations to help Kuwait's population under Iraqi occupation.

Mena quoted the statement as saying that Iraqi soldiers had plundered ships, banks and shops. Iraqis also stole private Kuwaiti cars. These measures aimed at replacing Kuwaitis with Iraqi nationals, the communique read.

DHAKA (AUG. 6) - Striking Bangladesh doctors on Monday rejected government calls for talks and turned down a presidential appeal to end their campaign and negotiate, Bangladesh Medical Association (BMA) sources said.

The BMA has repeatedly refused to enter into talks unless a new health policy it opposes is scrapped.

President Hussain Mohammad Ershad urged the doctors Sunday to call off their strike, saying parliament had only approved a resolution on the proposed health care plan, which had yet to become law.

"We want to hold discussions with you about formulating a new health policy," the president said.

A BMA spokesman dismised the offer as a "gimmick".

The BMA, which represents more than 10,000 doctors, turned down a similar offer Thursday from Health and Family Welfare Minister Azizur Rahman.

The BMA said it would be willing to negotiate only with the vice president or prime minister if "formally" invited.

Newspapers reported that hundreds of people were suffering because of the strike.

Twenty-six patients reportedly died overnight in several hospitals, bringing to 76 the death toll since the strike began July 28.

The BMA again refused to comment on the deaths, which officials said occurred because doctors were either unavailable or unwilling to give treatment.

A BMA executive committee member, M. Iqbal Arseline, said the doctors would continue striking and go ahead with a planned mass resignation on August 15, when the stoppage is scheduled to end.

Doctors insist the new health policy is a conspiracy to privatize the health sector, and say that in its current form the policy cannot fulfill its target of serving the masses.

Official sources said the health ministry was preparing papers to declare the health services "essential," enabling them to take legal action against government doctors who ignored the order.

Official sources, based here in the state's winter capital, said security forces were armed with orders to shoot curfew-violators on sight.

TOKYO (AUG. 6) - The assets of ten of Japan's largest corporations increased sharply during the last fiscal year, according to a study released Monday by the Japan Economic Journal.

Total assets of the top ten Japanese firms, excluding banks, brokerage houses, and insurance companies, rose to 83.2 trillion yen (555 billion dollars) representing an average yearly growth of 45 percent.

The gains in assets, including real estate, machinery, securities, and liquid assets, were attributed to attempts by the firms to diversify and to a rash of mergers and acquisitions, especially abroad, said the study. The study also pointed to those companies, such as automobile manufacturers, that had set up massive operations outside Japan.

Mitsubishi Corporation topped the list, with assets valued at 11.7 trillion yen (78 billion dollars), representing a 55 percent rise in the fiscal year ending March 31.

Telecommunications giant Nippon Telegraph and Telephone came second with assets of 11.4 trillion yen (76 billion dollars), followed by Mitsui and Co. with 9.6 trillion yen (64 billion dollars), Marubeni Corp. with 8.7 trillion yen (58 billion dollars) and Matsushita Electric with 7.8 trillion yen (52 billion dollars).

From sixth to tenth place came the electronics group Hitachi, trading house C. Itoh and Co., automobile manufacturers Toyota and Nissan, and consumer credit company Nippon Shipan.

Sony's assets grew 134 percent, putting them into 15th position, thanks mainly to purchase of Columbia Pictures Entertainment Inc. for 3.6 billion dollars.

BANGKOK, (AUG. 6) - Thai Premier Chatichai Choonhavan said here Monday his government would target average growth of nine per cent a year over the next half decade.

Mr. Chatichai, announcing the guidelines of the country's Seventh National Economic and Social Development Plan (1991-1995) to an extraordinary cabinet session, said that during the next five years, inflation would be trimmed to an average of 5.5 per cent.

But he said his administration would seek to hold growth of gross domestic product (GDP) at nine per cent, from the current estimated nine to 11 per cent.

Mr. Chatichai said his adminstration would seek to limit the trade deficit to seven per cent of GDP, and would balance the current account by the end of the Seventh Plan.

Per-capita income is expected to increase from 32,400 baht (1,296 dollars) in 1989 to 75,000 baht (3,000 dollars) by 1995, he said.

He also stressed the need to assist poor and landless farmers by giving them more opportunities to own land. He said the government would seek to boost the income of small farmers and low-income urban workers.

FRANKFURT (AUG. 6) - Frankfurt stocks plunged on Monday, as the DAX spot trend indicator plummeted by 100.01 points on Gulf and oil news to hit 1,740.93, its low point for the year, representing a drop of 5.4 per cent.

The Commerzbank indicator shed 109 points to finish at 2,152.5.

Operators said that there was no panic selling generally, and a few investors were ready to pick up some stocks on the cheap.

Auto stocks were hit particularly hard, BMW dropping 35 to close at 512, Volkswagen 35.20 to 538, Mercedes 44 to 617, and Daimler-Benz 63 to 771.50.

Capital goods were also marked sharply lower, KHD giving up 32 and Linde

45. In energy, Veba was down 30.50 and Preussag 31.

Mannesmann was hardest hit in the steel sector, off 22.80 to finish at 301.50.

Banks were all losers, Commerzbank falling 16.90 to 275, Dresdner Bank 26 to 407.50, and Deutsche 43 to 755.

The bond market was depressed by the Iraqi-Kuwait conflict and a fear of higher interest rates and taxes in connection with new East German requests for funds. The average yield on government issues zoomed Monday to 8.92 per cent, against 8.80 on Friday.

EAST BERLIN (AUG. 6) - The East German government of Premier Lothar de Maiziere teetered on the brink of collapse Monday amid controversy over plans for an early general election in both Germanys leading to speedy unification.

The Social Democratic Party (Spd) warned it may leave the three-party coalition headed by de Maiziere's Christian Democratic Union (Cdu). Two weeks ago, the Liberals quit the coalition in a row over a new election law.

The Spd and the right-wing German Social Union (Dsu), which is also in the government, said they would present separate bills for rapid unification with West Germany at Wednesday's session of parliament.

Both bills envisage the former communist East Germany becoming part of West Germany the day a unification accord is signed by East Berlin and Bonn.

The move is aimed at halting the deterioration of the economic situation in East Germany, where the number of unemployed is rising drastically and companies are collapsing owing to the switch from socialism to a free market economy.

De Maiziere's Cdu and his West German ally, Chancelor Helmut Kohl, want unification coupled with early elections on October 14. Originally, general elections in both Germanys were scheduled on December 2.

The East German Cdu is expected to ask parliament on Wednesday to pass a resolution asking its West German equivalent to amend the constitution in order to allow early elections. The Cdu is the largest party in the East German legislature, the Volkskammer.

KINSHASA (AUG. 6) - Zaire's former foreign minister Nguza Karl-I-Bond said Monday he had merged his Independent Republican Party with the National Federation of Convinced Democrats following a tour of his home province Shaba (formerly Katanga) last week.

He said the new grouping would be "a very serious adversary" to President Mobutu Sese Seko's former monopoly party the People's Revolutionary Movement, which last week substituted 'renewal' for 'revolutionary' in its title.

Marshal Mobutu said in April political pluralism would be allowed, with primary elections due early next year to select three major parties from among the nearly 60 movements that have sprung up since his decision.

Marshal Mobutu has said he would himself be above the party fray, acting as a "referee" in the new system.

A split has meanwhile appeared in the MPR, with a close Mobutu aide, Prof. Vunduawe, claiming the newly renamed version is illegal and that only his renewal wing was the true guarantor of the old single party.

Another one-time government minister, Mungul Diaka, said he had formed a party to give representation to intellectuals, who had lacked a voice previously.

Mr. Karl-I-Bond meanwhile said that during his stay in the provincial capital Lubumbashi he had received a lot of evidence confirming that university students there were killed in May in an attack on the campus. He repeated his earlier call for an international inquiry into what he said was clearly a violation of human rights.

Amnesty International and Belgian and Zambian press reports have spoken of between 50 to 150 deaths when local security forces raided the campus, and a panel of Zairean MPs reported there had been a massacre without being able to give a toll. The government account is that one student was killed and a dozen injured.

He said although Eastern and Western block countries have settled their differences, the United States still depended on the seas for communication.

JERUSALEM (AUG. 6) - Palestinians in the Israeli-occupied territories are euphoric over the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait, with Iraqi President Saddam Hussein hailed in some quarters as a new liberator for the Arab world.

"Today, Saddam has invaded Kuwait," gushed 18-year-old Moustapha A., a dishwasher in the West Bank community of Azaria. "Tomorrow he will free all of Palestine."

While much of the international community, including the Arab League and the Organization of the Islamic Conference, has condemned Iraq's military operation last Thursday, Mr. Hussein appears each day on the front pages of Palestinian newspapers, a towering figure wearing a medal-bedecked uniform.

"Saddam Hussein is a great patriot who wants the best for the entire Arab nation," declared Adli Aref, a carpenter from east Jerusalem.

"But he must now strengthen his position by invading all the Gulf states before he attacks Israel and solves the Palestinian question."

For Mr. Aref, "The Kuwaitis betrayed the trust of other Arab peoples in stealing oil from Iraq and getting rich on the backs of its population. Saddam was right."

Maher, a young taxi driver from Hebron on the West Bank who once worked in Kuwait, makes no effort to hide his admiration for President Hussein.

"He's the only Arab leader who has the courage to do what he says he will do. The Kuwaitis hate the Palestinians."

In east Jerusalem a moneychanger said he was "disgusted" by the avalanche of international condemnation aimed at Iraq.

"Palestinians in the occupied territories have endured 23 years of Israeli occupation -- but no one condemns or boycotts Israel."

The possibility that President Hussein could make good on a recent threat and attack Israel with chemical weapons, which would cause heavy Arab casualties, does not disturb many residents of the occupied territories.

"If that is our fate, we would prefer to die under Iraqi gas than under Israeli bullets," asserted Umm Ahmad Abu Zina. "It would be no worse than what we are living under now."

Palestinian leaders and dignitaries strike a more measured tone, despite the fact that the Palestine Liberation Organization last week opposed an Arab League resolution condemning the Iraqi invasion.

"We are opposed to any form of occupation and we want to see the parties settle the conflict by diplomatic and peaceful means," according to Ghassan

Hatib, a professor at Bir Zeit University on the West Bank.

For Ramadan Abu Ayash, head of the Association of Arab Journalists from the occupied territories, "this confrontation must end, since the real conflict is the one between Israel and the Palestinians."

Another professor, Sa'eb Erakat of Al-Najah University, said "Palestinians are pleased that Saddam Hussein has been able to shake up the Arab world."

PRETORIA (AUG. 6) - The architects of a new South Africa, 10 government and African National Congress (ANC) leaders, were locked in historic talks late Monday to clear the way for negotiations on enfranchising the black majority.

President Frederik de Klerk sat directly opposite ANC Deputy President Nelson Mandela in Die Oud Presidensie (The Old Presidency) here, the house Sir Herbert Baker designed for the former British Governors-General.

Both sides were optimistic of an agreement that could set up real talks on a post-apartheid South Africa.

But even as they talked one of the main stumbling blocks, politically-motivated violence, made itself painfully felt.

Kagiso black township near Krugersdorp, west of Johannesburg, sank into an orgy of killing as Zulus from Chief Mangosuthu Buthelezi's Inkatha party clashed with ANC supporters.

Commercial radio reports said 10 people had been killed since Sunday, when armed Inkatha supporters returning from a rally in Johannesburg's black township Soweto reportedly tried to turn Xhosa-speakers away from the migrant workers' hostels they share.

Four people were killed in the hostels Sunday night, according to police, who found the mutilated corpses on wasteground near the hostels Monday.

ROTTERDAM, Netherlands (AUG. 6) - Prices of crude oil and oil products on the Rotterdam spot market dropped late Monday afternoon, a market trader told AFP.

Super gasoline (petrol) was at 315 dollars a tonne at the end of the afternoon, compared with 295 dollars at the Friday close.

PARIS (AUG. 6) - The Paris Bourse, like other stock markets, plunged on Monday following an embargo on Iraqi oil imposed by Western powers, as the CAC-40 stock price index finished at 1,773.79, off 5.12 per cent.

Dealers said trading was active.

The Bourse opened with a 2.30 per cent drop of the CAC-40, and was down by more than seven per cent at one point, before recovering a bit of the lost ground.

The index has now lost 10.87 per cent in two weeks, and 11.36 per cent since the start of the year. The Monday loss was the biggest since a 10 per cent one-day plunge last fall in connection with junk bond problems.

Some leading issues depressed the general market, including LVMH (luxury goods), which accounts for 6.48 per cent of the CAC-40 index and plunged by 6.48 per cent on Monday.

Analysts said the markets particularly fear revived inflation at a time when the U.S. economy is giving numerous signs of weakness. They point to likely U.S. stagflation (low level of economic activity combined with high inflation) if oil prices remain at 25 dollars a barrel for some time. Hence the hope of lower interest rates has flown the coop.

Analysts noted Monday evening that the CAC-40 has broken down through a series of resistance levels, and they do not see anything on the horizon at present to stop the downtrend.

The drops Monday included 1.5 per cent for Matra, 1.3 per cent for Saint Louis, 10.2 per cent for Bouygues, and 14.5 per cent for SEB.

NEW DELHI (AUG. 6) - India's ruling party hit out Monday at the dismissal of Pakistan's Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto, calling her abrupt sacking "anti-democratic," as New Delhi said it was closely watching the situation.

"The dismissal of Benazir Bhutto is a definite setback to the nascent democratic movement in Pakistan," said the Janata Dal (People's Party), the largest constituent of the ruling National Front alliance.

"Although India's relations with Pakistan did not improve under Ms. Bhutto, we are outraged by the anti-democratic character of her dismissal," party general secretary S. Jaipal Reddy said.

He said it was too early to comment on the possible impact the development would have on the often-stormy relations between India and Pakistan.

Relations between the two neighbours have deteriorated in recent months over a violent Moslem secessionist campaign on the Indian side of Kashmir which New Delhi alleges is backed by Pakistan.

India and Pakistan have fought three wars since independence from British rule in 1947, two of them over Kashmir.

Ms. Bhutto's dismissal was announced just three days before foreign secretaries of the two countries were due to meet here for a second round of talks on Kashmir.

The government of Prime Minister Vishwanath Pratap Singh reserved comment on the dismissal, but said it was keeping a close watch on developments in Pakistan.

A senior official in the prime minister's office said New Delhi was constantly monitoring the situation following Ms. Bhutto's sacking, and would have a substantive reaction later.

The dismissal was also condemned by the Communist Party of India-Marxist (CPI-M) and the right-wing Bharatiya Janata Party (Indian People's Party), both allies of the V.P. Singh government.

"This is not a positive development," senior CPI-M leader Harkishan Singh Surjeet said. "A democratic government being dismissed like this is retrograde," he added.

Former foreign minister Atal Behari Vajpayee of the BJP said it had led to an "unhappy situation," but did not elaborate.

India had effusively hailed Ms. Bhutto's rise to power in late 1988 as a triumph for democracy, seeing in her a hope for better relations.

But the hope did not materialise as traditional mistrust persisted between the two countries, and relations finally hit rock-bottom this year over Kashmir.

Belligerent statements from both capitals and reports of troop buildups whipped up war clouds in April which were later defused by diplomatic gestures. But tensions have persisted.

Former Indian foreign secretary S.K. Singh told the Press Trust of India that Ms. Bhutto "tried to make too many compromises with too many disparate elements and had fallen between many stools."

He said she had travelled rapidly from a "symbol of youthful hope to a promoter of religious passion."

Retired air commodore Jasjit Singh, director of the Institute for Defence Studies and Analyses here, said Ms. Bhutto's sacking had reconfirmed the "fundamental instability of Pakistan's political system."

He said the next elections would be the "greatest test" for Pakistan's fledgeling democratic movement.

Airport officials said three of the rockets exploded outside Kabul international airport. There was no damage to the terminal building or any aircraft.

MOSCOW (AUG. 6) - The United States and the Soviet Union must join forces to deal with Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and other regional conflicts, a Soviet Foreign ministry spokesman said here Monday.

Echoing the views of U.S. President George Bush earlier that Iraq's action had threatened the United States, Yuri Gremitskikh told reporters at a press briefing that it "threatens world security in general."

Hence the superpowers needed to follow their joint declaration condemning the conflict, made August 3, with "future cooperation" to deter "increasing military confrontation in the world's explosive regions", he said.

NAIROBI (AUG. 6) - Leaders and ministers of seven West African nations opened a conference in the Gambian capital Banjul Monday to discuss setting up a peace force to end the civil war in Liberia between two rival rebel leaders and President Samuel Doe.

''Given the loss of life, property and the refugee problem in Liberia, we can no longer afford to let the situation deteriorate further,'' Gambian President Dawda Jawara told the standing mediation committee on Liberia. The committee was set up by the 16-nation Economic Community of West African States (Ecowas).

Ghana, the Gambia, Mali, Nigeria and Togo are members of the committee, but ministers from Sierra Leone and Guinea were also attending because they were host to tens of thousands of Liberian refugees.

Salim Ahmed Salim, Secretary-General of the Organistion for African Unity (Oau), said prior to his departure to Banjul he hoped for a ''humanitarian solution'' of the eight-month-old dispute.

More than 300,000 Liberians have fled the country to seek refuge in neighbouring countries, he said.

The meeting came a day after U.S. marines began supervising the evacuation of the first of nearly 400 Americans from the Liberian capital Monrovia.

Nigeria announced last week that it was mobilizing a joint army, naval and airborne force with three other countries, including Ghana, to secure a ceasefire and rescue foreigners.

FENDELL UNIVERSITY, Liberia (AUG. 6) - Tens of thousands of supporters of the rebel forces of Charles Taylor demonstrated here Monday against any intervention by West African states in the Liberian civil war.

The bulk of the protestors, who chanted "no Taylor no government", were from the 184,000 refugees sheltering at this university campus outside the capital, a correspondent reported.

Rebel leader Mr. Taylor also called demonstrations at Buchanan, the country's second port, Kakata, and Gbarnga, in the interior, as the Economic Community of West Africa (ECOWAS) gathered in the Gambia to consider intervening.

The initiative could take the form of an evacuation of non-Liberians caught up in the bloodshed or a bid to establish a ceasefire between two armed forces trying to topple President Samuel Doe.

(Marines landed in Monrovia on Sunday to evacuate U.S. citizens, a move to which Mr. Taylor said he had agreed.)

"Doe must go," shouted men, women and children as they marched on a five kilometre (three mile) circuit around the campus.

Placards warned "Liberia will be the graveyard of foreign aggressors," echoing the words of Mr. Taylor who says his National Patriotic Front (NPFL)' fighters will resist any intervention to the last man.

The demonstrators interspersed their anti-Doe chants with religious songs of hope such as "we shall overcome", waved on by people living in tin shacks along the roadside.

The marchers, occasionally breaking into a jog, crossed on the main road with scores more refugees, many of whom raised their fist in support as they headed away from the fighting in Monrovia.

But not all the refugees at Fendell took part. "Some are hungry, some are tired," explained pastor Eddie Gibson.

"No, no it's not a forced rally," he said.

"People support the NPFL. The NPFL is getting rice to our people. Only the NPFL is protecting our people," he added. "The only thing the Doe people understand is the barrel of the gun."

A senior security guard on the campus, Rufus Parwon, accused those who did not join the demonstration of backing the tottering Doe regime.

"They are all Doe supporters," he said. "We give them food, everything. But they just sit here."

"But we don't force people. We make them understand ... If they are hungry they come to us and we give them food. But we expected them to join the march."

BANJUL (AUG. 6) - The leaders of five West African countries concerned with the fighting in Liberia met here on Monday and were heading toward a decision to declare a cease-fire, send in a peacekeeping force, create a provisional government and set up free elections, sources said.

The meeting of the leaders of Nigeria, Ghana, the Gambia, Guinea and Sierra Leone, along with envoys of Togo and Mali, held a closed-door meeting Monday that was to be followed by a meeting of the military chiefs of staffs of these countries.

The meeting is being hosted by the Gambian leader Dawda Jawara, who is the current president of the 16-nation Economic Ciomunity of West African States (ECOWAS), whose secretary general is also attending, as is the secretary general of the Organization of African Unity.

Regional leaders met in June in Freetown, Sierra Leone but decided to postpone sending in a peace-keeping force until an agreement could be reached between the embattled President Samuel Doe, and the two rebel factions fighting to oust him.

On Sunday, Charles Taylor, the leader of the larger of the two rebel armies, declared that his troops would shoot to kill any foreign troops who tried to interfere in his seven-month-old effort to end the 10-year-old regime of Mr. Doe.

The summit was expected to end Tuesday morning. Officials said the U.S. rescue of its citizens had helped create a mood that the West African neighbors of Liberia should go into action now end end efforts to conciliate the warring factions. The officials said any provisional government would have to exclude the leaders of all three warring armies--Mr. Doe, Mr. Taylor or Prince Johnson, leader of the smaller of the two rebel factions.

ANKARA (AUG. 6) - Turkey, whose strategic importance has slipped away since the end of the Cold War, is on the spot again with pressure to close two pipelines here vital to Baghdad following Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Ankara was not expected to make any decision until after the United Nations Security Council vote later Monday on whether to impose economic sanctions against Iraq.

But a surprise announcement by the Anatolia News Agency on Monday said Iraq itself would close one of the two pipelines on Monday evening, and reduce the other line's capacity by 70 percent.

Anatolia gave no source for the information. But the move appeared aimed at heading off U.S. pressure on Turkey to shut the lines to get Baghdad to agree to a troop withdrawal.

As a member of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, Turkey was seen in the days of sharp tension with Moscow as the key guardian of NATO's southern flank.

The country geographically bridges Asia and Europe but has long made clear its desire to be seen as an integral part of Europe.

Since the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait on Thursday, pressure has mounted to back the West's call for sanctions against Baghdad by stopping the Iraqi oil passing through Turkey.

But Iraq warned on Sunday that any such move would adversely affect their bilateral relations.

This has left Ankara with the decision of irritating Iraq, its powerful neighbor to the southeast, or irritating the West, in particular the Europe it has aimed so hard at joining.

Kaya Toperi, spokesman for President Turgut Ozal, said the new attention "is not a sign of the growing significance of Turkey but proof of its importance".

Turkey is the "sole element of stability in the region", he said.

U.S. President George Bush had three telephone calls with Mr. Ozal on Sunday alone, attesting to Turkey's new -- or resumed -- geo-strategic importance.

But the likelihood of whether it would go so far as to allow the U.S. Army to use NATO bases in eastern Turkey was uncertain.

ZURICH (AUG. 6) - Zurich stocks plunged on Monday, as the Swiss Performance Index opened with a loss of 30 and finished 70.7 points lower at 1,072.8 (off 6.16 percent).

The Credit Suisse indicator finished at 601.6 against 638.3 at the Friday close, and the Swiss Bank Corp. index finished at 612.8 against 649.6.

In the industrial sector, Bobst gave up 14.47 percent, while Schindler was off 12 percent and Von Roll 10.39.

In banks, Banque Vaduz bearer stock lost 14.73 percent, and Banque Populaire Suisse 12.73.

BOGOTA (AUG 6) EFE - Cesar Gaviria, who at the age of 43 is to become Colombia's youngest head of state in nearly a century on Tuesday, took up the mantle of presidential candidate in the aftermath of the slaying by cocaine gangs of the ruling Liberal Party's first hopeful, Luis Carlos Galan.

Gaviria entered the presidential race soon after Galan's teenage son made an emotional plea at his father's funeral almost a year ago for him to carry on his father's legacy.

The presidential race was to see two other candidates gunned down, and Gaviria declared upon winning the May 27 elections "The future starts now."

But almost a year after Galan's death, his alleged killers -- gunmen in the pay of the country's powerful cocaine cartels -- remain one of the most serious challenges to the next president.

President Virgilio Barco declared all-out war on the drug traffickers in response to Galan's slaying, and the billionaire drug lords retaliated with a counter-offensive of bombings and selective assassinations which have left hundreds dead.

Gaviria has promised to continue with his predecesor's tough stance against the traffickers, including extradition to the United States, who last week declared a temporary unilateral truce in their year-long offensive.

The president-elect, who is married and has two children, began his political career in the Los Andes University in Bogota, where he gave up a degree in nuclear engineering and signed up for economics classes, mixing studies with his first public offices.

Gaviria's family roots his interest in politics to years spent in the United States as a teenager, where he attended high school in the early 1960s and was influenced by the idealism of President John F. Kennedy.

On his return to Colombia, Gaviria at 22 became head of planning in Pereira, his hometown 300 km west of Bogota.

At the same time, Gaviria won a seat on Pereira's town council, a position he alternated with the post of assistant to the national planning chief in Bogota.

Gaviria has also held a seat in the House of Representatives of the department of Risarala on and off since 1974, serving as president of the House and a member of various committees.

Between 1978 and 1980, during the administration of President Julio Cesar Turbay Ayala, Gaviria was appointed deputy minister of economic development.

Gaviria also boasts some experience in journalism. In 1982 he directed Pereira's La Tarde newspaper and was a columnist on economic issues for the capital's El Tiempo until 1986.

In 1985, Virgilio Barco called on Gaviria to direct his presidential campaign and a year later, he was named the co-director of the Liberal party at 39.

Once Barco took power, he named Gaviria as treasury minister, between 1986 and 1987, and then interior minister from 1987 to early 1989.

In his last post, Gaviria was the principal advocate of an official peace initiative which led to the disarmament of the M-19 guerrilla group and its transformation into a legitimate political party.

The new president also faces five other active leftist rebel groups, and Gaviria has said he favors continuing with Barco's open-ended offer of peace talks.

Last week, Interior Minister Horacio Serpa Uribe announced that Gaviria would go along with agreements reached to begin direct demobilization talks with right-wing paramilitary groups suspected of killing thousands of leftist peasants.

Spain (Aug 6). At least 30 hotels on Spain's Costa del Sol will go out of business at the end of the summer because of a drop in the number of tourists, a tourism industry official said Monday.

Antonio Maldonado, president of the Costa del Sol tourism association, said most of the hotels that will close are three-star hotels which will not qualify for government bailouts.

He blamed the decline in tourism on the depreciation of the pound sterling and the bankruptcy of some charter airlines which served Spain's southern Mediterranean coast.

Hotel bookings in Spain dropped by seven per cent in the first seven months of 1990 compared with the same period last year, according to the Spanish Hotel Federation.

BOGOTA (AUG. 6) EFE - An unprecedented security operation was underway in the Colombian capital Monday, 24 hours before President-elect Cesar Gaviria was to be inaugurated in front of four presidents and seven vice-presidents, including U.S. number two Dan Quayle.

To test the effectiveness of the security measures, two look-alikes of Gaviria and his wife, Ana Milena Munoz, Monday ran through the swearing-in ceremony on a specially constructed bomb- and bullet-proof stage outside the Congress building.

During the actual inauguration Tuesday military helicopters will constantly circle over the proceedings, which will be broadcast to television audiences in 20 countries via satellite.

All streets around the presidential palace in Bogota have already been sealed off, and security operation chief, Cmdr. Ramon Niebles Uscategui, Monday inspected all the hotels that are to house 80 visiting foreign dignitaries.

All Army units in central Colombia have been put on alert and a crack contingent of 200 security agents will accompany the guests from their hotels to the site of the inauguration.

An ambulance will also follow the VIPs along the route.

Gaviria, 43, has good reason to fear an assassination attempt since it was the murder by Colombia's ruthless Medellin cocaine cartel of Liberal Party presidential hopeful Luis Carlos Galan last August that allowed him to become a candidate.

Two other candidates were gunned down during the race for the presidency, which Gaviria won on May 27.

The four presidents attending the swearing-in ceremony are Argentina's Carlos Menem, Ecuador's Rodrigo Borja, Peru's Alberto Fujimori and Carlos Andres Perez of Venezuela.

QUITO (AUG. 6) EFE - Nine people were killed and seven injured Sunday when an Army helicopter burst into flames during an emergency landing in the Amazon jungle, Army officials said.

An engine fault forced the Army pilot to attempt the landing on a helicopter pad near Curaray in Pastaza province, 240 km east of Quito.

Five civilians and four Army pilots were killed in the chopper which had been hired out to an oil company.

BUENOS AIRES (AUG. 7) EFE - Prices in Argentina rose 804.2 percent during the first seven months of the year, the National Statistics and Census Institute (INDEC) revealed Monday.

The INDEC report also showed that the cost of living in Argentina for the month of July rose 10.8 percent, in spite of government hopes for a single digit figure.

After eight months of a drastic economic adjustment plan, the government of President Carlos Menem "is still optimistic" for a drop in inflation for the rest of the year, Planning Minister Moises Ikonicoff said.

The austerity and privatization program introduced by Menem has been rejected by trade unions and the opposition, who are demanding salary hikes and resisting the mass lay-offs designed to increase effeciency in state industries.

BEIRUT (AUG. 6) XINHUA - FIGHTING BETWEEN LEBANON'S SYRIAN-BACKED AMAL MOVEMENT AND THE PRO-IRANIAN HEZBOLLAH RENEWED EARLY TODAY IN SOUTH LEBANON, BREAKING A CEASEFIRE ARRANGED A WEEK AGO FOR THE EVACUATION OF THE DEAD AND THE WOUNDED.

SPORADIC CLASHES TOOK PLACE BETWEEN POSITIONS OF THE TWO RIVAL SHIITE MOSLEM MILITIAS IN THE IQLIM AL-TUFFAH DISTRICT, SOUTHEAST OF THE SOUTHERN PORT OF SIDON, IN WHICH MACHINEGUNS AND ROCKETS WERE USED, REPORTS FROM SOUTH LEBANON SAID.

THE "SAWT AL-SHAAB" RADIO STATION OF THE LEBANESE COMMUNIST PARTY QUOTED HEZBOLLAH SOURCES AS SAYING THAT POSITIONS OF THE PRO-IRANIAN MILITIA HAD COME UNDER INTERMITTENT SHELLING BY AMAL SINCE 6:00 A.M. LOCAL TIME TODAY.

THE INTERNATIONAL COMMITTEE OF THE RED CROSS AND THE LEBANESE RED CROSS ORGANIZATION HAVE SO FAR EVACUATED AS MANY AS 147 DECOMPOSED CORPSES FROM THE BATTLEFRONTS IN THE REGION DURING THE CEASEFIRE.

AT LEAST 189 PEOPLE HAVE BEEN KILLED AND 570 WOUNDED SINCE THE CURRENT ROUND OF FIGHTING BETWEEN THE TWO FACTIONS BROKE OUT ON JULY 16.

THE TWO SIDES HAVE BEEN FIGHTING ON AND OFF FOR THREE YEARS FOR CONTROL OF LEBANON'S 1.2 MILLION SHIITES.

THE LEBANESE GOVERNMENT HAS ANNOUNCED RECENTLY IT WOULD SEND A GOVERNMENT FORCE TO THE IQLIM AL-TUFFAH DISTRICT TO MAINTAIN SECURITY THERE ON CONDITION THAT A CEASEFIRE BETWEEN THE TWO WARRING PARTIES BE FOLLOWED BY THE WITHDRAWAL OF THEIR FIGHTERS.

OBSERVERS HERE BELIEVE THAT THE CONFRONTATION WOULD NOT COME TO AN END UNLESS SYRIA AND IRAN, WHICH HAVE CONSIDERABLE INFLUENCE ON THE TWO PARTIES, WERE DETERMINED TO QUENCH IT.

FALLS CHURCH, VA (AUG. 6) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

IN THE NEWS:

World stock markets off 3%-5% with the Nikkei closeing down 916.23, or better than 3%. That's equivalent to an 87-point decline in the Dow. ... The FT 100 is down more than 70 points, and the DAX index is off 78.52.

FORD says it will sell its FORD AEROSPACE subsidiary to LORAL for $715 million. ... SUN MICROSYSTEMS says it has agreed to sell about 4.6 million shares to AT&T for $191.8 million. ... The SENATE AGRICULTURE COMMITTEE approves the nomination of WENDY GRAMM for a second term as head of the COMMODITY FUTURES TRADING COMMISSION. ... The BANK OF NEW ENGLAND cut costs by $22 million in the second- quarter, but still managed to lose $33 million because of the slumping regional economy.

WHAT'S AHEAD:

The LABOR DEPARTMENT issues second-quarter productivity and labor cost figures later today. Other major economic reports due out this week: June consumer credit from the FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD and home sales and prices from the NATIONAL ASSOCIATION OF RELATORS tomorrow. Wednesday. ... July sales from leading retailers on Thursday. ... and producer prices from the LABOR DEPARTMENT on Friday.

FROM THE BULLS:

While acknowledging that a recession is on its way, JACK McCARTHY, manager of the $3.6 billion AFFILIATED FUND, thinks equities are headed higher. He thinks the current downturn is merely a correction and says bears are being too short-sighted. With weak economic growth, the Fed will ease rates, "and the stock market will go up," says McCarthy, who thinks falling employment levels will prevent excessive inflation. "We are not in a bear market," concludes McCarthy. (WSJ, 8/6)

"Most of the damage has been short term. As far as the long term trendline goes, that's still intact on the upside," says JANNEY MONTGOMERY

SCOTT's EUGENE PERONI JR. "We're still encouraged long- term, but cautious over the next few weeks to a month." Peroni says he was encouraged by the volume Thursday and Friday. "I think we'll have one more good whack on the downside, possibly today. But that should clear the way for some stability and a rebound." (FNN "World Business Update", 8/6)

FROM THE BEARS:

"Wall Street is likely to continue going lower this morning, due to the overseas losses, the uncertainties in the Middle East and the growing likelihood that the economy is heading into recession," says ROBERT WALBERG of MMS INTERNATIONAL. "These factors should combine to pressure stocks a little bit lower again today." He predicts the market will test the 2740 area, but he says the 2680 level may be more important. "If 2680 can hold, I think that would be an attractive area to step back in and buy stocks," advises Walberg. But if 2680 does not hold, he says the Dow could slip to 2400. (FNN "World Business Update", 8/6)

PAUL TUDOR JONES, a world futures trader, is even more bearish on U.S. stocks in the wake of upheaval in the Mideast and new signs of a slowing economy. He had seen a Dow support level at 2830, but says that was taken out last week. He now expects the Dow to drop as low as 2520 in the next six to eight weeks and says the bear market could continue six months or so. "That is typically how long into a recession one has to go before the market turns up," he says. "And I think that the latest jobs report is just another indicator that we've just entered a recession." ("Barron's", 8/6)

"You could be looking at a drop of 15% to 20% [cutting the Dow to 2250] over the next year," says GERALD PERRITT, editor of "Blue Chip Values." ("USA Today", 8/6)

"The mood is very bearish, very troubled. People are looking for direction and can't really find it," says ANDREW SMITH of LONDON & BISHOPGATE INTERNATIONAL. Smith thinks inflation fears are holding the market back. He says, "There's always the fear in everybody's mind of a repeat of the 1973 oil shock," when skyrocketing oil prices brought on inflation and a subsequent recession. (WSJ, 8/6)

STOCK MARKET:

The EXMI is down over 8 points in London this morning. "I think the circuit breakers will be triggered this morning and that will help us from accelerating," says SHEARSON's MICHAEL BENSON from London where oils are the only U.S. shares escaping the selling pressure. "We're going to start out down 50 ... I wouldn't be surprised to see Wall Street finish a hundred points lower and, in a sense, that would only put them in line with world markets." (FNN "World Business Update", 8/6)

"It may be a little difficult to sell this morning ... the best thing to do may be to sit on the sidelines for a little while," advises JEFF LANDLE portfolio manager for STOVALL/21ST ADVISORS. "It's a little bit late to be dumping a portfolio on the market." Landle says we could see a 100-150 point drop today and suggests investors attempt to buy puts rather than sell stocks today. (CNBC "World Business", 8/6)

If the U.S. market doesn't sell off today, it will over the next several sessions, says A. C. MOORE, director of research at ARGUS, after surveying Monday morning's damage in world stock markets. "We've had a rosy world view. Now we've gone from the glass being half full to half empty." Friday's recovery came on hopes that Iraq would soon be withdrawing; now it's clear that's not happening, says Moore. (CNN "Business Morning", 8/6)

"When they start shooting real bullets at us I think even a self-respecting bull has to pull in his horns a little bit and that's what we did a little bit this week," says RALPH ACAMPORA. "Maybe on a near-term basis, predicated on the news in the Mideast, you might have a little bit of a bounce. I think it would be a near term bounce, however." ("Wall Street Week", 8/3)

"I think the market was lucky because the way it was falling the Dow could have been down 200 to 300 points," says JAY HOHMANN of DONALDSON, LUFKIN & JENRETTE. "There was a lot of bad news. Besides the Mideast, the unemployment data also raised concern about a recession." He says it is hard to tell whether Friday's selloff will continue. "Everything hinges on politics. I doubt Iraq will take a gamble and go into Saudi Arabia. But it would take more nerve than I have to take a long position at this time." ("Investor's Daily", 8/6)

"The New York Times" reports this morning that there are signs "most individual investors" are not selling off their stocks. "Our people were net buyers [Friday]," says THOMAS QUICK, president of QUICK & REILLY. Moreover, he says Friday was the discount broker's heaviest volume day this year. DAVID KOMANSKY of MERRILL LYNCH says his firm's retail customers were net sellers of shares Friday, "but not to a startling extent." He says Merrill Lynch clients "have not exhibited a great enthusiasm to be on the sell side yet." At CHARLES SCHWAB, spokesman HUGO QUACKENBUSH says, "It's a relatively small group that is going through their portfolios and selling everything. ... There are lot of others who are looking for opportunities to buy stocks that are being beat up." Quackenbush says buyers and sellers were almost evenly matched Friday, with most big orders on the sell side and smaller to medium-sized orders on the buy side. (NYT, 8/6)

"Now is the time to keep cash and keep cool," says ALAN ACKERMAN of

GRUNTAL & CO. "The appetite for stocks is poor. There are a lot of bad scenarios and not a lot of strong stomachs." ABBY COHEN of BARCLAYS de ZOETE says: "Up until two weeks ago, there was a 'Don't worry, be happy' attitude. But the market's tone changed two weeks ago." With a weak economy and the threat of higher inflation, she predicts "a gradual erosion" of stock prices over the coming months. ("USA Today" and WSJ, 8/6)

"I think the market is going to have to go through a period of consolidation and digestion after this period of rather substantial indigestion in the last week," says ELIZABETH DATER. ("Wall Street Week", 8/3)

WILLIAM LeFEVRE of ADVEST says stocks bounced up Friday on reports that SOVIET FOREIGN MINISTER EDUARD SHEVARDNADZE said Iraq assured Moscow it would withdraw from Kuwait. "Did you ever think that a card-carrying Communist would save the stock market's bacon?" asks LeFevre. JAY GERKEN of SHEARSON LEHMAN BROS. also says the market's late comeback on Friday was due to Shevardnadze's statement, which he says "was timed almost exactly to when the market turned." ("USA Today", 8/6 and CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 8/3)

"On good news [in the Mideast] I think the market is going to have some resistance now around 2900," says GAIL DUDACK. "I've been negative on the market for a quite a while with a target of 2680, which I still think is most likely the event. But my worst case has been around 2500. I think 2500 on the Dow is going to discount a pretty hefty recession, which I don't foresee at the current time." ("Wall Street Week", 8/3)

"The combination of a slowdown in the economy and a rise in inflation and interest rates is a one-two punch that is guaranteed to produce a [stock market] knockout," says HUGH JOHNSON, chief investment officer at FIRST ALBANY CO. (Reuters, 8/3)

#90218m0002 08/06/1990 ~Market Consensus Surveys

FALLS CHURCH, VA (AUG. 6) MCS - A SAMPLING OF TODAY'S COMMENTARY COMPILED BY MARKET CONSENSUS SURVEYS, INC. IN TWO SECTIONS (1) STOCKS (2) MONEY & ECONOMY.

MONEY & CREDIT:

"As long as the tension is in the air," the dollar should remain fairly steady, says THOMAS BENFER of the BANK OF MONTREAL. Benfer says "the whole gamut" of investors flock to the dollar whenever there are problems in the Middle East, and therefore believes that talk of new all-time lows for the dollar is unfounded. But LISA FINSTROM of SHEARSON LEHMAN BROS. takes a somewhat contrary view. "All in all, conditions argue for the fact that the dollar is in trouble," says Finstrom. (WSJ, 8/6)

"The U.S. dollar and U.S. Treasuries have traditionally been a safe haven for investors," says JAY GERKEN of SHEARSON LEHMAN BROS. He thinks the problems in the Middle East will help boost these two investments. (CNBC "Market Wrap-Up", 8/3)

"There are questions as to how well the refunding is going to go later on this week and I think we're going to see continued selling there, as well " says ROBERT WALBERG of MMS INTERNATIONAL." He also says "the overall outlook for the dollar right now is bearish" because of rumors that the Fed will ease once again. (FNN "World Business Update", 8/6)

"The Fed's going to ease [this] week," says JOSEPH LIRO, vice president at S.G. WARBURG. "Either they [the Fed] are willing to send us into a recession or they're going to have to act. The risk of recession is more important in a trade-off between inflation." ("Investor's Daily", 8/6)

"The employment numbers confirmed that the economy is weak," says SAMUEL D. KAHAN of FUJI SECURITIES, who thinks that, despite fears of renewed inflation, the Fed will ease in response. "Central bankers always say that their job is to fight inflation, no matter what. But the truth of the matter is, this central bank will only fight inflation when it is sure that economic activity is growing." The Fed does not have that assurance, according to Kahan, and therefore "the fight against inflation will be postponed -- not aborted -- but postponed." (WSJ, 8/6)

"The Fed is in a nasty position," says GILBERT BENZ of SWISS BANK CORP. "Inflation has not abated, but the economy is clearly not resilient. But it [the Fed] will do what it has to do to keep the economy moving along, even if it has to risk higher inflation." ("Investor's Daily", 8/6) 1

"The Mideast situation that erupted in midweek turned the bond market completely around," says WILLIAM SULLIVAN JR., of DEAN WITTER REYNOLDS. "After bond investors had been lured into thinking that the prospect of a recession would diminish, their hopes were dashed by the new specter of oil-fueled inflation." (NYT, 8/6)

"So strong were inflation concerns that even a steep plunge by equity prices [Friday] could not stop bond prices from falling," says JOHN LONSKI senior economist at MOODY'S INVESTORS SERVICE. ("Investor's Daily", 8/6)

NEIL CAVUTO of "CNBC" quotes bond traders as saying FEDERAL RESERVE BOARD CHAIRMAN ALAN GREENSPAN was "between Iraq and a hard place," with growing inflation, but a stagnant economy. (CNBC "Market Wrap- Up", 8/3)

THE ECONOMY:

"What we're expecting in terms of the macro economy is that this [spurt in oil prices] is going to come close to pushing us into recession," says PRISCILLA TRUMBULL of WEFA GROUP. "What that means is a very weak second half of 1990, which means the first half of 1991 will be very sluggish for manufacturing." ("Investor's Daily", 8/6)

"I suspect that the U.S. is already in a recession, though people don't realize it yet," says AL FRIEDBERG of FRIEDBERG MERCANTILE GROUP of Toronto. "The recent collapse in corporate profits certainly indicates it. And if you take out growth in government spending and the rise in inventories from the recent second-quarter gross national product figures, there was no economic growth at all." ("Barron's", 8/6)

"Payroll employment is weak, the unemployment rate rose 0.3 of a percentage point, manufacturing is flat -- all of these suggest that the economy is dead in the water," says ROBERT CHANDROSS of LLOYD'S BANK PLC. "The bottom line is the Fed would ease right away if it were not for the oil market." ("Investor's Daily", 8/6)

"I still think that we will get a positive growth rate in the second half, but the margin of probability is narrowing," says FRANCIS SCHOTT, chief economist at the EQUITABLE. "We have to think much more seriously that the recession might be at hand. I am convinced of this by the unemployment rate finally going up. I believe that this is the final tip-off for the Fed to ease. They may want to wait another month to see if it shoots up another 0.2 or 0.3 [percentage point], but the balance of policy has shifted to ease." ("Investor's Daily", 8/6)

"The July employment report shows that the weak U.S. economy is not going to hang on much longer," says RICHARD RAHN of the U.S. CHAMBER of COMMERCE. "It is headed directly into a recession." (Reuters, 8/3)

"USA Today" writer MARK MEMMOTT declares in the paper's money section cover story this morning that "The U.S. economy has slipped into a recession. All that's left to do now is hang on and wait for things to pick up again -- most likely in six to nine months." But he says it "isn't a classic recession that's statistically easy to prove" and acknowledges many economists might not concur in his emphatic declaration. ("USA Today", 8/6)

SANTA MONICA (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - "Continued excellent earnings," was the way in which James A. McIntyre, chairman and chief executive officer, of Fremont General Corp. (NASDAQ: FRMT), characterized the company's 1990 second quarter results in an announcement today.

For the three months ended June 30, 1990, the company's net income was $7,084,000 or 85 cents a share, against a loss of $6,788,000 or 84 cents a share for the same period last year. Last year's loss was directly attibutable to a writeoff of $13,700,000 or $1.69 a share in the company's commercial finance subsidiary. In the first six months of 1990, however, the commercial finance subsidiary returned to profitability, posting higher than projected earnings of $990,000 or 12 cents per share.

For the six months ended June 30, 1990, earnings were $13,671,000 or $1.66 a share versus a loss of $830,000 or 10 cents a share a year ago. The primary contributors to the company's favorable earnings for the first six months of 1990 were the continued excellent performance of its $1 billion investment grade bond portfolio, and the better than projected underwriting results for the company's workers' compensation insurance line of business.

McIntyre commented finally, that he believes a solid foundation has been laid for consistent earnings through the remainder of the year.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS. (AUG.6) PR NEWSWIRE - An innovative and inexpensive gravity-driven Astrocompass(tm) permitting amateur astronomers to quickly and easily locate constellations in the night sky was introduced today by noted inventor Ben Mayer. Mayer is the developer of the popular Starframes and Stellaphanes handheld sky viewing systems used by astronomers around the world.

The Astrocompass viewfinder locates the 13 zodiacal starfields and 12 "bright and easy" constellations in the northern hemisphere by varying the stargazer's viewing angle. The viewing angle (declination) is set by a free-swinging locator held parallel to the horizon by the force of gravity. This is the same principle that keeps a gimballed ship's lantern vertical, regardless of the roll or pitch of the ship.

Although amateur astronomers have no trouble locating geographical direction with the help of magnetic compasses, no inexpensive device has been available, prior to the introduction of the Astrocompass, to determine the height above the horizon, relative to time.

The Astrocompass can be used at any latitude. When combined with Starframes and Stellaphanes it creates easy-to-use windows to the sky.

Mayer came to international astronomical attention in 1975 with his now-famous photographic discovery of the explosion of the Cygnus Nova, accomplished by taking 13 sequential images of the active explosion with a specially modified 35 mm camera.

Mayer is presently negotiating licensing agreements for the Astrocompass, for which he was recently granted U.S. patent No. 4,938,697.

Inventor Mayer is an avid amateur astronomer and the author of four books: Starwatch 1984, Halley's Comet Finder 1985, and Astrowatch 1988, all for Perigee/Putnam, New York; and (with Dr. William Liller) the Cambridge Astronomy Guide 1985, for Cambridge University Press. Mayer is also the founder of Envel Corp., Los Angeles, designers of electronically controlled environments.

OGDEN, UTAH (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Thiokol Corp. (NYSE: TKC) today reported a 16 percent increase in net income for its fiscal year ended June 30, 1990. Net income for fiscal 1990 was $41.4 million or $2.15 per share compared to the prior year's income of $35.6 million or $1.86 per share on the same basis. Reorganization costs and other unusual charges related to the July 1, 1989 spinoff from Morton Thiokol Inc. adversely impacted net income for 1989 by $17.9 million or 94 cents per share, producing reported net income of $17.7 million or 92 cents per share.

This year's sales of $1,181.4 million increased 1 percent over 1989. Fourth quarter income of $12.2 million or 64 cents per share increased 14 percent from last year's income of $10.7 million or 55 cents per share. Sales for the fourth quarter were $339.1 million, up 14 percent from last year.

Thiokol President and Chief Executive Officer U. Edwin Garrison said, "We are very pleased with Thiokol's performance during its first year as a separate company. We achieved all of the corporate goals established at the beginning of the year."

"Our board of directors has been expanded and strengthened. An experienced corporate office staff is now in place, complementing our effective operating management team."

"Income at each of our operating divisions was ahead of our plan for the year," Garrison said. "In addition, we achieved a strong cash flow from operations. Cash and short term investments increased $98 million during the year, significantly strengthening Thiokol's financial position."

"Sales from Space-related programs accounted for 48 percent of Thiokol's sales in 1990. This strong Space business, combined with a diverse mix of defense programs should provide Thiokol with a sound future sales base. We expect profit margins to continue to improve this coming year, resulting in positive earnings growth for fiscal year 1991," Garrison said.

Thiokol is a Utah-based corporation with approximately 11,500 employees at 11 major facilities nationwide. The company is a leader in a broad range of research, high technology, manufacturing and support services. CALABASAS, CA (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Tekelec (NASDAQ: TKLC) announced that it had finalized a multi-year volume purchase agreement with BellSouth Services Inc. based in Birmingham, Ala. The agreement covers Tekelec's SS7 test equipment for BellSouth's Signaling Transfer Point (STP) sites, Service Switching Point (SSP) sites, and Cutover upgrades of its existing analog offices.

"Digital signaling technology requires advanced communications testing products. Tekelec's signaling surveillance systems are the only products available today with the level of sophistication required for independent monitoring and complete network node simulation. These functions are now required to reduce network downtime to a minimum," stated Peter N. Vicars, Tekelec president and chief executive officer.

BellSouth will be using Tekelec's MGTS (Message Generator Traffic Simulator) MATE (Maintenance Access and Test Equipment) and cutover device systems for SS7 (Signaling System No. 7) communications testing. The cutover device discriminates among various SS7 messages received from the network and directs them to the proper switch (old or new). BellSouth will use Tekelec's cutover devices for cutovers of the SS7 trunks, maintenance and interchange interconnection testing.

Cutovers occur when existing end offices upgrade to new switches and enhanced services to meet customer demands. Prior to Tekelec's cutover device, end office upgrades involved extensive routing table modifications throughout the network and labor intensive "flash cuts" during maintenance hours. The cutover device, based on Teklec's MATE, provides the means to pre-test trunks allocated to the new switch in a controlled, secure environment.

With SS7 each node (Stored Program Control Switch) in the network is assigned a unique Point Code which identifies the switch. "The Cutover Device allows the new switch to have the same Point Code as the switch being replaced, thereby eliminating the need to perform thousands of translation changes previously necessary to properly test new SS7 trunks," said Rex Hester, Tekelec vice president, product manager, signaling products.

Recognized as a leading test equipment manufacturer, Tekelec's product line encompasses testing of data protocols, transmission services and equipment, signaling, and emerging intelligent network applications. Its products are actively marketed worldwide with subsidiaries in Japan and the U.K.

(NASDAQ: BIOW) a $2.5 billion bank holding company based in Des Moines, Iowa. It is the first interstate merger agreement to be announced in the State of Iowa since passage of an interstate banking law earlier this year.

The agreement calls for Firstar to exchange 2.7 of its shares for each outstanding share of the common stock of Banks of Iowa. Based on the closing price of Firstar stock of the New York Stock Exchange on Aug. 3, the shareholders of Banks of Iowa would receive Firstar stock with a value of about $75.60 per share or a total of $219.1 million.

Upon completion of the transaction, the twelve-bank Iowa franchise, which is Iowa's second largest banking organization, will become Firstar Corporation of Iowa, a subsidiary of Firstar Corporation. The combined organization will have 52 banks with 174 offices in Wisconsin, Iowa, Minnesota, Illinois and Arizona and a trust subsidiary in Florida.

The board of directors of Banks of Iowa has been seeking a successor to Foster, 63, who would retire upon completion of the transaction. Prior to becoming chief executive officer of the Madison Bank, Lang had oversight responsibility for 17 other Firstar Wisconsin banks. He joined the Firstar organization in 1968.

Banks of Iowa has banks in Ames, Burlington, Cedar Falls, Cedar Rapids, Council Bluffs, Davenport, Des Moines, Eldridge, Mount Pleasant, Ottumwa, Red Oak and Sioux City, Iowa. It has a diversified business base of commercial, retail and trust customers. In 1989, Banks of Iowa earned $24 million for a return on assets of .97 percent and a return on equity of 11.96 percent.

In connection with the transaction, Banks of Iowa granted Firstar an option to purchase newly issued shares of Banks of Iowa common stock in an amount equal to 24.9 percent of Banks of Iowa's currently outstanding shares.

The transaction is structured to be a tax-free exchange for Banks of Iowa's shareholders and will be accounted for as a pooling of interests. The agreement is subject to, among other things, approval by the shareholders

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Marriott Food and Services Management, a division of Marriott Corporation (NYSE: MHS), said today that, as a result of a company-initiated internal review, it will adjust certain past charges by issuing credits to affected clients, to reconcile billings with applicable contract terms.

A spokesman said these adjustments are expected to reduce Marriott Corporation's third quarter net income by approximately $8 million or eight cents per share.

Marriott Food and Services Management stated that, through rapid internal expansion and a number of major acquisitions, it had grown from a regional operation with sales of $200 million in 1984, to the nation's leading contract services business, with sales of $2.3 billion in 1989. Further, a number of the acquired companies previously had purchased other food service management companies, each with its own contract form, resulting in a wide variety of contracts. The division has consolidated these acquisitions, blending management teams and billing procedures.

The division said the review showed inconsistencies between certain charges made to some of its food service management clients and the terms of their contracts. It is contacting all clients immediately, and will make prompt and appropriate adjustments for affected clients. It said the affected accounts are primarily commercial, but include some government clients.

"We have been in the food service management business for nearly 50 years " said Daniel P. Howells, executive vice president and general manager, Marriott Food and Services Management. "Our goal has always been to competitively provide the best possible services to our clients. We believe we have done this. We are taking corrective action to promptly resolve the inconsistencies that have arisen between certain of our charges and contract terms. Credits will be issued where appropriate. We sincerely regret any inconvenience to our clients."

OAK BROOK, ILL. (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Waste Management, Inc. (NYSE: WMX) officials Sunday called irresponsible a story which appeared over the weekend in the national business publication Barron's that it said tended to mislead investors and called into question certain of its accounting practices.

Waste Management said it follows in all cases generally accepted accounting principles and it noted that its financial statements are reviewed thoroughly by the public accounting firm Arthur Andersen & Co., Chicago, which has audited the company's financial statements for more than 20 years. Company officials said Waste Management adheres strictly to the guidelines of the Securities and Exchange Commission and the Financial Standards Accounting Board, and noted that the author of the Barron's article acknowledged that the company was complying with generally accepted accounting principles and with the rules of the Securities and Exchange Commission.

James Koenig, vice president, treasurer and chief financial officer of Waste Management, said, "To suggest that our approach is in any way deficient flies in the face of reality and does a disservice to the professionals who meticulously prepare and scrutinize our financial statements. It ignores the fact that literally hundreds of other American corporations use the same accounting methods. The author appears to use Waste Management as a vehicle to criticize certain generally accepted accounting principles with which he takes exception.

"We want to reassure all of our investors that our financial statements are comprehensive, complete, meet the highest accounting standards and exhaustively represent their interests."

Company representatives had discussed the accounting issues raised in the story with representatives of Arthur Andersen & Co. over the weekend. Waste Management officials said the company had received a letter from the firm Monday reaffirming Arthur Andersen's opinion that Waste Management's accounting practices complied fully with all generally accepted accounting principles.

The company said its officials, including Koenig, would be in contact Monday with financial analysts and investors to respond to any questions arising from the story.

(the company) (NASDAQ: BCMD) today announced the completion of a $6.435 million private placement of securities through Euro Canadian Securities Limited of Toronto to European institutional investors. The private placement consisted, on one part, of the exchange of debt in the amount of approximately $550,000 owed to affiliates of the company for shares of common stock. The additional proceeds of $2.05 million of the private placement resulted from the sale of units consisting of common stock and warrants which, if exercised, will bring an additional $3.835 million into the company's treasury.

DALLAS (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Animation, 3-D images and parallel supercomputing with teamed workstations are among the advanced graphics capabilities IBM is showing at the Siggraph computer graphics convention here.

For example, by linking five of its IBM RISC System/6000 workstations together with an optical fiber, a "de facto supercomputer" has been formed to accelerate the performance of computationally intense functions such as ray tracing.

One RISC System/6000 serves as central point; the other four are its computational "assistants."

Ray tracing is a method of creating an artificial scene or animation by having a computer compute all the paths light rays would trace in a specific room, landscape or other scene. Ordinarily, such graphic simulations require very large and expensive supercomputers.

A single IBM RISC System/6000 capable of reaching up to 13 million floating point operations per second (MegaFlops) can perform ray tracing; the IBM parallelism demonstration achieves approximately four times the 6000's normal performance.

Another IBM RISC System/6000 array -- by the Utah Supercomputing Institute -- will also demonstrate the opportunities opened for cost- effective supercomputing by linking very powerful workstations and performing calculations "over the network."

Other IBM demonstrations include the ability to display 3-D images in workstation screen "X windows," the ability to transmit animated video over a local area network (LAN) and display it on a PS/2 screen, and an array of scientific visualizations from the company's Research Division, scientific centers and development laboratories.

IBM's large and technically aggressive exhibit at the iggraph show is intended to signal its accelerated drive toward the forefront of computer graphics technology.

Two exhibitors at the IBM booth will show their work at the juried and widely respected Siggraph Film and Video Theater.

Bill Latham, an artist who collaborates with IBM's Winchester scientific center in the United Kingdom will show his "Solid Modeling in Science and Art" highlighting his method of producing computer-generated sculptures.

The Cornell National Supercomputer Facility will present "Bells and Whistles," a work that blends advanced graphics and music.

In addition, a number of IBM customers and software firms whose applications port to the IBM RISC System/6000 are also exhibiting or will be represented in the IBM booth.

HOUSTON (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - NeuroGenesis, Inc., of Houston, today announced the successful completion of a private placement stock offering.

NeuroGenesis achieved its goal of raising $525,000 through the sale of 700,000 shares of unregistered common stock. The company is bringing to market food supplements that provide for the specific nutritional needs of people suffering from addictive and compulsive behavior, including alcoholism and cocaine addiction.

Two of NeuroGenesis' products, SAAVE and TROPAMINE, are marketed by its subsidiary, Matrix Technologies, Inc. The product's formulations are based on extensive research by Dr. Kenneth Blum, professor of pharmacology at the University of Texas. Dr. Blum's work indicated a potential specific gene link to alcoholism and drug addiction. In his laboratory research with mice, Dr. Blum discovered that the tendency toward alcohol preference could be reduced by increasing the dietary levels of specific amino acids.

Further, Dr. Blum's work indicates that many of the "emotional problems" experienced by recovering alcoholics and addicts are actually due to nutritional imbalances that have been aggravated by abuse of alcohol and drugs.

NeuroGenesis' product SAAVE helps alleviate the tension, stress and mood swings frequently experienced by recovering alcoholics. Over 18,000 people have taken SAAVE and 6,000 have TROPAMINE in over 600 treatment centers throughout the country.

Future products NeuroGenesis will bring to market include nutritional supplements to aid in weight control and to counteract stress.

"NeuroGenesis' successful completion of this stock offering indicates the marketplace's acceptance of our breakthrough research into the biological roots of the terrible problems of alcohol and drug addiction." NeuroGenesis President Al Bieser said today.

BOCA RATON, FLA. (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Innovet Inc. (NASDAQ: IVET) today announced that its patented, Microdroplet Technology, drug delivery system now being successfully tested in veterinary applications, will be applied to the field of human medicine in the near future.

Experts now estimate that the market demand for unique human drug delivery technologies that enhance and extend therapeutic effectiveness will reach $4.5 billion by 1994. Innovet's technology will have a major impact on that market.

"We believe many existing pharmaceutical compounds for humans will be made more safe and effective with our Microdroplet Technology. Innovet will actively pursue those avenues," said Dr. Jesse W. Houdeshell, D.V.M., president of Innovet. "Many of these compounds are delivered to the patient by antiquated delivery methods using non-biocompatible oils, organic solvents and surfactants. The Microdroplet Technology provides a method of drug delivery that eliminates the need to use these irritating substances that are foreign to the body and in themselves cause adverse tissue and organ reactions. One of the most important features of our novel delivery systems is that all components are biocompatible and safe."

Dr. Houdeshell further said, "the expansion of the Microdroplet Technology to human drug applications came about through inquiries from pharmaceutical firms looking for a better alternative for delivery of their drugs. We already have four projects in the early stages of formulations development. Word soon spreads through the industry when a new technology becomes available to reduce injection site pain or prolong the release of medication."

Microdroplet Technology creates tiny beadlets 1/80th the size of a red blood cell that can be engineered to release drug substances at a programmed rate. The beadlets consist of a non-irritating, safe coating that surrounds tiny particles of a medication and can be formulated to release quickly or over several days.

Based in Boca Raton, Innovet is a development-stage company dedicated to innovative healthcare products. The company's patents in Microdroplet Technology hold promise in revolutionizing the way in which pets, livestock and eventually humans may be treated for disease.

RICHMOND, VA. (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Circuit City Stores, Inc. (NYSE: CC) today announced July sales of $183.9 million, which represents a 15 percent increase from July 1989 sales of $159.8 million and a 1 percent decrease in comparable store sales.

"Although we are disappointed by the comparable store sales, we remain pleased that comparable store growth year to date has met our expectations " said Richard L. Sharp, Circuit City's president and chief executive officer. "A calendar change that caused July of this year to have one less Saturday than July 1989 contributed to the month's soft comparable store performance."

Circuit City continued its geographic expansion program during the month with the opening of its twelfth Superstore in San Francisco, Calif., and the relocation of a Superstore in Charlotte, N.C. In addition, Sharp announced that the company will open two more Impulse stores in August as it continues to test and refine the mall-based format. CLEVELAND (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Mor-Flo Industries, Inc. (NASDAQ: MORF) today reported financial results for the second quarter and first six months of 1990.

Net sales for the second quarter of 1990 were $53,355,219 as compared with $53,556,322 for the second quarter of 1989. The company reported net earnings of $140,303, or 6 cents per share, as compared with a net loss of $1,310,103, or 52 cents per share, for the second quarter of 1989.

Net sales for the first six months of 1990 were $109,057,270 as compared with $109,639,912 for the first six months of 1989. Net earnings for the first six months of 1990 were $428,793, or 17 cents per share, as compared with a net loss of $2,224,093, or 88 cents per share, for the first half of 1989.

Walter L. Abt, chairman of the board and president of Mor-Flo, said that profitable operations were achieved in the second quarter and first half of 1990 primarily as a result of increasing gross profit margin. In both periods, higher average selling prices more than offset increased costs due to complying with the minimum energy efficiency requirements of the National Appliance Energy Conservation Act of 1987 which went into effect on Jan. 1, 1990 for the manufacture of residential water heaters.

Mor-Flo Industries, Inc. is a leading national manufacturer of gas, electric and solar water heaters, as well as related home heating products. OAK BROOK, IL (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Champion Parts, Inc. (NASDAQ: CREB), a major remanufacturer of replacement parts for cars, trucks and farm equipment, today reported a profit for the second quarter and first half year ended July 1, 1990, compared to a loss in both of these periods last year.

For the second quarter of 1990, the company reported net earnings of $212,000 or six cents per share, compared to a loss of $1,025,000 or 28 cents per share in the 1989 quarter. Net sales declined to $29,419,000 from $31,271,000.

For the first half of 1990, the company reported net earnings of $679,000 or 19 cents per share, compared to a loss of $1,067,000 or 29 cents per share a year earlier. Net sales increased to $61,646,000 from $59,117,000.

Charles P. Schwartz Jr., chairman and chief executive officer, said, "Champion Parts' return to profitable operations in 1990 reflects an improved product mix, as well as the benefit of price increases and overhead cost reductions. With an inventory reduction behind us, we are producing to meet current sales demand which improves absorption of factory overhead expense. The second quarter's profit, compared to a loss last year, is especially encouraging, for while we did forecast lower sales and earnings than occurred in the first quarter, we were also affected by generally soft market conditions throughout the automotive aftermarket.

"In the current third quarter, we should benefit from the extreme heat in many parts of the country, which causes vehicle breakdowns, as well as an increased level of orders received from vehicle manufacturers for their service operations. The favorable elements which contributed to the profit for the first six months are also expected to continue.

"In addition to the operating gains which resulted in a $4,000,000 'swing' or improvement in pre-tax earnings, there has also been improvement in Champion Parts' finances," said Schwartz. "Notes payable to banks and long-term debt have been reduced 23 percent ($11.4 million), as compared to last year at this time."

Champion Parts is the country's largest independent automotive replacement parts remanufacturer in the multi-billion dollar automotive, truck and farm equipment aftermarket. It remanufactures, tests and distributes approximately 5 million parts each year throughout the U.S. and Canada. Its major products, representing some 80 percent of the sales volume of rebuilt parts sold by automotive jobbers and retail outlets, include fuel system products such as carburetors, and a complete line of automotive electrical and mechanical parts. The company employs 2,100 men and women and operates five major plants in the U.S. and Canada.

CANTON, IL (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Canton Industrial Corporation (CNI.B) and (OTC), today announced that an Abbott Products Structural Steel Division has been created to utilize an 83,000 sq. ft. portion of its Canton, Ill., facility which will provide structural steel fabrication for the commercial and industrial construction industry.

Business for the new operation will be generated by Abbott Products, Inc., a Chicago-based metal fabricator privately owned by Nelson Carlo, the current president of, and majority stockholder in Canton. As a result of Carlo's dual ownership and Hispanic heritage, both companies qualify as minority owned, Small Disadvantage Business' (SDB) by federal, state and city governments.

Marketing will largely focus on Chicago's construction market but will include other appropriate projects nationwide. As a minority owned business enterprise, the Chicago market, as well as other major metropolitan areas afford outstanding business opportunity because of the requirements for developers and general contractors to participate in their minority owned business programs.

The structural steel division is currently working with Havens Steel Company of Kansas City, Mo., on the Terminal 5 Venture O'Hare International Airport expansion project for structural steel fabrication. Havens Steel is one of the nations leading "total project" structural steel fabricators and erectors. Abbott estimates that its participation in the Terminal 5 Venture will product $6 million in structural sales if its bid is approved. The structural steel division is also working toward four additional projects which could provide up to $50 million in business over the next five years.

Canton is also negotiating two separate projects with a major automotive tire manufacturer and a designer and installer of material handling and warehousing systems. Each project has the sales potential for over $2 million annually.

DALLAS (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Spectrum Cellular Corporation today announced an agreement with NEC America, Inc. of Dallas to develop and manufacture a line of cellular data communications products for use with NEC's cellular telephone products.

According to John Rule, president of Spectrum Cellular, the agreement calls for the development of several products designed to provide NEC cellular phone users the ability to transmit facsimile and error-free data via the cellular telephone network.

In specific, the products to be produced include a version of Spectrum's IntelliJack(TM) intelligent cellular telephone interface, simple interfaces for RJ-11 to cellular telephone connection and other data communications products. Each is designed for use with standard RJ-11 devices such as facsimiles, answering machines and Spectrum's new BridgePlus(TM) cellular/landline modem.

The BridgePlus supports Spectrum's SPCL Protocol(TM), designed for error-free data communications via the cellular network. Using SPCL Protocol, the BridgePlus (V.22bis) provides error-free data throughputs via landline or cellular networks from 5000 to 8000 bits per second, depending on the environment quality and type of information transmitted.

"NEC's packaging approach for the products is particularly exciting," noted Rule. "Each will be available in a compact enclosure which will snap-on to the new NEC P-300 handheld cellular phone." A 9 volt battery and cellular telephone connector are included within the enclosure which provides direct RJ-11 for external device connection. Special packaging will also be available for use of the products with NEC's in-vehicle and other model transportable cellular telephones.

Combined with any of the widely available handheld or notebook computers, the products are ideal for vertical applications requiring true portable computing and connectivity without the encumbrances of larger packages.

All of the new data products are being developed and manufactured by Spectrum Cellular in Dallas for distribution by NEC America, Inc. this fall.

Spectrum Cellular Corporation is a subsidiary of Spectrum Information Technologies (NASDAQ: SPCL). The company is located at 2710 Stemmons Freeway, 800 North Tower, Dallas, Texas 75207, 214-630-9825.

WARREN, NJ (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Immunomedics, Inc. (NASDAQ: IMMU), announced today that it has filed an Investigational New Drug Application (IND) with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration (FDA) to begin testing of the company's lymphoma monoclonal antibody imaging agent, ImmuRAID-LL2. This product complements the use of ImmuRAIT-LL2, the company's therapeutic product, on which an IND was filed recently. ImmuRAID-LL2 is a monoclonal antibody-based imaging agent which utilizes the company's proprietary antibody linking technology (technetium-99m) to target B-cell lymphomas.

Pilot studies with ImmuRAID-LL2 have shown that the product can detect lymphomas not revealed by conventional methods. "Accurate staging of lymphoma is critically important in selecting appropriate therapy," noted Carl Pinsky, vice president, medical affairs. "Our preliminary results indicate that this lymphoma antibody is excellent at locating tumor sites, providing information valuable in the treatment of the cancer."

The company recently filed two other INDs for imaging agents that also utilize Immunomedics' proprietary technetium-99m antibody linking technology. The other products, ImmuRAID-AFP and ImmuRAID-MN3, are imaging agents for the detection of liver and germ cell cancers, and infectious diseases, respectively.

"We set a goal of submitting four INDs to the FDA in less than three months, and I am pleased that we have met this objective," noted Russell C. McLaughlan, president. "We currently are on schedule in our Phase III trials for our colorectal imaging agent ImmuRAID-CEA."

Immunomedics is a biopharmaceutical company applying innovative technology to the development of new methods and products using antibody-based radioisotopes and drugs for diagnosis and therapy of cancer, infection and other diseases. DALLAS (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Stardent Computer Inc., Newton, Mass., introduced the CFD Viewer, which provides advanced visualization for computational fluid dynamics (CFD) research and engineering, as the first add-on product for the Application Visualization System, AVS(tm). The company plans a series of AVS add-on products to be announced over the next year.

The easy-to-use interface provides access to all the functionality necessary to visualize CFD problems using pull-down menu point-and-click operations. The CFD Viewer is based on the underlying AVS networks, modules, data structures and libraries most often used in CFD.

An extensive set of modules specifically designed to handle CFD data sets is supplied with the CFD Viewer. These modules will allow the user to generate isosurfaces and streamlines, slice arbitrary planes through the data model and interrogate the model for physical data, such as stress, pressure and mach number.

The product also provides users with two different data structures designed to handle CFD data sets. The first type, AVS fields, handles volumes of block structured data, either uniform or curvilinear. The second type, unstructured cell data, describes data as individual "cells", which, in turn, are composed of nodes. Unstructured cell data includes cell types such as line, point, triangle, quadrilateral, pyramid, prism, tetrahedron, and hexadron. With these two data types, users can extend the library of modules available for visualizing and analyzing CFD data. In turn, these modules can be added into networks in order to enhance the functionality of the CFD Viewer.

Stardent plans similar add-on AVS products that will provide powerful tools for scientists doing finite element analysis, animation, chemistry and image processing. Pricing for the CFD Viewer will be below $3,000, depending on system configuration. The product will be available in late 1990 for systems running AVS3, the most recent release of AVS.

Stardent Computer Inc. is the leading developer, manufacturer and marketer of visualization systems. These include graphics supercomputers, departmental supercomputers and interactive 3D visualization software.

DALLAS (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Stardent Computer Inc., of Newton, Mass., today introduced the latest version of its Application Visualization System, AVS(tm)3, featuring new data anaylsis capabilities and improved support for applications development. In addition, the new product will add heterogeneous network support, further extending the number of platforms able to run AVS.

"The enhancements to AVS3 extend it from an ideal reserch tool to one designed for production use by scientists and engineers," said Ian Reid, Stardent's vice president of visualization marketing.

AVS3, which is being formally introduced at SIGGRAPH '90 here, features a new tool for generating and manipulating x and y plots and graphs, the Graph Viewer. This tool extends the data analysis capabilities, allowing the user to do 2D plotting and contouring. In addition, Data Probes have been added which will allow users to associate quantitative data values and coordinates with the visual representation of their data. Using a data probe, the user will be able to select a point on the surface and determine the exact value and position of the original data.

The new version also adds support for 8-bit X Window terminals and emulators and remote module execution in heterogeneous networks. AVS3 contains data transport protocols for transparantly passing data between machines with different formats. Reid noted that this increased portability expands access to AVS on machines ranging from supercomputers to the desktop.

Developers of chemistry, computational fluid dynamics and finite element analysis applications will find additional module support in AVS3. Specifically, the product features new data types for molecular or quantum data and an unstructured cell data type.

Access to a complete Command Line interface provides the developer with full control of network editing, execution and user interface layout operations from within a module. A module can also select X Window events for application-specific user interaction.

PITTSBURGH (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Transarc Corp. announced today that it has contracted with the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA) to deploy and study an initial Wide Area File System.

This two-year, $1.1 million project will build understanding of the patterns of use, administration and performance characteristics of a system for providing easy access to information distributed across high-speed networks spanning thousands of miles. The results of the initial project will be used to predict the behavior of such a system for millions of potential users.

The information sharing is based on a "distributed file system." Such a system allows a computer user to use information across the country in the same way as that on his own computer. The experiment employs Transarc's AFS(R) 3.0 distributed file system software, which will be run at the 40 sites to be studied over the two-year period. These installations include sites that are currently collaborating on DARPA-funded research projects. The effects of the Wide Area File System on such "focus projects" will be examined.

The sites will use the Wide Area File System as a new method of communication and information sharing. It is expected that the effort and cost associated with joint work by collaborators at distant locations will be greatly reduced, while the quality of resulting work will be enhanced. State-of-the-art security mechanisms are included in AFS to ensure that data is appropriately protected.

"Easy sharing of information over wide-area networks is a capability that researchers have needed for a long time," said Maj. Brian Boesch, program area manager for distributed and parallel systems at DARPA. "This project offers a new direction for national network services and will provide insight into the nature of the information sharing we will experience over the next decades."

Transarc Corp. provides advanced systems software for local- and wide-area networks of distributed computers. Transarc also is developing transaction processing software to enable commercial computing on UNIX.

BLUE BELL, PA (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - U.S. Healthcare (NASDAQ-NMS: USHC), a leading operator of health maintenance organizations (HMOs), recently launched a new advertising campaign, according to Larry Alten, the company's vice president of advertising.

The campaign, designed to enhance the organization's commitment to service and concern for its members, uses a "soft-sell" approach, relying on communicating feelings over words to convey its message.

The 60- and 70-second television spots began airing in June, primarily in East Coast markets, such as New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts. Each commercial revolves around a universal sentiment featuring music familiar to many Americans.

For example, the first commercial in the series depicts a summer wedding focusing on the bride and her young bridesmaids. In the background, the song "Thank Heaven for Little Girls" is playing with no voice-over other than the artist singing.

"The message is simple, low-key and reflects the image that U.S. Healthcare embodies - that of a sensitive, caring organization whose whole aim is to enrich the lives of its members," Alten said.

In addition to the television spots, the campaign includes sky typing and aerial banners, a new series of radio ads featuring the Dick Orkin Radio Ranch characters, and print ads depicting Norman Rockwell scenes. Later in the year, U.S. Healthcare plans to introduce five new radio commercials, as well as additional television spots.

U.S. Healthcare Inc. is one of the nation's leading operators of federally qualified health maintenance organizations. Founded in 1976, the organization has more than 1 million members in the Mid-Atlantic, Greater New York and New England marketplaces.

U.S. Healthcare is dedicated to providing quality health services to its members while aggressively seeking solutions to the spiraling costs facing the health care system.

FORT WAYNE, IN (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Lincoln Foodservice Products, Inc. (NASDAQ: LINN) today announced operating results for the second quarter and first half ended June 30, 1990.

Second quarter net loss was $53,000, or $.02 per share, compared to net income of $245,000, or $.07 per share, last year. The loss reflects a write-off of $391,000 before tax, or $.08 per share after taxes, of Lincoln's investment in Bay-Lea Industries Limited. Excluding the write-off, Lincoln's net income for the second quarter would have been approximately $190,000, or $.06 per share. Sales for the three-month period ended June 30, 1990 were $10,872,000 compared to $11,430,000 for the same period in 1989.

For the first six months of 1990, Lincoln's net loss was $11,000, or $.00 per share, compared to 1989 first half net income of $480,000, or $.15 per share. The 1990 net loss includes accounting losses totalling $458,000 before tax, or $.10 per share after taxes, resulting from the Bay-Lea investment. Excluding the accounting losses, Lincoln's net income for the first six months would have been approximately $327,000, or $.10 per share. Sales for the six months ended June 30, 1990 and 1989 were $21,968,000 and $23,180,000, respectively.

The decision to write off the investment in Bay-Lea was made pursuant to a reorganization of Bay-Lea's operations in accordance with Canadian law. After a careful review of the resulting organization, in which Lincoln's 32.5 percent investment was converted to a Class B preferred stock, Lincoln's management determined that the value of Bay- Lea's assets was insufficient to support the book value of Lincoln's preferred stock investment.

Commenting on sales, Thomas C. Griffith, chairman and chief executive officer noted, "Second quarter supply sales were down three percent compared to the record sales achieved by some lines during the second quarter of 1989. Equipment sales were also lower during the three-month period primarily due to lower sales in the mature Galley(R) and Impinger(R) product lines."

"We note that, excluding a one-time $1,000,000 purchase of pizza pans in the first half of 1989, six-month sales comparisons indicate a stable customer base," Griffith noted.

Griffith continued, "Despite our slightly lower sales and disappointing income results, we are encouraged that our gross profit margins continued to improve. Decreased aluminum costs and increased sales of higher margin products have established this trend, which should gather additional momentum when two new Impinger(R) oven models become available in late 1990."

"As expected, 1990 sales will probably be slightly lower than 1989 levels, but we believe that real growth opportunities for Lincoln do exist. Our two new ovens will give us a complete air-impingement cooking line, and the constantly changing foodservice industry continues to open new gateways for Lincoln products," commented Griffith.

Special Committee, Investment Bank Study Ongoing "The special committee of Lincoln's board of directors is continuing its study of strategic financial alternatives and transactions to enhance Lincoln's stock value," continued Griffith. "Options under consideration include the possible repurchase of all or part of Lincoln's stock and the sale of all or part of the business."

As previously announced, the special committee has retained Bowles Hollowell Connor, an investment banking firm based in Charlotte, N.C., to assist in the study.

Lincoln Foodservice Products, Inc. designs, manufactures, and markets commercial and institutional foodservice cooking equipment and utensils. The company, which produces Impinger(R) conveyor ovens, Steam'r Oven(R) combi-cookers, Wear-Ever(R) and Centurion(R) foodservice utensils, Redco(R) food slicers, cutters, and wedgers, Galley(R) food serving equipment, and Fresh-O-Matic(R) food warmers, markets its products internationally through its own sales force and a network of 1,500 distributors worldwide.

WILMINGTON, DE (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Cellmark Diagnostics, a business unit of ICI, located in Abingdon, Oxfordshire, England, has been awarded three quality standards for its pioneering DNA fingerprinting techniques. Cellmark is the first business of its kind to be recognized by these awards.

Cellmark received the British Quality Standard (BS 5750), the European Standard (EN 29002) and the International Standard (ISO 9002) after an objective audit of the business by external quality assessors.

"We are particularly pleased to receive this external confirmation of the total quality of Cellmark's operations, particularly in light of recent concern over the accuracy of DNA fingerprinting tests carried out by some other laboratories," said Philip Webb, general manager, Cellmark Diagnostics.

"This is the official hallmark of quality. Although there is no universal regulation which requires a specified level of quality in DNA fingerprinting, we have always thought it was important to work to an established and definitive standard."

DNA fingerprinting is used to identify individuals and their relatedness to others with a very high degree of accuracy. Paternity testing accounts for around 90 percent of Cellmark's business in the United Kingdom, with forensic requests comprising the other ten percent. The company's tests have been used by the British Home Office for forensic testing since 1988.

Cellmark performs two types of tests to ensure the highest degree of accuracy is achieved. The first multi-locus test produces a DNA fingerprint which resembles a supermarket bar-code, with each bar giving information about the subject's identity.

The second, single-locus test scrutinizes just two of the bars more closely. Seven different tests are used to analyze each paternity case. In addition, in order to guard against mistakes in the laboratory, crucial stages of the process are double checked by a second scientist. These quality control procedures are also employed by Cellmark Diagnostics' sister laboratory located in Germantown, Md.

In the future, the analytical procedures employed in the fingerprinting techniques may be used to screen for the defective genes which are associated with certain genetic diseases.

The Cellmark Diagnostics facility in Abingdon was set up in 1987 and around 1,000 tests were performed in that year. Today the company employs around 50 people and in 1990 around 15,000 samples will be processed. The company received the Queen's award for Technological Achievement in April this year.

SEATTLE (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Now international travelers and Security Pacific customers can put their extra rubles, deutsche marks, francs, pesetas, etc., to good use by depositing spare currency into special Red Cross of America fund-raising containers at Sea-Tac airport and select bank branches, the bank said today.

The fund-raising effort, called "Global Change," was developed by a Leadership Tomorrow team, and modeled after a similar program implemented in Washington, D.C., by Virgin Atlantic Airways. Leadership Tomorrow is a nine-month leadership training program co-sponsored by United Way of King County and the Greater Seattle Chamber of Commerce.

William Glassford, Leadership Tomorrow team member and senior vice president and manager of Security Pacific Bancorporation Northwest's International Division, said that most of the approximately 1.5 million people who arrive and depart on international flights at Sea-Tac carry some change or currency that, because of its small denomination, cannot be exchanged through banks.

"That's where the 'Global Change' containers come in handy," said Glassford. "We believe that travelers will welcome the chance to lighten their pockets and put their excess foreign currency to excellent use."

The American Red Cross will use the currency for disaster relief and programs directed at promoting international understanding and cooperation. The foreign money will be converted into U.S. currency for the American Red Cross by Security Pacific.

Glassford said that any business that would like to have a "Global Change" container should contact the American Red Cross. Security Pacific installed its containers into the branches that have historically handled a larger amount of foreign currency transactions (Seattle Main, University, Bellevue, Tacoma, Olympia and Sea-Tac branches). Sea-Tac's "Global Change" containers are located at international arrival and baggage claim areas.

"We hope that this effort not only raises much-needed funds for the American Red Cross," said Glassford, "but that it also promotes worldwide humanitarianism."

In addition to Glassford, the following individuals participated in the Leadership Tomorrow "Global Change" project: Cecile Andrews, director of Continuing Education, North Seattle Community College; Karl Kirn, customer service manager, Puget Sound Power and Light; Richard D. Reed, Law Offices of Richard D. Reed; Randolph J. Punley, program manager, United Way of King County; Candace Ismael, procurement manager, The Boeing Co.

DENVER (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Amdura Corp. (NYSE: ADU) and Our Own Hardware today announced that they have concluded a definitive agreement under which Our Own would purchase assets of Amdura's subsidiary, Amdura National Distribution Co. (ANDCO).

The definitive agreement has been submitted to the Bankruptcy Court for review. The all-cash transaction is subject to various closing conditions and Bankruptcy Court approval. Under the terms of the agreement, Our Own would acquire ANDCO's inventory and its distribution center in Milbank, S.D.

The Trustworthy program, currently supported by ANDCO, would be continued by Our Own, allowing the independently-owned Trustworthy stores to continue operating, without changing their identification. Our Own will also continue programs that support ANDCO's other customers.

Our Own expects to retain the distribution center employees and to hire some of ANDCO's office and field personnel when the agreement closes. As part of its integration efforts, Our Own plans to consolidate its Burnsville distribution center into Milbank, affecting about 65 Our Own employees. Headquarters for Our Own will remain in Burnsville.

As a result of ANDCO's being in bankruptcy, the agreement will be subject to a minimum 20-day Court review process, during which other interested parties may submit "higher or better" bids. The sale requires Court approval.

Amdura and Amdura National Distribution Co. filed for protection under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code on April 2, 1990. Amdura announced that it would solicit bids for its distribution businesses on April 16, 1990. Our Own Hardware is a Minneapolis-based, dealer-owned hardware cooperative.

OAKLAND, CALIF. (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Peter A. Magowan, chairman, president and CEO of Safeway Inc. (NYSE: SWY), announced today that Safeway will offer a new stock option program to more than 3,000 employees throughout the company. In addition, the firm also plans to install a payroll deduction system whereby employees at all levels can buy Safeway stock commission-free, and is adding a feature to its 401(k) plan enabling participants to direct their pre-tax savings into Safeway shares.

"Safeway considers broad employee ownership of its shares a key to its long-term success," Magowan said. "As long-term owners, with a more direct financial interest in the company's performance, we are confident that our employees will help us attain our goals. This program takes the principle of employee ownership that began when Safeway went private in 1986 further into the organization."

The plan announced today is a major step that was made possible, in part, by Safeway recently once again becoming a publicly traded company. The broad-based nature of this plan makes it unique in the supermarket industry and will enable Safeway to continue to recruit and develop top-quality employees. Participation in the new stock option plan is concentrated at store manager and assistant store manager levels.

The payroll deduction system will allow all Safeway employees to purchase Safeway stock at the market price, commission-free. In another action, Safeway will be adding a Safeway stock purchase option for those employees who participate in its 401(k) retirement plan.

Vesting for the stock option grants now being made will span a seven-year period to encourage a long-term focus. The payroll deduction and 401(k) features will be implemented in October.

Safeway is one of the world's largest food retailers, operating more than 1,100 supermarkets primarily in the western United States, western Canada and the mid-Atlantic states.

CYPRESS, CA (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - PacifiCare Health Systems Inc. (NASDAQ: PHSY) reported today that revenues for the third quarter ended June 30, 1990 increased 40 percent to $251,850,000 compared to revenues of

Earnings for the third quarter this year were $4,874,000, or $0.41 per share, an increase of 34 percent over last year when the company reported earnings of $3,629,000, or $0.32 per share.

"Increased membership, revenues and earnings highlight another period of dynamic growth for PacifiCare," said Terry Hartshorn, president and chief executive officer. "Total membership increased 29 percent to 659,686 compared to a year ago.

"Lower hospital costs due to improved utilization in our commercial programs helped to reduce total health care expenses as a percentage of premium revenue. Offsetting this savings was an increase in marketing and administrative expenses, due primarily to increases in advertising as well as additional staffing to serve our expanded membership."

For the first nine months of fiscal 1990, operating revenues were up 53 percent to $703,034,000 over the comparable period last year. Net income for the same period was $11,722,00, or $0.99 per share, a 73 percent increase over the nine month results reported in 1989. Included in the current nine month results is the gain on the sale of the Austin, Texas operations of $0.09 per share, which was reported during the first quarter.

PacifiCare owns and operates HMOs in five states including California, Oregon, Oklahoma, Texas and Washington, and an insurance subsidiary licensed in 33 states. The company also provides independent utilization review services. In fiscal year ended Sept. 30, 1989, it posted record net earnings of $10.9 million on revenues of $650.2 million.

KINSTON, N.C. (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Hampton Industries, Inc. (AMEX: HAI) reported that sales for the quarter ended June 30, 1990 totaled $29,782,000 as compared to $39,583,000 for the same period last year. The Company had a loss of $1,404,000, or $.37 per share, for the quarter as compared to net earnings of $703,000 or $.18 per share in 1989.

For the six months ended June 30, 1990, sales totaled $64,467,000 as compared to sales of $79,747,000 in 1989. The Company had a loss of $1,912,000, or $.50 per share, for the period as compared to net earnings of $2,322,000, or $.59 per share last year.

Mr. David Fuchs, Chairman and Chief Executive of Hampton stated that the softness of current market conditions combined with the retailers efforts to decrease in-store inventories had the effect of reducing sales volume and increasing the Company's inventory levels. The reduced production levels during the quarter continued to affect profit margins. He also indicated that the Company's advance bookings of orders decreased to $95,400,000 from $107,900,000 as of this date last year. However, orders calling for shipment during the period of August through December are slightly greater during the current year than in 1989.

It is anticipated that, barring any unforeseen developments, the Company expects to return to profitability in the third quarter of 1990.

BUFFALO, NY (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Barrister Information Systems Corporation (AMEX: BIS) today reported a net loss of $265,000, or $.09 per share compared to a net loss of $1,574,000 or $.52 per share for the first quarter last year. Total revenue for the quarter was $7,424,000 compared to $7,496,000 last year. Microcomputer system sales continued to show strong growth increasing to $1,590,000 from $866,000 for the same period last year. Service revenues for the quarter increased approximately 5 percent to $4,296,000 as compared to $4,101,000 last year.

While total revenues were approximately even for the comparable quarters, a significant reduction in the amount of loss incurred was principally achieved as a result of reductions in both salary and operating expenses.

Henry P. Semmelhack, president of Barrister, stated that earnings were affected by lower margins associated with the sale of the company's IBM(R)

AS/400(TM) minicomputer and microcomputer products.

"Although we did not return to profitability in this quarter, we are encouraged by the company's overall financial progress. In the first quarter, our hardware service organization successfully initiated a program to provide maintenance services for non-Barrister products and for clients who have not purchased Barrister equipment. It is anticipated that these new revenue sources will contribute to growth in our services business and will offset the anticipated impact on maintenance service revenues resulting from the market's continuing movement to personal computers and LANS," Semmelhack said.

"Software services revenues were strong in the first quarter because of increased installation and training activity for LAN and mini- computer installations." Semmelhack also said.

In the first quarter, the company arranged for $795,000 of additional working capital in the form of a subordinated debenture private placement which was completed on July 3, 1990.

Barrister is a leading supplier of office automation products and services to the legal profession.

NEW YORK (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Aileen, Inc. (NYSE: AEE), a manufacturer and retailer of women's apparel, today announced that the company, which concluded its third fiscal quarter of July 28, expected to show net profits in the range of approximately $1,500,000 to $2,000,000 for the third quarter, reversing the net loss of $568,000 for the 26 weeks ended April 28, 1990. The anticipated profit compares to a net loss of $1,319,000 for the third quarter of the prior year. In the fiscal year ended Oct. 28, 1989, the company suffered a net loss of $5,492,000.

The improved results, in the face of reduced wholesale activities, reflect an increase of 17 percent in retail stores sales for the quarter over the prior year. These increased sales were generated with 23 fewer stores than were open in last year's third quarter.

Abe Oberlin, chairman of the board and president, attributed the dramatic turnaround to the success of the previously announced restructuring program, which has simplified and reduced the cost of manufacturing operations, shrunk inventories and enabled the company to dispose of excess plant, machinery and equipment. The improved results also reflect the introduction of a "soft career dressing" line, which complements the traditional activewear and playwear lines. "The broader selection available to customers has received a remarkable response and enhanced profits by substantially reducing retail markdowns," according to Oberlin.

PEAPACK, NJ (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Fedders Corporation (NYSE: FJQ) today announced it no longer expects to reach its anticipated 1990 sales volume, due to unseasonably cool spring and summer weather. The company did not project sales for the balance of 1990. Sales in the first half of 1990 totaled $216 million.

Last October, Chief Executive Officer Sal Giordano Jr. had forecast sales of room air conditioners to exceed $415 million in 1990, assuming normal weather. Giordano noted today, "Into early August, there has not been the sustained high heat this year that is required to generate strong sales of room air conditioners in the key markets of the Northeast and upper Midwest."

Room air conditioner industry shipments in 1991 normally would decline due to 1990's cool weather, if retailers have a large carryover of inventory. Giordano said, "However, completion of Fedders' recently announced plans to acquire Emerson Quiet Kool will enable us to show a good sales gain in 1991."

LONDON (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Burmah Castrol plc (NASDAQ: BURMY) announced today that it has sold for immediate settlement 139.9 million shares in Premier Consolidated Oilfields plc, amounting to 29.7 percent of Premier's issued share capital.

The net proceeds of the disposal will amount to approximately 138 million pounds sterling, compared with the 60 million pounds at which the holding is recorded in Burmah Castrol's accounts, giving an extraordinary gain of some 78 million pounds. It is anticipated that the tax attributable to the disposal will not be significant. In the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, the amount of Premier's profits before tax attributable to the shares sold and included in Burmah Castrol's consolidated profits before tax, was 1.5 million pounds.

While remaining confident in Premier's long term prospects, Burmah Castrol wishes to concentrate its resources on the international marketing of specialized oil and chemical products. The disposal is in line with this strategy and the proceeds will be applied to Burmah Castrol's ongoing investment program, which is aimed at expanding the company's manufacturing, distribution, and research and development facilities.

Burmah Castrol plc is a leading international marketer of specialized oil and chemical products. It is also a major transporter of liquefied natural gas through its partnership with Mitsui OSK Lines, and has a number of energy investments in Pakistan. Burmah Castrol's net profit in 1989 was 95.5 million pounds ($156.6 million).

Burmah Castrol exchanged its U.K., U.S. and Columbian oil and gas exploration and production interests for a 25 percent stake in Premier on July 1, 1986.

Burmah Castrol's initial holding (72,243,679 shares) was increased by Premier's subsequent annual 1:10 capitalization issues and, in January 1989, by its purchase of almost 20 million additional shares, which brought its stake to just below 30 percent.

MONROE, Mich. (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - At La-Z-Boy Chair Company's (NYSE: LZB) annual meeting today, Charles T. Knabusch, chairman of the board and president, told shareholders that first-quarter earnings would be below those of the first quarter a year ago.

While first-quarter financial results will not be finalized and available for release until the week of Aug. 20, Knabusch said preliminary indications are that the company will be profitable, but well below the $.13 per share reported for the prior-year quarter.

"Several factors contributed to projected lower first-quarter 1990 earnings," Knabusch said, "including lower industry sales, higher costs from expanding capacity, abnormally high expense during the shutdown period to repair and modify manufacturing operations, and poor performance from several casegood operations, due to productivity losses and cost incurred in making major modifications to finishing lines."

First-quarter operations ending in July normally account for less than 15 percent of La-Z-Boy's annual earnings due to the seasonal nature of the furniture industry and scheduled plant closings for vacations.

"Sales and earnings should improve over the next three quarters compared to the prior-year period," Knabusch said, "but unless there is marked improvement in the economy and industry sales, we do not believe La-Z-Boy's year-end results for 1991 will match those of 1990." For the year ended April 1990, La-Z-Boy reported sales of $592 million and net income of $28.3 million ($1.58 per share).

In other business, shareholders re-elected as directors Knabusch, John F. Weaver and Warren W. Gruber. A proposal to authorize the issuance of up to 5 million shares of preferred stock was also passed.

La-Z-Boy is the leading manufacturer of reclining or motion chairs and the largest manufacturer of upholstered furniture in the United States. The company operates 19 plants throughout the United States located in Mississippi, Tennessee, North Carolina, South Carolina, Missouri, Arkansas

Michigan, Utah and California. The company markets its products through five furniture manufacturing companies: La-Z-Boy, Burris, Kincaid, Hammery and RoseJohnson.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - After a two-year break, Home Savings of America in Los Angeles regained the title of top residential mortgage producer during the first half of 1990, Inside Mortgage Finance announced today in releasing its ranking of lenders.

Meanwhile, consolidation appears to be accelerating this year. The top 20 mortgage lenders in the first six months of 1990 accounted for an estimated one-third of all new one-to-four family originations. Last year the top 20 lenders had about a 28 percent market share.

Inside Mortgage Finance, an independent weekly newsletter that tracks trends and developments in the mortgage market, released its ranking of the top 20 residential mortgage originators for the first part of 1990 in its most recent issue.

Importantly, more than half of the top 20 lenders reported increases in mortgage originations during the first half of 1990. This was no easy feat given the current soft real estate markets in most parts of the country and the fact that mortgage originations overall have not grown this year.

As the table below shows, there has been a considerable amount of movement -- both up and down -- in the ranks of top mortgage lenders this year. Home Savings climbed from third place in 1989 to first place in the first half of 1990 by virtue of a huge $6.9 billion in originations. The last time Home Savings was the largest lender was 1988.

The Fleet/Norstar Financial Group based in Rhode Island jumped from fourth place in 1989 to second place in early 1990 with an impressive $6.7 billion in mortgage volume. The Fleet group, which has been increasing its mortgage originations by leaps and bounds over the past several years, posted one of the largest increases -- 76 percent -- of any top 20 lender in the first half.

Although Citicorp Mortgage in St. Louis, the top mortgage producer in 1989 would not disclose its residential originations for the first half of 1990, industry "guesstimates" place its volume at about $5 billion. This would rank Citicorp and its affiliates number four among lenders -- a noticeable drop for the firm compared to recent years.

Rounding out the top five mortgage originators in the first half of 1990 was San Francisco-based Bank of America. With a healthy 67 percent increase in mortgage originations during the first six months of the year, Bank of America reported $3.7 billion in volume. This enabled Bank of America to climb from ninth place for all of 1989 to fifth place in early 1990.

RICHMOND, VA. (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - The Virginia Retirement System ("VRS") announced Friday that it had increased its holdings of equity securities in RF&P Corporation ("RF&P") (NASDAQ: RFPCK), a Virginia-based holding company which owns RF&P Railroad Company and RF&P Properties, Inc.

Since April, 1990, VRS has acquired approximately 1,267,000 shares of RF&P dividend obligations in open market and privately negotiated transactions. VRS, upon closing of these transactions, will own 550,400 shares of RF&P common stock, and approximately 4,226,000 dividend obligation shares. In certain of these transactions VRS is obligated to share a portion of any dividends declared by RF&P within the next 90 days.

RF&P has approximately 17.1 million shares outstanding. CSX Corporation ("CSX") (NYSE: CSX) reportedly owns through an affiliate 62.7 percent of RF&P's voting shares and 19 percent of RF&P's total shares and dividend obligations. To its knowledge, VRS is the second largest holder of RF&P voting and non-voting shares.

Earlier this year, CSX had proposed to acquire RF&P in a merger for $34.50 per share, in cash of CSX shares. The proposed merger was abandoned prior to any shareholder vote when VRS and other RF&P shareholders informed RF&P and CSX that they believed the merger price to be inadequate.

Mark Finn, Chair of VRS's Investment Advisory Committee, announced, "VRS believes based upon its investment criteria that RF&P shares continue to represent an attractive long-term investment. RF&P owns significant, strategically-situated properties in Northeastern Virginia and the Richmond/Washington, D.C. corridor which it has owned for many years. RF&P also has substantial cash resources and is unleveraged.

Mr. Finn added, "VRS intends to consider and explore on a regular basis means to maximize the long-term value of RF&P shares and may purchase additional shares from time to time in the open market or in privately negotiated transactions."

Jacqueline G. Epps, Chair of VRS, stated "VRS has received several inquiries in recent weeks concerning our investment strategy for RF&P. We are pleased to make this announcement today to answer these inquiries and to put an end to recent speculation by outsiders."

Both Ms. Epps and Mr. Finn serve as VRS's representatives on the RF&P Board of Directors. VRS is charged with administering the pension benefits of employees of the State of Virginia. Through its seven-person board, which includs Ms. Epps and Mr. Finn, VRS manages approximately $11 billion.

BOISE, ID (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Boise Cascade Corp. (NYSE: BCC) announced today that, as part of its strategic plan, it has identified five major business objectives that it will pursue to substantially increase earnings and shareholder value during the coming five years.

John B. Fery, chairman of the board and chief executive officer, said, "The steps we are taking, coupled with the return of stronger paper markets, should result in earnings increasing materially in the next five years and provide significantly greater long-term value to our shareholders while improving our competitive position." He said the company expects its next earnings peak to surpass the previous peak of $6.15 per share, which was achieved in 1988.

Carried out within the context of the company's strategy of efficiency, distinctive competence, and focused growth, the five major objectives are: (1) to focus on the white paper business, (2) to achieve world-class status in terms of cost and quality at company pulp and paper mills, (3) to reduce the company's pulp and paper presence in the Pacific Northwest, (4) to continue to expand in the office products distribution business, and (5) to continue to invest in the company's building products business.

The five objectives include a number of previously announced projects or activities. One is the major expansion project at the company's pulp and paper mill in International Falls, Minn., which will add 30 percent to the company's uncoated white paper capacity, or about 300,000 annual tons, beginning in 1991. Another project is a new coated white paper machine at Rumford, Maine, scheduled to start up in 1993.

Other specific projects or activities include:
- The sale of the company's Vancouver, Wash., carbonless paper mill.
- A reduced position in newsprint, which includes a plan to seek a joint venture partner for adding recycling capacity at the company's newsprint mill in West Tacoma, Wash.
- A plan to reduce over time the company's dependence on outside wood chip supply to the company's paper mills in the Pacific Northwest. That plan includes the purchase of a whole-log chipping facility in northeast Oregon and the development of a hardwood plantation forest in eastern Washington.

MINNEAPOLIS (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Datakey, Inc. (NASDAQ-NMS: DKEY) today reported total revenue for the second quarter ended June 30, 1990, of $2,270,590, compared with $2,533,128 for the same period a year ago.

Net income totaled $587,119, or 16 cents per share, vs. $904,815, or 25 cents per share, reported last year. Included in the 1989 second- quarter results was an extraordinary gain from tax loss carryforwards of $29,000 and a prior year's tax credit of $133,000, or 5 cents per share.

The six-month sales totaled $4,473,234, compared with $4,738,294 for the first half of 1989. The first-half net income was $1,228,817, or 34 cents per share, vs. net income of $1,740,675, or 49 cents per share, for the first six months of 1989. The results in 1989 included extraordinary items totaling $461,000, or 13 cents per share.

John H. Underwood, president and chief executive officer, said, "This year's first-half revenue results are similar to last year. Government sales remained the most significant portion of total revenue. However, government sales were down slightly from last year due to lower shipments of keys and receptacles to the phone suppliers.

"On the other hand, sales to our commercial customers in the first half of 1990 increased by nearly 40 percent over the same period last year," Underwood noted. "While these results are not overwhelming, we are encouraged that Datakey's current strategies to expand our commercial business are starting to show some results."

Underwood added, "We are making good progress in the commercial market. However, there is some indication that government sales are slowing down. As a result, total sales and other operating revenue for 1990 may be slightly less than in 1989. In addition, with the current expansion of Datakey's product line and our custom design development activities that are necessary to attract commercial business, the company is significantly increasing its investment in marketing and research and development. With this higher level of spending, we estimate that net income in the second half of 1990 will be comparable to the first half just concluded."

Datakey, Inc. designs, produces and markets specialty class portable data carriers in the form of keys, cards and custom shaped devices to OEMs in an application oriented marketplace. These small, semiconductor memory-based, portable devices serve as a convenient way to provide machine-readable electronic information for use in a variety of microprocessor based equipment. The company's portable data devices are packaged to withstand the adverse elements found in transportable human environments. Datakey also designs, produces and markets supporting peripheral equipment for these portable data carrier devices.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Geico Corporation (NYSE: GEC) today reported its results for the second quarter and six months ended June 30, 1990. The corporation's interim report to shareholders will be mailed on or about Aug. 14, 1990.

For the six months ended June 30, the company reported profits of $94.7 million ($6.16 per share) on revenues of $952.8 million as compared to earnings of $89.2 million ($5.76 per share) on revenues of $925.5 million in the same period last year.

In the second quarter, Geico earned $48.3 million ($3.15 per share) on revenues of $489.3 million versus earnings of $43.7 million ($2.82 per share) on revenues of $473.3 million in the second quarter last year.

Commenting on the corporation's results, Chairman Bill Snyder said: "The company's financial results through the first six months of 1990 were satisfactory and above those experienced during the first six months of 1989.

"Net income for the period was $94.7 million, up 6.1 percent from last year's $89.2 million. On a per share basis, net income increased 6.9 percent from $5.76 for the period in 1989 to $6.16 in 1990. Net income included realized investment gains after tax of $1.16 per share in 1990 and $1.32 per share for six months of 1989.

"The second quarter underwriting results were quite favorable, but because first quarter results were less favorable, the consolidated underwriting ratio year-to-date was 97.5 percent compared to 96.7 percent at mid-year 1989.

"Weather-related catastrophe losses through the second quarter were well below the level experienced at this point last year. Auto claim frequency and severity continue to increase at a relatively steady rate.

"Property and casualty earned premiums were up 5.9 percent over the first six months of 1989. Growth in voluntary policies in force over the past 12 months was 4.3 percent. This countrywide growth rate is better than we have experienced recently and is the composite of growth rates of 8-10 percent in several states and negative growth in states which have doubtful potential for future profitability.

"In Geico, our principal subsidiary, earned premiums were up 6.2 percent over the 1989 level and new policy sales were 4.6 percent above the policies sold in the first half of 1989. Geico's underwriting ratio was 96.7 percent compared to 96.2 percent in the corresponding 1989 period," Snyder said.

IRVINE, CA (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Medstone International Inc. (NASDAQ: MSHK) today reported net loss of $761,793, or $.16 per share, for the second quarter ended June 30, 1990. This compares with net loss of $183,428, or $.04 per share for the quarter ended June 30, 1989. Revenues were $2,593,032 compared with $4,433,771 for the similar period of the prior year.

For the first six months of 1990, net loss was $1,364,264, or $.29 per share, on revenues of $6,857,041 compared with net income of $175,106, or $.04 per share on revenues of $8,605,516 for the first six months of 1989.

"Although revenue from equipment sales is lower this quarter reflecting the sale of one system, recurring revenue from procedures and maintenance has reached a high of approximately $1.3 million for the quarter. In addition, significant steps to reduce operating expenses have been completed and Medstone's cash position has improved during the quarter. We believe operating expenses are now at the appropriate level to compliment the expected revenues for the remaining two quarters of 1990," stated Richard Ferrari, president and chief operating officer.

"Contributing to the loss for the second quarter are legal expenses associated with the defense of the class action lawsuit. If these legal expenses had not been necessary, the results for the quarter would be significantly different," he concluded.

Medstone International manufactures the Medstone STS non-invasive shockwave therapy system. Medstone was granted approval by the FDA in April 1988 for general clinical use of the STS on kidney stones and is a pioneer in the use of lithotripsy for the treatment of gallstones.

CHICAGO (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Telephone and Data Systems Inc. (AMEX: TDS) reported substantial increases in customers served, revenues, operating income and earnings per share during the second quarter and first half of 1990. Telephone access lines served grew 8.2 percent, consolidated cellular telephones in service jumped 86.4 percent and pagers in service climbed 23.5 percent from June 30, 1989.

Operating income, net income and earnings per share increased sharply, reflecting strong operating and financial results in all three business segments. Telephone operating margins were unusually high, while cellular and paging operating margins improved significantly. LeRoy T. Carlson Jr., president, commented, "Results for the second quarter and first half of 1990 reflect the strength of our core business units. While we anticipate our strong customer growth will continue, second-half cellular marketing and RSA development programs, along with slower telephone revenue growth, may hold back financial results somewhat for the balance of 1990."

CONSOLIDATED SECOND QUARTER RESULTS

Consolidated revenues increased of 24.2 percent to $71.9 million for the second quarter of 1990 from $57.8 million in 1989. Operating income surged 82.4 percent to $11.9 million in 1990 compared to $6.5 million in 1989. Net income available to common grew 184 percent to $5.9 million from $2.1 million in 1989, and earnings per share climbed 150 percent to $.20 in 1990 compared to $.08 in 1989. The increase in earnings per share reflects the growth in net income, offset somewhat by a 10 percent increase in the number of weighted average common and equivalent shares.

CONSOLIDATED FIRST HALF RESULTS

Consolidated revenues increased 25.3 percent to $139.2 million for the first half of 1990. Operating income grew 88.2 percent to $23.1 million in 1990 from $12.3 million in 1989. All three business units contributed to the rise in operating income. Telephone operating income rose 30.9 percent, and the cellular and paging operating losses declined 45.9 percent and 11.3 percent respectively. Net income increased 193 percent due primarily to the rise in operating income and higher cellular equity income. Net income available to common grew to $11.2 million for 1990 from $3.4 million for 1989. Earnings per share rose 185 percent to $.37 in 1990 from $.13 in 1989. Growth in earnings per share was slowed somewhat by a 14.2 percent increase in weighted average common shares outstanding.

PITTSBURGH (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Parkvale Savings Bank (NASDAQ-NMS: PVSA) and Fidelity Savings Association (NASDAQ-NMS: FSVA) jointly announced today that they have entered into an agreement whereby the Mount Lebanon branch of Parkvale, located at 728 Washington Road, Mount Lebanon, Pa., will be acquired by Fidelity.

Under the terms of the agreement, Fidelity will assume the deposits held at that office, which on July 31, 1990, totaled $10.0 million, and will continue to operate the office as a branch of Fidelity.

The acquisition is subject to the approval of the Office of Thrift Supervision and the Pennsylvania Department of Banking. As both Parkvale and Fidelity exceed all regulatory capital requirements, it is expected that the transaction will be approved and completed prior to the end of the year.

"The sale of the Washington Road office, a former Concord-Liberty office acquired from the Resolution Trust Corp. in December 1989, is a result of our continual evaluation of our community office network," said Robert J. McCarthy, president of Parkvale. "I'm particularly pleased that our Washington Road office is being sold to Fidelity, a fine institution that values customer service as much as we do," McCarthy added.

The Washington Road branch office will join Fidelity's 312 Beverly Road office as an additional full-service branch. William L. Windisch, president of Fidelity, said he is pleased to be able to acquire this office and expand Fidelity's service to the residents of Mount Lebanon and surrounding communities.

Parkvale has $756 million in assets and presently operates 23 branch offices. Fidelity has $163.3 million in assets and currently operates six branch offices. Parkvale Savings Bank and Fidelity Savings Association are FDIC-insured, Pennsylvania-chartered stock savings institutions.

CHICAGO (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Circle Fine Art Corp. (NASDAQ: CFNE) today reported revenues and earnings for its third quarter and for the nine months ended June 30, 1990.

Third quarter revenues increased 23 percent to $10,906,000, a new third quarter record, up from $8,845,000 for the same period ended June 30, 1989. Net income increased 21 percent to $486,000 or $.19 per share, also a third quarter record, compared to $401,000 or $.16 per share for the third quarter ended June 30, 1989.

Revenues for fiscal 1990's first nine months ended June 30, 1990 increased 17 percent to a new record, $28,407,000, up from $24,317,000 for the same 1989 period. Net income for the nine months ended June 30, 1990 was $80,000 or $.03 per share, compared to $1,095,000 or $.44 per share for the comparable nine months ended June 30, 1989. Results for the third quarter and first nine months are not necessarily indicative of results that may be expected for the full fiscal year.

"Circle's core art gallery business remains strong," Jack Solomon, chairman, said. "Same store retail sales during the first nine months were 22 percent higher than the comparable period of last year," Solomon continued. "During the first half of fiscal 1990, Circle incurred high start up costs to launch 'The Art Collectors Circle(TM),' the innovative club for beginning and advanced art collectors we operate in association with a division of the American Express Co. The launch was very successful, but it had a temporary negative effect on our earnings. During the third quarter, the club became profitable, and we expect it to continue to grow," Solomon stated.

"There is a tougher general retail environment nationwide; however, in my opinion, art collecting in general will continue to grow, but perhaps at a slower pace," he continued. "We are fortunate that we put Art Collectors Circle in place earlier, even though it hurt our earnings temporarily. Now that it is established, the Art Collectors Circle is position to be of great assistance to our company in dealing with what may be more difficult economic conditions."

Circle Fine Art Corp. publishes and distributes limited edition original graphics, deals in contemporary fine art, manufactures and distributes "Art To Wear" limited edition fine art jewelry designed by a number of the world's leading contemporary artists, and owns and operates 36 fine art galleries and two Tangent, Fine Art for Living(TM) stores in the United States and Canada. The company also owns the Art Collectors Circle(TM), a club for both beginning and advanced art collectors operated in association with a division of the American Express Co.

Net sales through June 30, 1990, were $2,728,008, reflecting a 197-percent increase over the first quarter in the previous year. EAST HANOVER, N.J. (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Sandoz Pharmaceuticals Corporation today said that 62 cases of potentially life-threatening white blood cell deficiencies in patients receiving Clozaril (clozapine) therapy for schizophrenia have been identified so far through the Clozaril Patient Management System (CPMS). Clozaril was first made commercially available in February 1990 through a controlled distribution system linking weekly drug dispensing to a weekly blood test.

"These data demonstrate that weekly monitoring of the patient's white blood count as is done with the Clozaril Patient Management System (CPMS) is essential," said Dr. David Winter, M.D., vice president of scientific and external affairs. "All patients affected with agranulocytosis, the most serious of the white blood cell deficiencies associated with Clozaril were withdrawn from the drug with no fatal outcomes and no lasting adverse effects." Earlier experience abroad indicated that agranulocytosis may have a 35 percent fatality rate if not detected early and managed properly. "CPMS is proving itself to be a lifesaver in the United States " Dr. Winter emphasized. "Potentially, we could have had at least 6 deaths so far if we did not have the system in place."

"This rate of white blood cell deficiencies is consistent with the data from clinical trials," Dr. Winter stated. Dr. Winter added that the rate of these serious side effects, now running at 2-3 per week, was growing, reflecting the effects of longer-term use and greater patient numbers.

Dr. Winter said that a review of medical literature indicates that the rate of agranulocytosis is at least 20 times greater for clozapine than for other drugs in its class. Deficiencies in white blood cell counts render patients susceptible to potentially fatal infections.

Before the relationship between Clozaril and agranulocytosis was understood, and monitoring requirements instituted, over 40 deaths were reported in Europe in the 1970's. This death rate was considered by the Food & Drug Administration throughout its evaluation of Sandoz' application to approve marketing. "Distributing Clozaril only through the CPMS in the United States is minimizing the risk of deaths in this country while patients who previously had no hope are benefiting from the new therapy," Winter said.

DETROIT (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - General Motors Corp. is considering "three-crew" production -- running plants more hours but paying less overtime -- at eight of its 35 active North American vehicle assembly plants, Ward's Automotive Reports said.

Sources told Ward's the plants, which make compact and midsize cars, are: Doraville, Ga.; Fairfax, Kan.; Lordstown, Ohio; Wilmington, Del.; Lansing Mich., A and B; and Oshawa, Ontario, Canada, Nos. 1 and 2. One of those facilities -- probably Doraville or Fairfax -- could be in jeopardy as a result, the sources told Ward's, because the three-crew system can increase production as much as 50 percent at a plant that already runs two shifts.

Ward's said three-crew production, used by GM and other automakers in a few European vehicle plants, sometimes involves three work shifts a day. In other cases, the plant runs 20 hours daily, six days a week without overtime pay; there are three work crews, each on the job four 10-hour days a week.

U.S. autoworkers now work a five-day week and typically are paid overtime for work in excess of eight hours a day and for working on weekends. No North American auto assembly plants presently use the three-crew system.

GM says no decision has been made on which plants to include. Just when the plants might swing to three crews depends on national and local-level talks this summer with the United Auto Workers, which might resist the plan. GM's national contract with the UAW expires Sept. 14.

GLENVIEW, ILL. (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Kraft General Foods (KGF) today projected that revenue from its new fat free products will reach $325 million this year, and $750 million by 1992 -- the equivalent of a Fortune 400 company.

According to KGF Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Michael A. Miles, consumer demand for KGF's non-fat products in seven popular food categories has been unprecedented. "Our biggest challenge is keeping shelves stocked," he said. In fact, he noted that in several categories, including frozen dessert, yogurt, baked goods, and salad dressings, these products are actually expanding the total market.

"Products that are both fat free and taste good are leading many consumers back to foods they may have cut back on. And they're coming back, again and again," Miles said.

The demand tracks with growing concern about the level of fat in the American diet. The National Cholesterol Education Program has announced its goal of reducing the number of calories from fat in Americans' daily diets to 30 percent. Fat currently makes up 36 percent of the average American's daily calorie intake.

Now a recent analysis by KGF nutritionists shows that by substituting all of the company's fat free products for regular versions consumers could trim the level of fat in their daily diet to 33 percent of total calories, based on average consumption figures (see note).

"We know consumers can make a significant improvement in their diet simply by switching from full fat foods to the fat free counterpart in equal amounts. All the taste, enjoyment and satisfaction remain on their menu -- minus the fat -- and that's good news for consumers," said Patricia Kreutler, Ph.D., associate director of KGF's nutrition department.

"Substituting fat free products for full fat products can make a difference, but it is important to note that it's not the only answer to achieving a healthier lifestyle. It is essential to have balance, variety and moderation as part of an overall dietary plan, plus exercise," she said.

Based in Glenview, Kraft General Foods is the multinational food division of Philip Morris Companies Inc. (NYSE: MO).

ENGLEWOOD, CO (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Big O Tires Inc. (NASDAQ: BIGO), today reported net income of $332,200, or 2 cents per share for the quarter ended June 30, 1990, compared to net income of $607,000, or 4 cents per share for the like period in 1989. Sales of $27,721,000 for the second quarter, 1990, represented a decrease of $1,465,900 from sales of $29,186,900 during this same period in 1989.

Net income for the six months ended June 30, 1990, amounted to $167,000 or 1 cent per share, as compared to $636,700, or 4 cents per share for the like period in 1989. 1990 sales for the six months were $50,443,500, as compared to $50,569,500 in 1989.

Steven P. Cloward, president and chief executive officer of the company stated, "We continue to experience increased expense associated with the company's warranty program. These expenses have had an adverse affect on gross profit margins during the last nine months and we expect it to continue through the end of the year. We were disappointed by the decrease in sales, however we anticipate improved sales in the third quarter, 1990. Lack of supply during the fourth quarter, 1989, and first quarter, 1990, resulted in slower sales this period. As we continue our promotional programs and communicate product availability, we expect sales to increase through 1990."

Gross margins for the second quarter, 1990, were 20.7 percent as compared to 21.3 percent for the like period in 1989. The company's warranty expense increased by $232,300 over the same three month period of 1989 accounting for an .8 percent decrease in margins. For the six months ended June 30, 1990, Big O's gross margins were 20.4 percent, as compared to 22.2 percent for the like period in 1989. Warranty expense increased by $629,900, representing a 1.2 percent decrease to gross margins for the same six month period. Margins on product shipments decreased by 1 percent during this six month period as the company sought to return to product mixes sold prior to the 1989 product shortages experienced by the tire replacement industry.

Big O Tires, headquartered in Englewood, provides tires and automotive services through over 330 company and independently owned stores in 15 states. Its common stock is traded on the NASDAQ National Market System under the symbol "BIGO".

CHICAGO (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - United States Cellular Corporation (USM) reported today that service revenues and the number of customers served continued to grow at a strong pace during the second quarter, while the company's operating loss significantly declined.

"Customers served grew at an annualized rate of 48 percent during the second quarter, up from 33 percent during the first quarter of this year," said H. Donald Nelson, president and chief executive officer. "We attribute the higher growth rate to a more aggressive equipment pricing strategy, which we plan to maintain. We expect to continue to add customers at an accelerated pace throughout the remainder of 1990."

For the second quarter ended June 30, 1990, service revenues increased 72 percent to $13.3 million, versus $7.8 million in the same quarter of 1989. USM's net loss of $2.7 million, or $.09 per share, declined 51 percent from $5.4 million, or $.19 per share, from the same period in 1989. The company's operating loss fell to $1.7 million from $4.1 million.

Service revenues for the first six months of 1990 rose nearly 86 percent to $24.9 million from $13.4 million last year. The net loss for the period fell to $6.1 million, or $.21 per share, compared with a loss of $8.7 million, or $.31 per share, last year. Similarly, USM's operating loss for the six months declined to $4.1 million from $6.7 million last year.

"We are very pleased with our improving operating results and also with the progress we are making on our long-term commitment to bringing excellent service to our customers," Nelson said. "During the second quarter, we reduced our monthly disconnect rate to 1.8 percent, compared with 2 percent during the same quarter of 1989. In addition, we completed a survey of our customer base that indicates continued improvement in meeting our customers' expectations."

The company continued its expansion during the second quarter, agreeing to acquire 100 percent of a license authorized to provide service to Texas Rural Service Area (RSA) 20, which is adjacent to three Metropolitan Statistical Areas (MSA). The company also recently agreed to acquire the licenses authorized to serve Oklahoma RSA 9 and Iowa RSA 10, both of which are adjacent to other company-managed markets. Each of the three acquisitions is subject to approval by the Federal Communications Commission and will increase the company's cellular interests by an aggregate of approximately 623,000 population equivalents (pops).

USM also made progress in gaining additional RSAs by agreeing to acquire certain interests from Telephone and Data Systems, Inc. (TDS). "These interests, representing approximately 760,000 pops, are expected to be transferred during the current quarter," Nelson said. USM also anticipates receiving a proposal from TDS for the transfer by TDS of its remaining interests in RSAs, totaling approximately 2.6 million pops. USM has retained independent legal counsel and financial advisors in anticipation of receiving such a proposal.

"We expect that the RSA market start-up activity will affect both the company's operating loss and investment income from minority interest during 1990 and 1991," Nelson said. "At the same time, progress in our MSAs is creating a strong foundation for future revenue and earnings growth."

Headquartered in Chicago, USM manages and invests in cellular systems throughout the country. At June 30, 1990, USM owned or had the right to acquire interests in 75 MSAs and 38 RSAs representing approximately 9,071,000 population equivalents. This total excludes the recently announced acquisitions and any interests that may result from the anticipated proposal from TDS. USM expects to manage more than 40 RSA markets in addition to the 31 company-managed MSA markets. Cellular telephone systems serving three RSA markets and all of USM's MSA markets are in operation today.

DENVER (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - The following was released today by Fund America Investors Corporation:

Fund America Investors Corporation is not in any way associated with FundAmerica Inc. of Irvine, Calif. That was the message sent today in a letter to major investment and commercial banking firms by Steven B. Chotin, president of Fund America Investors Corporation, a Denver-based limited purpose finance company.

FundAmerica Inc. is presently under investigation by state authorities, which prompted Fund America Investors Corporation to announce that there is no relationship whatsoever between the two organizations.

In today's letter to financial institutions Chotin says, "I want to state in the clearest terms possible that our company, Fund America Investors Corporation, does not now have, and has never had, any affiliation, or contact of any kind with FundAmerica Inc. or any of its affiliates or officers."

Fund America Investors Corporation is an issuer of bonds and other similar securities collateralized by mortgage loans or mortgage certificates. It recently priced a $400 million security known as a Collateralized Mortgage Obligation.

FundAmerica Inc., on the other hand, has been described in the media as "a discount buying club." There has been some confusion as to whether there is any relationship between Fund America Investors Corporation and FundAmerica Inc. because of the similarity in names. Chotin sent the letter to clarify the situation for the investment community.

Chotin also stated: "We want to assure the public that FundAmerica Inc. has nothing whatsoever to do with this recent transaction nor with any future security issued by Fund America Investors Corporation."

This release does not constitute an offer to sell, or a solicitation of an offer to buy, any securities. Any such offering will be made only by the means of a prospectus.

A LIM 4.0 expanded memory driver is also supplied to configure additional memory.

One 3.5-inch, 1.44MB floppy disk drive and an internal 20MB hard drive (23 millisecond access speed) are standard. The MS-DOS(R) 3.3 operating system and Tandy's easy-to-use DeskMate(R) personal productivity software are installed on the hard drive for instant, out-of-the-box computing.

Gross revenue for the quarter ended June 30 was $25,337,000 compared to $27,978,000 for the same period in 1989. Gross revenue for the six months ended June 30 was $52,840,000 compared to $49,796,000 for the same period in 1989. ORLANDO, Fla. (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - The average cost of self-serve unleaded gasoline -- which had increased 4 cents per gallon in two days as of Friday -- jumped another 7.1 cents over the weekend, the American Automobile Association said today.

AAA's Fuel Gauge Report shows self-serve unleaded averages $1.186 per gallon, up from $1.115 on Friday and $1.075 on Wednesday.

The survey, based on a spot check, of 1,400 stations nationwide for AAA by Computer Petroleum Corp. of St. Paul, Minn., shows retail prices have increased at the fastest level since the two-week period following the March 1989 oil spill in Alaska, when prices rose nearly 12 cents.

Regionally, the average price has increased from 4 to 5 cents in Texas to 12 to 15 cents in some areas of California.

AAA, which Friday called on wholesales gasoline suppliers and retailers to use restraint in their pricing policies -- and for car owners to practice common sense conservation -- said a major factor in the rapid price hike is that many oil companies base their prices on the spot market.

Spot market traders buy and sell shipments of oil electronically in what has become a global marketplace. Prices, therefore, now respond immediately to current events, AAA said.

While it may take a shipment of oil 60 days to arrive in the U.S. from the Middle East or elsewhere, the price of the oil in the shipment can change almost daily. Ultimate per-gallon prices at the gas pump can reflect anticipated replacement cost more than actual production cost of the product on hand, AAA says.

Besides surveying for the AAA Fuel Gauge Report, Computer Petroleum Corp. publishes the National Petroleum Price Index, which monitors more than 50,000 daily wholesale and retail gasoline prices throughout the U.S. and Canada.

AAA is a not-for-profit federation of 150 motor clubs with more than 1,000 offices providing its nearly 32 million members in the U.S. and Canada with travel, insurance, financial and auto-related services.

MASON CITY, IA (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Workers at the 270-worker IMI Cornelius plant in Mason City, Iowa, voted by a margin of more than 2-1 yesterday for union representation with the United Steelworkers of America (USW) it was announced today.

USW District 33 organizer Mike Dinardo, who coordinated the successful organizing effort, said this campaign was prompted by management's poor treatment of hourly workers the desire to gain justice and dignity on the job.

"The workers wanted a voice," Dinardo said. "They have one now." The secret ballot election, overseen by the National Labor Relations Board, was held at the beverage dispenser-producing firm on Thursday. After the final ballots were cast, the votes were counted and the United Steelworkers were victorious by a 176 to 79 margin.

Dinardo said the employer hired professional anti-union consultants in an attempt to dissuade workers from a vote for union representation, but to no avail. More than 100 of the IMI Cornelius workers volunteered to become members of the in-plant organizing committee, taking an active role in the Steelworkers' campaign.

Key support for the union drive also came from the sister plant of the Iowa facility, which is located in Anoka, Minn. Employees from that location volunteered to come to Iowa to help in the organizing drive. Workers in the Minnesota IMI Cornelius plant are represented by USW Local 15199.

DALLAS (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Super Club Retail Entertainment (SCRE) has signed an agreement to purchase 15 retail video units from a subsidiary of Vestron which are located in New Jersey and currently operate under the name "The Video Store." Final closing of the transaction is expected within 30 days.

The existing regional management and store personnel will remain in place -- and overall management responsibility will be under the direction of Video Towne Entertainment, the Dayton-based subsidiary of Super Club. In making the announcement, Darrell Baldwin, CEO of Super Club, said: "Through a combination of new-store openings and the incorporation of 40 other Vestron units that we acquired earlier this year, Video Towne has grown from a 22-store chain when we purchased them in September of 1989 to an 86-store chain today. This acquisition will move them over the 100-store mark.

"During the past few months," he continued, "Video Towne has been successfully incorporating audio products into their market through a joint project between our audio and video speciality chains. All 15 of the New Jersey units produce high annual revenue streams from video rental and preliminary studies indicate that a high percentage of the new locations will be suitable for the retailing of audio products and video sell-through. Strategically speaking, we see this acquisition as a natural continuation of our expansion plans."

Markets serviced by The Video Store include: Morristown, North Brunswick, Livingston, Teaneck, Ramsey, Upper Montclair, and Randolph. Over time, it is expected that the stores will be renamed to reflect their relationship with Video Towne.

DEERFIELD BEACH, FL (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - CheckRobot Inc. (NASDAQ: CKRB) announced today that it had received a loan commitment from its largest stockholder, OmniCorp Holdings, Inc., to provide a credit facility of up to $2,500,000 to CheckRobot for working capital purposes. The loan is subject to the execution of definitive documents, and certain other conditions, which is scheduled to occur by Aug. 15, 1990.

Through May 1991, the company will be entitled to draw down monthly under the facility in the approximate amount of its budgeted cash requirements, as established by the company and OmniCorp, subject to the absence of material adverse changes in the company's business. Borrowings will bear interest at the prime rate of a bank, payable semi-annually. The loan will mature in May 1992 and repayment will be secured by a security interest in all of the company's assets.

In order to meet certain immediate cash needs of the company, OmniCorp advanced $200,000 to the company on Friday, Aug. 3. This advance is intended to be part of the credit facility, but in the interim will be secured by the pledge of the company's stock in Advanced Promotion Technologies, Inc.

In consideration for extending the credit facility, the company will grant to OmniCorp five-year warrants to purchase 2,500,000 shares of its common stock at an exercise price of $1.00 per share and additional five-year warrants to purchase 1,000,000 shares at an exercise price of $2.50 per share. Exercise of the $1.00 warrants would give OmniCorp ownership of slightly more than 50 percent of CheckRobot's voting stock, on a basis assuming conversion of all outstanding shares of CheckRobot's convertible preferred stock, including shares held by OmniCorp. Exercise of options and warrants held by others could reduce OmniCorp's percentage ownership.

In addition, CheckRobot's board of directors will be expanded to 11 members and OmniCorp will have the right to designate a majority of the directors, so long as it owns or has the right to acquire more than 50 percent of CheckRobot's outstanding Common Stock.

Other than a $500,000 bank loan, (which will be repaid in part with the proceeds of the facility) and the private placement of $500,000 of Preferred Stock, the company had been unable, during the last few months, to obtain financing from other sources sufficient to fund future operations. The company will continue to explore other financing avenues.

CheckRobot Inc. develops and markets ACM (R) automated checkout machines. The systems are designed to improve customer service and profitability for the supermarket industry. Using enhanced laser bar-code scanners and a proprietary merchandise security system, the ACM allows shoppers to quickly scan the check out merchandise before paying centrally located cashiers.

ATLANTA (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - KFF Management Inc., an Arby's franchisee in southern California, has converted a Wendy's restaurant in the ABC Entertainment Center in Century City, Calif., into an Arby's roast beef sandwich restaurant.

Completed in mid July, the new Arby's features nine "Touch 2000(R)" units a computerized, touch-sensitive ordering system developed jointly by Arby's, IBM and Management Information Support Inc.

The Century City restaurant is 3,872 square feet, with seating for 115 people. It has more Touch 2000 units than any other fast-food restaurant in the nation.

With Touch 2000, customers place their orders directly using a color touch-screen. As the food selection is touched on the color screen, it is processed through an IBM Personal System/2 (R) Model 30 computer and displayed on IBM monitors in the food preparation area. The touch-screen automatically indicates the selections made and keeps a running account of the cost of the order. The system is also multilingual, allowing customers to order in English, Spanish or other languages.

Arby's was the first fast-food chain to introduce a touch- screen ordering device. Currently, 35 Arby's across the country feature the system, and the chain expects to add 50 more units by the end of the year.

"Major technological innovations like Touch 2000 will become more common in the fast-food industry during the 1990s, since automation saves labor and food costs, provides faster service, and allows personnel to focus on providing hospitality," said William Brusslan, president of KFF.

Arby's is the world's largest roast beef sandwich chain, with appxoximately 2,300 restaurants located throughout the United States, Canada, Asia, the Middle East and the Caribbean. In 1989, Arby's added a record 239 new restaurants and surpassed the $1.3 billion mark in system-wide sales.

HOUSTON (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - The liquidation of retail merchandise at Sakowitz officially concluded at 7 p.m. last Saturday, with all but 20 odd items that fit on a six-foot table sold.

The eight-week event generated approximately $6.8 million in retail sales, according to Paul Buxbaum, executive vice president of Buxbaum, Ginsberg & Associates, the Encino, Calif.-based firm that ran the liquidation.

Sale of all remaining fixtures and equipment from the chain's five Texas stores will be concluded this week at the flagship Post Oak location in Houston. To date, fixture sales have raised over $500,000 at retail, Buxbaum said.

Assessing the sale's overall results, Buxbaum commented: "Results exceeded our expectations and were especially gratifying given current economic conditions in Texas. The return here was similar to what we got on the liquidation of the Joseph Magnin stores in California in 1985, which was one of our most successful sales.

"Apart from the great public response, we were also extremely pleased with the Sakowitz employees," he continued. "They're loyal, hardworking people whose cooperation was pivotal to the success of the sale."

Buxbaum noted that approximately 38 percent of the stores' inventory was sold at the initial 20 percent markdown, with a full 70 percent sold prior to going to 50 percent off.

Interestingly, the last men's suit in Sakowitz's inventory was sold to a long-time customer who claimed that his father purchased the first suit sold by Tobias Sakowitz in the original Galveston, Texas, store back in 1902. Houston resident William Donald Shephard purchased the last suit, which originally retailed for $815, for $24. "We figured that's about what his father would have paid for a suit back in 1902," Buxbaum said.

Buxbaum, Ginsberg began liquidating Sakowitz's five Texas stores in mid-June. The retailer, which filed for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection on May 4, continues to operate in a Cincinnati mall owned by parent company LJ Hooker Corp.

As of Aug. 3, 1990, 21,009,000 shares of the fund's common stock were outstanding.

Commenting upon the board's action, David H. DALLAS (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - American Airlines Inc. flew 7.2 billion revenue passenger miles in July, making it the third largest traffic volume month in the airline's history. Two of the top 10 traffic days, July 12 and July 26, occurred last month.

For the first seven months of the year, American's passenger traffic was up 4.3 percent.

On the cargo side, American continued its outstanding performance. In July freight alone increased 18.9 percent; for the seven-month period it was up 19.8 percent.

"There are some bright spots in the picture, in spite of the fact that overall passenger traffic was flat," said Michael W. Gunn, senior vice president-marketing. "Our international traffic increased 28.1 percent year over year. European traffic remains strong, and early results from our South American start-up, which began in July, are encouraging. In addition, July 1989 traffic was artificially inflated by the 'Kids Fly Free' promotion -- which was not repeated this summer."

American's available seat miles increased 7.2 percent in July, to 10.9 billion from 10.1 billion. Passenger boardings for the month were down 5.6 percent, to 6,575,230 from 6,964,833. The July system load factor of 66.8 percent was a 4.8 point drop from last year's 71.6 percent.

For the year-to-date period, American's revenue passenger miles were 44.16 billion, up 4.3 percent from last year's 42.32 billion. Available seat miles jumped 6.8 percent for the seven months, to 70.50 billion from 66.03 billion. The system load factor was down 1.5 points to 62.6 percent from 64.1 percent. Passenger boardings were up 1.8 percent to 42,453,151 from 41,682,156.

American's freight ton miles increased 18.9 percent in July, from 55.0 million to 65.5 million. System mail ton miles totalled 20.3 million in July, an 8.2 percent increase from 18.7 million a year ago.

Freight ton miles for the year-to-date period climbed 19.8 percent, to 430.0 million from 359.0 million. Mail ton miles were up 18.1 percent, to 154.3 million from 130.6 million.

"The expansion of our Central and South American routes that began in July will boost our international cargo traffic even further," said William R. Boesch, the airline's vice president-cargo. "Significant improvements in our cargo service are helping to lift our domestic business. The combined result is substantial growth in our cargo traffic overall."

ALEXANDRIA, VA (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Essex Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: ESEX) announced that it expects substantial conclusion by Sept. 30, 1990, of its involvement in the TRIDENT submarine logistics and maintenance planning data base development and support program.

This program accounted for approximately $2.6 million (20 percent) of first half 1990 revenues and approximately $5.0 million (17 percent) and $4.2 million (16 percent) of annual revenues in 1989 and 1988, respectively. Beginning with the fourth quarter of 1990, the company expects its revenues to be reduced accordingly pending replacement of such volume by other sources. This revenue loss will have proportionately unfavorable impacts upon earnings and absorption of non-operating expenses. Because diversification and downsizing efforts are now underway the company is unable to estimate further effects, if any, upon operating results.

The company's operations in Mechanicsburg, Pa., and Portsmouth, N.H., will be sharply reduced. Approximately 45 jobs (15 percent of Essex total workforce) will be affected. The company expects full recovery of all costs associated with the transition of this program to the prime contractor.

The company, performing initially as prime contractor to the Navy for six years, has been under subcontract to Electric Boat Division of General Dynamics (NYSE: GD) for seven years. General Dynamics is undertaking a transition of most of the remaining work to its various divisions. In the early 1980s, Essex yearly revenues from the TRIDENT program were nearly $7 million, amounting to 40 percent of annual revenues.

MINNEAPOLIS (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Medtronic, Inc. (NYSE: MDT) announced today that the U.S. Food and Drug Administration had approved commercial release of the new 18K catheter for coronary balloon angioplasty.

The 18K, which derives its name from gold plating on the inner spring-coil construction, is a 3.5 French over-the-wire device with refinements that increase performance and improve ease of handling. They are:

-- Improved balloon design that provides greater inflation consistency and returns easily to a tightly wrapped, low-profile pre- inflation diameter.

-- Shaft markers that help the physician estimate tip location before beginning fluoroscope tracking, thus reducing X-ray radiation.

-- An inside diameter designed to accommodate any guidewire up to 0.018 of an inch.

-- Enhance(TM) coating applied to the inner lumen and to the distal 30 cm. of the device. This lubricious coating facilitates smooth movement over the guidewire and easier access to the lesion once the 18K moves beyond the guiding catheter.

Medtronic also announced that clinical evaluation of two more new catheters is expected to begin this month. The Axxess(TM), a 3.4 French over-the-wire device, incorporates a new low-profile, low-compliance balloon material that allows precise control of balloon inflation in treating very tight lesions.

The Torx(TM), a fixed-wire device, is a 2.7 French catheter also using a low-profile, non-compliant balloon material. It features a steerable tip.

HOLMDEL, NJ (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Prudential policyholders can now receive bigger discounts on their auto insurance bill if their cars have driver side and passenger side safety devices.

Prudential Property and Casualty Insurance Co. (PRUPAC), a long-time vocal supporter of airbags, has offered a 30 percent discount for cars with driver and passenger side airbags since 1975. This established discount reduces the part of the premium that covers direct compensation injury to the occupant of the car.

With the announcement of an additional discount for cars having passenger side safety devices, Prudential becomes the first auto insurer to offer a discount of five percent of bodily injury liability premium for cars equipped with passenger side airbags and three percent for those with passenger side automatic belts.

"For the past 20 years, PRUPAC has been a strong supporter of airbags," comments Stephen R. Braswell, president. "Airbags are a smart purchase and anyone who's been protected by an airbag in an accident will attest that the cost of the airbag was insignificant when compared to their ability to prevent serious injury." Braswell continues, "In addition to the discounts for injury protection, our collision coverage automatically includes the replacement of a deployed airbag. We hope the extra incentives will encourage even more drivers to consider safety devices when they are car shopping."

Prudential Property and Casualty Insurance Co. is a wholly owned subsidiary of The Prudential Insurance Company of America. Its products -- car, home, boat and personal liability insurance -- are sold through more than 17,000 licensed agents throughout the country. ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Essex Corporation (NASDAQ-NMS: ESEX) reported consolidated revenues for the second quarter ended July 1, 1990, of $6,367,000 which were $987,000 or 13 percent lower than the $7,354,000 reported in the second quarter of 1989.

Consolidated quarterly revenues include $939,000 in 1990 and $825,000 in 1989 for its subsidiary, System Engineering and Development Corporation (SEDC), which was acquired June 1, 1989. Essex consolidated revenues for the first half of 1990 totalled $13,138,000 which was $415,000 or 3 percent lower than the $13,553,000 reported during 1989.

Without the SEDC revenues of $2,082,000 and $825,000 in first half 1990 and 1989, respectively, the company's revenues would have been $11,056,000 or 13 percent lower in 1990 versus 1989. A major factor in the sales volume decline was the completion by year end 1989 of Essex efforts as subcontractor to Boeing Corporation on its Navy aircraft maintenance trainer work.

Essex is reporting a net loss of $263,000, or 16 cents per share, for the second quarterly period of 1990, as contrasted to net income of $81,000, or 6 cents per share, in the 1989 second quarter period. For the first half, Essex is reporting a net loss of $460,000, or 28 cents per share, in 1990 versus net income of $110,000, or 8 cents per share, in the first half of 1989. The SEDC results showed a net loss for the first half of 1990 of approximately $501,000, or 31 cents per share, with a net loss of $283,000, or 17 cents per share, occurring in the second quarter of 1990. The SEDC results which are included in the 1989 figures showed a net loss for June 1989 of $51,000, or 4 cents per share.

Excluding SEDC, the company would have reported net income of $20,000, or 1 cent per share, in the second quarter of 1990 compared to $132,000, or 10 cents per share, in the same period in 1989. In the first half, the company would have reported net income of $41,000, or 3 cents per share, in 1990 versus $161,000, or 12 cents per share, in 1989. The company's decline in earnings was principally due to the substantial completion of the aircraft maintenance trainer program by year end 1989.

Primary elements of the SEDC first half loss in 1990 were core staff and facility expenses exceeding coverage from current business volume by $350,000 and acquisition-related amortization expenses of $163,000. In addition, SEDC increased its reserves by $80,000 (5 cents per share) in the second quarter of 1990 to fully reflect the tentative settlement agreement reached with the U.S. Attorney, District of Maryland, regarding allegations of mischarging on certain projects in years prior to the acquisition of SEDC by Essex. If the settlement is approved by the court, SEDC will pay a fine for which it believes it has now fully reserved.

Dr. Harry Letaw, chairman and chief executive officer, stated: "Despite major disruptions in programs and funding experienced by many of our government customers, Essex continues to find opportunities in this area on a selective basis. We are also gratified by our progress in commercializing publications and hardware products based upon our expertise in human technology and training. Added to this is growing market acceptance to Essex by SEDC. By strengthening and repositioning Essex, we have made progress necessary to achieve future profitability."

Established in 1969, Essex Corporation does business in systems effectiveness and information technology, designing, developing, manufacturing, selling and supporting products and systems for public, private and commercial customers. Primary fields of interest include systems engineering, interactive training programs, reliability and maintenance support, safety, error reduction and man-machine interface design, fitness-for-duty test systems and electronic and photonic information work stations. The firm employs a staff of over 300 at more than a dozen locations across the country.

Net income for the three months showed a loss of $38,124 ($.03 per share) compared to income of $76,951 ($.03 per share) for the second quarter last year. Shares outstanding were 1,415,200.

Revenues for the six-month period ended June 30, 1990, were $3,659,686 compared with $5,292,719 for this period in 1989. Net income showed a loss of $123,908 ($.09 per share) compared to income of $190,642 ($.08 per share) for the six-month period ended June 30, 1989.

Peter Dauchy, president of McCormick Capital, Inc., said, "Commission, clearing costs and interest expenses show reductions when comparing these periods in 1990 with 1989. And while other expenses also have been reduced, we are still in a period of investment spending with start-up and development costs incurred in establishing our own NASD Broker/Dealer subsidiary, McCormick Capital Investments, Inc. However, we look to this proprietary capability for the underwriting, distribution and sales of commodity pools to provide the company with better control and economy in bringing future offerings and to evolve into a fully functioning profit center.

Our major profit center, McCormick Futures Incorporated, one of the 125 clearing members firms of the Chicago Board of Trade, continues to produce excellent earnings which should be enhanced along with customer equity when McCormick Capital Investments markets future commodity pools."

Dauchy went on to say, "We continue to pursue lower interest payments through our buyback program of McCormick Capital subordinated notes, and during the second quarter of 1990 purchased in the open market $142,000 in par value of these notes bringing our total for the six months ended June 30, 1990, to $167,000."

McCormick Capital, Inc. is engaged in various aspects of the commodity futures and securities industry, including futures brokerage and organization and management of futures investment limited partnerships.

Revenues for the first half of 1990 were $18,001,833 compared to $18,449,504 in the same period last year. Net income was $2,864,040 or $.16 per share vs. $3,355,433 or $.18 per share in the comparable prior-year period.

Jack H-N Tseng, president, commented, "The second quarter continued to demonstrate the strong recovery that the company has made from the second half of 1989. Strong bookings and positive customer response continue for our new VGA products, based on the ET4000, which according to industry experts is the fastest and most sophisticated VGA controller available. Design 'wins' with the ET4000 have effectively doubled our VGA OEM customer base, and we expect significant additions to that base during the balance of the year."

Tseng continued, "Given the strong demand for ET4000 based products and the new OEM customers recently signed up, assuming we receive the necessary delivery of chips from our semiconductor manufacturers, the second half of the 1990, and particularly the fourth quarter when the full impact of ET4000 market share gains begin to be experienced, will be substantially ahead of last year's comparable periods and should compare favorably to the first half of 1990."

GREENWICH, Conn. (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - W.R. Berkley Corporation (NASDAQ: BKLY), an insurance holding company, today announced that an award had been rendered in an arbitration involving one of its subsidiaries and several of the subsidiary's former reinsurers. The reinsurers had denied coverage of losses paid by the subsidiary on surety bonds guaranteeing performance by investors in real estate limited partnerships, and had requested rescission of their contract. The arbitration panel denied the reinsurers' demand for complete rescission. However, it rendered an award which, if implemented, would result in the subsidiary recovering significantly less than the amount it demanded from the reinsurers.

As a result, Berkley estimated that it could face a charge against earnings of approximately $10 million ($.84 per share), on an after-tax basis. The charge, which is likely to affect third-quarter earnings, would result from the write-down of amounts previously reflected as reinsurance receivable. For the six months ended June 30, 1990, Berkley had net after-tax income of $26.9 million ($2.27 per share) and for the year ended Dec. 31, 1989, had net after-tax income of $55.8 million ($4.73 per share).

The company noted that the subsidiary's recovery of less than it had anticipated as a result of the arbitration would have no material impact on the subsidiary's operations or financial condition. The subsidiary ceased writing limited partnership surety bonds more than three years ago.

Robert S. Gorin, senior vice president-general counsel of Berkley, stated, "We are disappointed in the award and are presently considering our alternatives, including the possibility of appeal or other legal action."

W.R. Berkley Corporation is a holding company whose subsidiaries operate in three major segments of the insurance business: regional property casualty insurance; specialty lines of insurance (including excess and surplus lines, commercial transportation and reinsurance), and insurance services operations (including management of alternative insurance market mechanisms).

ST. LOUIS (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - General Dynamics (NYSE: GD) today announced that it will consolidate its Valley Systems and Pomona Divisions into a single business unit called the Air Defense Systems Division.

"The consolidation, effective immediately, is the result of declining business prospects in the defense industry," said Ralph Hawes, executive vice president -- missiles and electronics at General Dynamics.

Hawes said the expected result of consolidation activities and the erosion of the business base at the former Pomona and Valley Systems Divisions will be layoffs of 1,500 to 2,000 employees through the end of 1991. More than 600 of the layoffs will be caused by the elimination of duplicate jobs as the divisions are combined.

Michael C. Keel has been named corporate vice president and general manager of the new division. He had been corporate vice president and general manager of the Valley Systems Division since January 1988. Sterling Starr, who had been corporate vice president and general manager of the Pomona Division, will assist in the initial steps of the consolidation pending reassignment.

"While we all welcomed a diminished threat from the Soviet Union and the end of the Cold War, these changes have brought unfortunate personal economic consequences for many people in the U.S. defense industry," said Keel. "We very much regret that layoffs will be necessary, and we will try to cushion the impact by providing professional career consulting and placement assistance services to affected employees."

Pomona Division, located in Pomona, Calif., is approximately 16 miles west of Valley Systems, which is in Rancho Cucamonga, Calif. Pomona Division produces standard and sparrow missiles, and phalanx close-in weapon systems, while valley systems builds stinger and rolling airframe missiles for the U.S. military and its allies.

"In order to remain competitive in a declining market for missiles and other air defense systems, General Dynamics must more efficiently use its existing resources and reduce overhead," said Keel. "Between our Pomona and Rancho Cucamonga sites, we will have more capacity than is required to meet our future needs. However, we have not yet made any firm decisions to relocate any production lines."

The Pomona Division was formed in 1952 and Valley Systems was created in 1985 in response to the then expanding military market. Currently, the new Air Defense Systems Division will not only operate facilities in Pomona and Rancho Cucamonga, but also in New Mexico, Arizona, Arkansas and San Diego county.

With this consolidation, General Dynamics had eight divisions and six subsidiaries. The company is primarily engaged in the design, development and manufacture of highly sophisticated defense systems, including F-16 fighter aircraft, M1A1 Abrams tanks and Ohio- and Los Angeles-class submarines.

ELMIRA, N.Y. (AUG. 6) PR NEWSWIRE - Artistic Greetings Inc. (NASDAQ: ARTG) today announced earnings of $24,742 for the second quarter, ended June 30, 1990, versus earlier results of $60,547.

Stuart Komer, president and chairman, said earnings were in line with company projections that the second quarter would be flat from one year earlier.

Sales for the second quarter were $7,682,050, versus $4,198,735 for the previous year.

However, Komer said that more than $2 million of the jump in 1990 sales for the quarter was due to a contract expiration resulting in the discontinuation of a joint venture at the end of 1989. Prior to that time the joint venture sales were split approximately 50/50 between Artistic and its partner. Artistic continues to sell to the same market, but all sales dollars are booked by Artistic. The costs and profits of joint venture sales were also shared approximately equally, but now all accrue to Artistic. Consequently, Artistic's costs and profits are now greater per unit of product formerly sold by the joint venture.

Six month sales figures for Artistic were $18,911,645 versus $8,935,556, with much of the increase contributed to the discontinuation of the joint venture. Earnings for this first six months are $583,943 versus $351,970 for the year earlier.

(AUG. 6) UPI - Sources in Washington say President Bush has sent Defense Secretary Cheney to Saudi Arabia to try and convince King Fahd to allow U-S forces to land on Saudi soil. The Bush administration is concerned that Iraqi forces will NOT stop with their conquest of Kuwait, but will continue on to Saudi territory. The sources say Cheney will try to persuade Fahd to let American troops station on Saudi territory to stem a possible Iraqi attack.

The White House offered NO immediate comment on the reported Cheney trip. It also did NOT respond to a published report that says the president has ordered U-S agencies to work toward toppling Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein. Sources are quoted as saying that Bush O-K'd the new effort after C-I-A Director William Webster described Hussein as intent upon controlling the world oil market.

(AUG. 6) UPI - Chicago Cubs Manager Don Zimmer has been involved in more than 2,500 major-league games as a player and manager, but Sunday's victory over Montreal featured something even he hasn't seen before.

Shawon Dunston scored a run on a bizarre play in the seventh inning, helping the Cubs to their 3-1 victory and three-game sweep of the Expos.

With Chicago leading 2-1 in the seventh, Dunston singled and advanced to third on a sacrifice and a groundout. With Jerome Walton batting, Duntston took off for home but was tagged out by Montreal catcher Mike Fitzgerald.

While the Wrigley Field fans sighed, Dunston headed back to the dugout. But home plate umpire Harry Wendelstedt ruled Dunston safe because Fitzgerald stepped over the plate with the pitch on the way.

Fitgerald was charged with catcher's interference, giving Walton first base and allowing Dunston to score. After consulting the rule book after the game, pitcher Oil Can Boyd was given a balk.

Zimmer and Expos Manager Buck Rodgers agreed Wendelstedt made the correct call.

What Rodgers did see in the weekend series was his team being outscored 23-7 by the Cubs. He also witnessed a pitcher who evened his record after having a losing one at the All-Star break.

Greg Maddux, 4-8 at the break, hurled a five-hitter for his fifth straight win. Maddux, 9-9, struck out six and walked three in pitching his second complete game of the year.

In his last five starts, the 24-year-old right-hander has allowed just four earned runs and 28 hits and struck out 26 over 42 2-3 innings - an ERA of 0.84.

Boyd, 6-4, took his first loss since June 10, though he allowed just five hits in seven innings while striking out seven.

Trailing 1-0, the Cubs scored twice in the sixth. Walton walked and moved to second on Ryne Sandberg's deep fly to center, Mark Grace ripped an RBI double down the first-base line. Andre Dawson followed with an RBI triple.

Grace extended his hitting streak to 15 games and Dawson raised his average to .342 with two hits.

(AUG. 6) UPI - For Lance Johnson it was a matter of pretending. For Milwaukee, the result was all too real.

Johnson drove in three runs Sunday with a triple and a single to pace Chicago to a 6-1 victory over the reeling Brewers and give the White Sox a sweep of the five-game series.

With the score tied 1-1 in the fourth inning, Johnson laced a two-run single to put Chicago ahead to stay. Of Johnson's 40 RBI this season, 21 have come with two out.

''I pretend I'm leading off and there's nobody on base and just try to get a hit,'' Johnson said. ''If I don't, I make an out.''

The Brewers, however, cannot pretend - their record speaks for itself.

The club was swept in a five-game series at home for the first time and their 0-8 homestand was the worst in Brewers history.

Johnson wasn't in the best situation to begin the contest, but he made the most of it.

Johnson was a late addition to the lineup because hot-hitting Ivan Calderon had a jammed finger and was unable to play the outfield. Calderon who was 8 for 20 with three homers and eight RBI in the series, moved to designated hitter.

Jack McDowell, 7-6, tossed a five-hitter, needing just 89 pitches for his team-high third complete game of the season.

Chicago extended its lead to 6-1 in the seventh. Johnson belted an RBI triple, Ozzie Guillen contributed a run-scoring single, and Robin Ventura lofted a sacrifice fly.

Chicago took a 1-0 lead in the first inning on Calderon's RBI double and Milwaukee answered with a run in the first on Robin Yount's sacrifice fly.

Elsewhere in the American League, Detroit bombed Boston 7-2, New York clipped Cleveland 5-3, Oakland beat California 4-1, Seattle blanked Minnesota 4-0 and Toronto tripped Texas 6-4. Kansas City at Baltimore was postponed by rain.

At Boston, Dave Bergman stroked a two-run single and went 4 for 5 to help the Tigers snap a 10-game Fenway Park losing streak. Dan Petry, 9-7, posted his fourth win in his last five decisions. Jerry Don Gleaton notched his fifth save to help halt Boston's six-game winning streak. Mike Boddicker, 11-7, suffered the loss.

Yankees 5, Indians 3

At New York, Roberto Kelly hit a two-run home run in the bottom of the ninth inning to lift the Yankees. With one out, Wayne Tolleson reached on an infield single and Kelly followed by belting pitch from Steve Olin, 1-3. Greg Cadaret, 4-4, recorded two outs for the win.

At Anaheim, Calif., Rickey Henderson homered and Mark McGwire capped a three-run eighth inning with a two-run single. McGwire's two-out single broke up a tight pitching duel between Dave Stewart, 15-8, and California starter and loser Chuck Finley, 14-5. Dennis Eckersley notehed his 35th save.

Mariners 4, Twins 0

At Seattle, Billy Swift, Gene Harris and Keith Comstock combined on a three-hitter, also snapping the 25-game hitting streak of Minnesota's Brian Harper. Harris, 1-1, earned the victory after replacing Swift, who was hit on the forehead by a line drive. Comstock gained his first save. Minnesota starter Allan Anderson dropped to 4-15.

Blue Jays 6, Rangers 4

At Arlington, Texas, Fred McGriff scored the go-ahead run in the sixth inning and came up with two of Toronto's 12 hits off Nolan Ryan, 11-5, to help end the Rangers' six-game winning streak. John Cerutti, 8-7, gained the victory and Tom Henke collected his 23rd save.

(AUG. 6) UPI - The South African government will meet with the African National Congress today for what's expected to be a crucial round of talks. President Frederik de Klerk's Cabinet and A-N-C leader Nelson Mandela are expected to announce an agreement on two A-N-C pre-conditions to substantive talks.

The backlog to enter the busy Houston Ship Channel was eased somewhat yesterday as officials allowed inbound and outbound ships to move. Coast Guard skimmers continued to scoop up oil from last week's 700-thousand-gallon spill. State officials were planning to use more oil-eating bacteria to break up the oil.

The jury in the drug and perjury trial of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry resumes deliberations today. The jurors have been granted access to more than 100 exhibits used in six-and-a-half weeks of testimony after requesting the evidence from Judge Thomas Penfield Jackson Saturday.

Witness testimony in the New York City case of the Central Park jogger who was raped and beaten is expected to end today with Manhattan's chief sex crimes prosecutor taking the stand. On Friday, state Supreme Court Justice Thomas Galligan told jurors they could expect to get the case this week.

For the first time since the end of World War Two, West Germany's Lufthansa airlines landed in West Berlin yesterday. The airline was granted special permission to land in the divided city to pick up Soviet children who were returning home after spending their summer vacation in East Germany.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (AUG. 6) UPI - President Corazon Aquino met Monday with a U.S. Peace Corps volunteer and a Japanese aid worker who were released by Communist guerrillas last week in the central island of Negros after about two months in captivity.

''We talked about what I went through and I thanked her for the help that the government provided in getting us released,'' said Timothy Swanson, 27 of Cheyenne, Wyo., who was held by guerrillas for 50 days.

With Swanson was Fumio Mizuno, 36, training director of the Tokyo-based private aid group Organization for Industrial, Spiritual and Cultural Advancement. He spent 65 days in captivity.

Swanson and Mizuno were released separately Thursday in the rugged municipalities where they were kidnapped on Negros Island, 300 miles south of Manila.

The New People's Army, the 19,000-strong armed wing of the outlawed Communist Party of the Philippines, said the two were kidnapped on suspicion they were spying on the 21-year insurgent movement.

U.S. officials said they discovered Swanson's abduction while enforcing Washington's directive suspending the 29-year Peace Corps program in the Philippines and withdrawing 261 volunteers. The action was taken after information was received that the NPA planned to kill or kidnap volunteers.

Swanson, who speaks the native Ilongo dialect, dismissed suggestions he went voluntarily June 13 with the guerrillas, some of whom were reported to be his friends.

''There are grievances, but I don't think they justify what the NPA's are doing,'' Swanson said when asked if he thought the rebels were fighting for a just cause.

He said he was fed rice and salt most of the time, although several times his meal included fish, vegetables and meat. He said the guerrillas attempted to get him to accept their point of view during his captivity, which he said was ''generally boring.''

Swanson was accompanied by U.S. Ambassador Nicholas Platt during the call on Aquino at the presidential palace.

Platt told reporters the Peace Corps program would be resumed ''as soon as it is safe and agreeable to the government.''

NEW YORK (AUG. 6) UPI - An 5-month-old boy was shot in the head Monday while sleeping in a Manhattan apartment, the city's sixth shooting incident involving a child in just over two weeks, authorities said.

The infant, who was not identified, was sleeping in a third-floor apartment when a bullet ripped through the wall of an adjacent apartment and struck the child at 12:35 a.m., said Sgt. Mary Wrensen, a police spokeswoman.

The boy was taken to nearby St. Luke's Hospital, where he was in serious but stable condition and expected to survive, hospital officials said.

Three adults and another child were in the apartment at the time of the shooting, but only the 5-month-old was injured, Wrensen said.

The shooting incident was the sixth in 16 days to injure or kill a child in New York City, police said.

On July 22, a 9-year-old girl was killed by a stray bullet as she slept in a car on a Brooklyn street. Three days later, also in Brooklyn, a 1-year-old and her father were shot to death as they sat in a car together.

A 3-year-old Brooklyn child was shot to death July 26 in his family's apartment as he lay sleeping. A 9-month-old in the Bronx was killed July 29 as he played in a walker behind a door hit by gunfire.

A 16-month-old was wounded Saturday during a holdup in a Bronx apartment house.

CANBERRA, AUSTRALIA (AUG. 6) UPI - Cardinal Jaime Sin, Roman Catholic Archbishop of the Philippines, said Monday his country would not have a problem with AIDS if it were not for prostitutes working near U.S. military bases.

''We do not have any AIDS problems in other parts of the country except near where the Americans are,'' the cardinal said at the International Conference on AIDS in Asia and the Pacific.

''This is because of prostitution and so we are trying our best to do everything we can in order to solve prostitution. But it is because of poverty. They are poor people,'' he said. ''These women don't like to be prostitutes but they sometimes don't have any alternative.''

Sin's claims brought a strong defense of U.S. personnel by the president of the American Foundation for AIDS Research, Dr. Mervyn Silverman.

Silverman said the servicemen and the prostitutes could share the blame and said the U.S. military personnel were ''probably less risky than any other military people in the world.''

''I don't know whether it's the chicken and the egg here. The fact that it's near the bases could mean that the prostitutes or the Americans brought it,'' Silverman said.

''The Americans traveling around the world as part of the U.S. Army and Air Force have all been tested and are not allowed to travel if they are tested positive,'' Silverman said.

Silverman said that it did not mean they could not get infected while overseas.

''I'm not saying we are not spreading it. Believe me, I am not here as an apologist in defense of the United States,'' he said. ''As a military group (U.S. personnel) are probably less risky than others.''

Dr. Mechai Viravaidya, secretary-general of the Population and Community Development Association of Thailand, gave qualified support to Silverman's defense.

''I think the safest military person is the American military person and the safest prostitute is the Dutch and Australian prostitute,'' Viravaidya said.

(AUG. 6) UPI - Heavy rain in Texas kept rivers and streams flooded Monday as scattered storms swept the Southern Plains, while light showers teased drought-parched California and crews battled raging forest fires in the Northwest.

Isolated storms rolled through eastern New Mexico and southwestern Arkansas Monday as heavy rains in west Texas prompted flood warnings for the Pecos, Rio Grande and Devils rivers, the National Weather Service said.

Heavy rainfall flooded rivers and streams in southwest Texas, closing roads in Val Verde County. Widely scattered storms, some with heavy rain, pushed over the northeast Mexican coast near Brownsville.

The showers were remnants of a band of powerful thunderstorms that battered north Texas Sunday, leaving some Fort Worth streets under 4 feet of water. Several vehicles stalled in the high water, and Fort Worth firefighters were forced to rescue the occupants of one car, authorities said.

A severe thunderstorm dumped up to 4 inches of rain on Fort Worth Sunday afternoon. ''Sometimes you don't get that much rain in that amount of time during a hurricane,'' said Greg Dial, a NWS meteorologist.

Officials said slick roads caused a Dallas Fire Department engine to skid into a ditch and overturn Sunday. No one was injured, officials said.

Southern California, suffering from a four-year drought, got a teasing taste of rain Sunday night from a series of thunderstorms that moved across the area. Trace amounts of rain were reported in Los Angeles and nearby suburbs.

Thunderstorms rattled along the Colorado River in Arizona, bringing strong winds and heavy rains before moving toward Southern California.

In the Pacific Northwest, marine air brought relief to western Washington and Oregon after a weekend of temperatures in the high 80s. Temperatures dropped to 58 in Seattle overnight under fair skies, and stood at 62 in Portland, Ore.

Firefighters in central Oregon were battling a 3,300-acre forest fire that burned down 28 homes and forced thousands of people to flee the area. More than 2,000 homes were evacuated over the weekend, officials said.

More than 1,400 firefighters using 122 engines and 70 bulldozers fought the flames through the night, officials said.

A cold front pushed through the South, causing scattered thundershowers in parts of Georgia, Alabama and Mississippi. Early morning temperatures ranged from 73 in Knoxville, Tenn. 73, to 79 in Charleston, S.C. and 80 in Miami.

Heavy showers moved into western Connecticut and the Berkshires of Massachusetts Monday morning, with additional showers predicted for later in the day as temperatures headed into the 70s across most of the Northeast.

ST. LOUIS (AUG. 6) UPI - Singer Janet Jackson collapsed during a concert and was treated at a hospital and released, officials said Monday.

The singer had finished her third song Sunday when she went backstage and passed out, said her publicist, Maureen O'Connor.

She said Jackson collapsed and was taken to the emergency room at Barnes

Hospital for tests. She was released about two hours later, a hospital spokeswoman said. The hospital did not release the nature of Jackson's illness.

O'Connor said Jackson has been on the road for several months and was exhausted.

Jackson canceled a performance Thursday night in Lexington, Ky., and Sunday's show was postponed for one night.

Jackson's tour is scheduled to run through Sept. 4, O'Connor said.

BUFFALO, NY (AUG. 6) UPI - For the second time in less than two weeks, a Niagara Falls tourist helicopter pilot saved someone in danger of being swept over falls.

Rainbow Helicopter pilot and owner David Banks plucked Alice Goldman, 38 of Ontario from the Niagara River less than 50 yards from the brink.

Goldman allegedly attempted suicide by jumping in the river from a pedestrian bridge on Grand Island on the American side of the falls, Niagara Parks police said.

Goldman changed her mind once in the water but was unable to swim to shore and grabbed some rocks about 30 yards from the brink, police said.

Police called Banks, who hovered 4 feet above the river, allowing Goldman to grab the chopper's landing struts so Banks could haul her to shore.

''There's no doubt that the rescue would have been very difficult without the helicopter,'' said Niagara Parks Police Officer Ron Privett.

Residents living near the falls have become critical of the tourist choppers, saying their noise is a nuisance.

Police said Goldman was on a weekend leave from Toronto mental health facility and was taken to Niagara Falls Memorial Hospital for psychiatric evaluation after the rescue. Police said she will not be charged with jumping into the river, an act which usually results in a fine and arrest for perpetrators who survive.

It was the second time in 10 days that Banks has assisted authorities in a rescue. Ten days ago, a 21-foot-boat went beyond warning signs and got hung up on a reef in the Niagara River.

Banks flew out over the boat, dropped a line, and towed the boat to safety.

(AUG. 6) UPI - Stock prices on the Tokyo Stock Exchange plummeted Monday in a selling wave triggered by the continued tension in the Middle East.

The blue-chip Nikkei Average of 225 selected issues, which tumbled 729.42 points Friday, plunged 916.23 points - or 3.1 percent - to 28,599.53, its lowest closing level since April 17.

The broader-based Tokyo Stock Exchange Price Index of all major listed shares fell 76.14 points to 2,098.53.

Trading was slow with turnover estimated at around 330 million shares, down from 431 million shares last Friday.

The decline was almost across the board, as losers hammered advances 997 to 30, with only 34 issues escaping the sell off.

Analysts said index-linked selling sent all sectors sharply lower as no one wanted to buy until Iraq's intentions become clear.

With the lack of buyers, program-selling aimed at squeezing profits from discrepancies between the spot and futures markets was particularly potent the brokers said.

Ogawa predicted that even if the situation in Kuwait cools down, higher oil prices will hurt the market. If tensions escalate, then the Nikkei will test the 28,000 level, which is this year's low.

On the trading floor, shipbuildings like Mitsubishi Heavy Industries and Hitachi Zosen declined along with constructions and electricals such as Matsushita Electric Industrial and Sony.

Steels like Nippon Steel and Kawasaki Steel also weakened along with trading houses, electric power and financial issues.

Some textiles and foods were among the day's few scattered gainers.

Elsewhere in Asia, stocks suffered their worst single day loss in more than a year on the Hong Kong Stock Exchange as investors dumped issues in reaction to a drop of more than 900 points on Japan's stock market. Trading was described as active.

The blue-chip Hang Seng Index, which fell 53.23 points Friday, plunged 248.97 points - or 7.4 percent of its market value - to 3,107.98.

Prices in Japan tumbled 916.23 points as investors reacted to Japan's Prime Minister Toshiki Kaifu's decision to join the West in condeming Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Volume was heavy as an estimated 2.8 billion shares changed hands, compared with 1.8 billion shares Friday.

Brokers said rumors of the Kuwait Investment Office selling off many of its blue chips increased the selling pressure.

Since Iraqi troops took control of Kuwait on August 2, the Hang Seng Index has lost more than 360 points.

Stocks went into a tail spin from the opening bell, diving more than 130 points in the first few minutes of trading.

Short rallies lacked conviction and the market continued to sink throughout the morning.

The trend held over into afternoon trading and stocks were unable to make up any ground, analysts said.

Monday's plunge was the largest drop on the Hang Seng Index since June 5, 1989, when stocks lost more than 581 points following China's brutal crackdown on mainland democracy advocates.

In Singapore, stocks closed sharply lower in heavy trading on the Singapore Stock Exchange as investors remained cautious over the situation in Middle East.

The key Straits Times Industrial Index, which fell 21.45 points Friday, dived 96.03 points to 1,415.02. The narrower All Singapore Index plunged 27.17 points to 403.13.

An estimated 103.3 million shares chnaged hands, compared with 121.7 million shares Friday.

Analysts said heavy selling was evident in the market with blue chips and quality stocks bearing the blunt of the plunge.

Overseas fund managers were loading off their portfolios, market watchers said.

Analysts said the market would remain violatile and react in tandem with other overseas bourses to the tension in Middle East.

The word for the day to get out of the market, one market watcher added.

On the trading floor, only one issue managed to escape the selloff. United Overseas Land Loan gained a few cents.

Singapore Airlines foreign shares paced the declinig issues followed by Singapore Airline common stock, Development Bank of Singapore foreign shares and Singapore Press foreign shares.

Meanwhile in Manila, stock prices eased moderately in active trading on the Manila Stock Exchange.

Continuing declines of global markets, which resulted from Iraq's invansion of Kuwait last week, analysts said provided enough selling pressure to drag prices lower.

The closely-watched Manila Composite Stock Index of 25 selected issues dropped 25.62 points or 2.77 percent to 896.71.

In Seoul, stock prices on the Korea Stock Exchnage fell sharply for the fourth consecutive session. Trading was described as slow.

The Korean Composite Stock Index fell 10.02 points to 661.40 its lowest closing level of the year.

Declines far outnumbered advances 565 to 118, while 141 issues remained unchanged.

Analysts said prices fell as the recent price hikes in global oil would work against the local ecomony.

In Australia, local investors dumped blue chip stocks on the Sydney Sharemarket in the wake of the sharp decline in Tokyo.

The blue-chip All Ordinaries Index, which fell 27.2 points Friday, tumbled 41.5 points - or 2.6 percent - to 1,548.2.

An estimated 96.2 million shares changed hands, compared with 122 million shares Friday.

Analysts said prices fell across the board from the opening bell sparked by higher global oil prices which could lift inflation internationally and depress economic growth.

Market watchers said the Japanese, almost totally dependent on the Middle East for their oil, are terrified Iraq will push into Saudi Arabia, or even worse, lead to a major disruption of oil supplies.

Investors ditched industrials and resources in hectic trading.

On the trading floor, in blue chips sector, News Corp. tumbled 65 cents to $11.60, Brambles lost 20 cents to $14.40, TNT lost 10 cents to $2.48, Adsteam eased 15 cents to $3.75 and ICI fell 5 cents on $4.25.

In the banking sector, Westpac Bank fell 14 cents to $5, NAB Bank lost 24 cents to $6.56 and ANZ Bank lost 10 cents to $5.

Leading oil producer BHP crumbled 10 cents to $10.85, Santos Oil gained 14 cents to $4.88 and Woodside Oil remained unchanged at $3.12.

In the mining sector, Pacific Placer lost 13 cents to $3.15, Highlands Gold eased 3 cents to $1.76, GMK Mining lost 5 cents to 93 cents a share and Poseidon Mining fell 6 cents to $2.30.

In New Zealand, stock prices fell sharply in light trading as declines on international markets in the wake of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait sapped local investor confidence.

The closely watched Barclays Share Price Index tumbled 48.06 points to 1,716.89.

In Johannesburg, stocks turned mixed in light trading on the Johannesburg Stock exchange, as local investors adopted a wait-and-see attitude after gold shares surged last week following the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Gold was pegged at $378.75 to $379.25 an ounce.

The All Gold Index was reported at 1651.0, fractionally higher than Friday's close at 1646.7.

Among heavyweights, Vaal Reefs slipped, South Vaal eased and while Hartees edged higher.

De Beers and Anglo American both lost ground.

On the industrial board, Barlows eased along with Iscor.

(AUG. 6) UPI - The 45th anniversary of the atomic bombing of Hiroshima , Japan, was remembered today with a ceremony at the Peace Memorial Park. 55-thousand people gathered at the park and honored those who died in the bombing with a silent prayer for peace. During a speech, Hiroshima's mayor called for an end to nuclear weapons and praised super-power efforts toward disarmament.

A five-month-old boy is in serious condition in a New York hospital after being shot in the head early this morning as he slept in a Manhattan apartment. Police say this is the sixth shooting incident involving a child in New York City just over two weeks. The baby was hit by a bullet fired from the apartment next door. Hospital officials say the infant is expected to survive.

The color of U-S currency could take on a different hue. Congress is considering legislation that would order the Treasury Department to study the option of changing the color or size of money to thwart drug dealers or money launderers. The Drug Enforcement Agency also is actively pursuing the idea. American money has NOT had a design change since 1927.

Heavy rains drenched Texas this morning, keeping rivers and streams flooded after storms yesterday left some Fort Worth streets under four feet of water. Light scattered showers didN'T do much to quench a four-year-old drought in California. Heavy showers also moved into western Connecticut and the Berkeshires of Massachusetts this morning. Cooler air is bringing relief to the Great Lakes and Pacific Northwest.

Shizuka Fukita, former general manager of Kobe's Systems Engineering Department, will serve as president of the new venture.

Shin Ohkura, a director of Texas Instruments Japan Ltd.. has been named vice president of KTI Semiconductor, the companies said.

LONDON (AUG. 6) UPI - Stock prices were broadly lower in brisk trading at midday on the London International stock exchange as worries over increasing oil prices gripped investors.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which fell 19.9 points Friday, was down 60.4 points or about 2.6 percent to 2,224.2. The narrower top 30 industrial average was down 51.1 points to 1,742.3.

Volume amounted to around 378 million shares compared with 290 million shares traded during the same period Friday.

Analysts said prices fell across a broad front amid rapidly rising price of global oil - or ''stagflation'' - coupled with worries of inflation in the British economy.

Brent crude oil for September delivery surged $3 a barrel around midday to $26.40 a barrel from $23.40 a barrel late Friday.

Analysts noted few large investors entered the market, instead, they preferred to stay on the sidelines beause of the unsettling influence of the oil crisis.

On the local economic front, the Central Statistical Office reported Britain's retail sales volume fell a revised 2.6 percent in June from May but was up 1.1 percent from June 1989.

Analysts noted the report went almost unnoticed by investors.

In an active oil patch, Shell Oil eased 11 cents to $8.89, Burmah Oil fell 14 cents to $11.18, Ultramar fell 13 cents to $6.30, Enterprise Oil gained 5 cents to $12.38, British Petroleum added 4 cents to $6.60, London & SCottish Marine Oil gained 14 cents to $8.66 and British Gas gained 2 cents to $4.23.

Among the some of the day's other highlights, Imperial Chemical Industries tumbled 97 cents to $17.02 and Barclays Bank PLC fell 22 cents to $6.55.

Elsewhere in Europe, in Frankfurt, stock prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange were broadly lower at midday in active trading.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which lost 28.44 points Friday, was off 90.01 points to 1,750.93.

Traders said prices fell due to the crisis in the Middle East.

PARIS (AUG. 6) UPI - Former CIA Director Stansfield Turner said in an interview published Monday that the United States does not have the military capability to intervene in the Persian Gulf.

Turner told the Paris newspaper Liberation a naval blockade of Iraq is possible but only if all Western and gulf countries take part.

He also said it was necessary for Saudi Arabia and Turkey to cut off the pipelines that transport Iraqi oil to the Mediterranean and Red seas through their territories. Both countries, fearing Iraqi reprisals, have not taken taken such a step.

Turner said the United States ''can do nothing for the moment against a well-armed military of 1 million men,'' adding that a naval operation against Iraq, while possible, would take weeks to prepare.

''Our base should be the sea,'' Turner said. ''It is necessary to transport aircraft carriers and bombers squadrons to the gulf. It would be possible to attack Iraqi targets from the aircraft carriers.''

He said it would also be possible to fly in airborne divisions but warned it would take at least half a million men to ensure the success of such an operation.

Turner said U.S. policy makers had made a mistake by emphasizing a land war in Europe when many experts have been saying for years that the gulf ''is vital to the free world.''

GALVESTON, TX (AUG. 6) UPI - Coast Guard officials Monday said wind shifts pushed much of the remaining 700,000 gallons of spilled oil away from the shore and back into Galveston Bay as crews worked to protect sensitive marshlands.

''From our estimates and the contractors' estimates, we have recovered at least 315,000 gallons of oil,'' said Coast Guard Petty Officer Rich Mueller. ''But the guessing game then becomes how much of what was left is evaporated or dissipated. That we don't know.''

The Coast Guard Monday planned to survey the bay by helicopter to locate the oil that had been pushed back out into the bay and to estimate the size of the remaining spill.

Capt. Tom Greene Sunday predicted cleanup efforts would take another week and that the total cost would reach $5 million. Five streams of oil, as long as 300 yards, drifted up to 2 miles into the bay after northeast winds pushed the oil offshore late Sunday, he said.

''We saw that some oil escaped and was carried back out,'' Greene said. ''Our priority was to get it off the water before it moved farther east.''

Coast Guard crews and private contractors have released about 1,500 feet of plastic deflection boom at Point Barrow, north of Houston Point, to prevent oil from seeping into wildlife refuges northeast.

Dead crabs, mussels and other small marine animals have been found along Houston Point shores.

State officials Monday planned to use more oil-eating microbes on marshlands there. Bioremediation crews Sunday used the microbes to break up oil threatening environmentally sensitive Merril Marsh near the mouth of Cedar Bayou in the northern reaches of the bay.

In bioremediation, natural microbes reduce the oil to a fatty substance that sinks and is eaten by fish. When the oil is gone, the microbes die.

''If the microbes can degrade the oil fast enough, hopefully the crabs and other animals will come back before permanent damage is done,'' said B.J. ''Buck'' Wynne, chairman of the Texas Water Commission.

''We're talking about oil on a living organic system,'' he said. ''Whether we can mitigate it enough to where the community can come back, I don't know. It's in pretty bad shape now.''

The bioremediation is a joint effort of the Coast Guard, the Texas General Land Office, Texas Water Commission and Environmental Protection Agency.

Contractors continued using skimmers on the water and vacuum trucks on the beaches around the bay to scoop up the oil spilled in the collision of a Greek tanker and three barges July 28.

Petty Officer Mark Sedwick said the area of greatest environmental concern remains the upper reaches of the bay.

''Basically, it's from the Houston Point area to Point Barrow, up near Trinity Bay,'' Sedwick said.

The Texas Department of Health Authorities reopened portions of Galveston Bay to fin fishing Saturday but the bay, a rich source of oysters, remained closed to shellfishing.

(AUG. 6) UPI - A woman involved in a scandal that rocked the Roman Catholic Archdiocese in Atlanta has hired a church-specialist lawyer to handle possible legal action. Lawyer Tony Fontana of Abbeville, Louisiana, says he met yesterday with 27-year-old Vicki Long in Atlanta. It was revealed last week that Archbishop, Eugene Marino resigned after being romantically linked with Long. Another priest also confessed by letter to a similar involvement with Long.

A Niagara Falls tourist helicopter pilot saved a woman in danger of being swept over the falls during the weekend. Pilot David Banks plucked Alice Goldman from the Niagara River, less than 50 yards from the brink. Police say the woman attempted suicide by jumping into the river from a bridge on the American side of the falls. Police say the woman changed her mind, but was UNable to swim to shore and grabbed some rocks until the chopper hauled her to land. It's the second time in 10 days that Banks has assisted police in a rescue.

TOKYO (AUG. 6) UPI - Mitsubishi Motors Corp. said Monday it would start a automobile manufacturing venture in Venezuela this month.

Mitsubishi, the Japanese affiliate of Chrysler Corp., said the new company will assemble Mitsubishi's passenger models Galan and Delica with components supplied by the Japanese automaker.

Venezuela currently bans imports of finished vehicles.

The venture will produce about 3,500 units in 1991, the company said.

Production is expected to eventually include small-sized trucks, the company said.

The company said the new firm, MMC Auto Motriz de Venezuela S.A. of Caracas, will be 49 percent owned by Consorcio Inversionista Fabril S.A. of Venezuela. Holding company Nissho Iwai will take a 42 percent stake.

The remaining 9 percent of the company will be owned by the Japan International Development Organization Ltd., a partnership between the government-financed Overseas Economic Cooperation Fund and 98 private companies.

Mitsubishi said it will have no stake in the venture but is expected to provide technological assistance in manufacturing Mitsubishi cars.

The new venture plans to export cars it produces to Costa Rica, the Dominican Republic, Chile and other Latin American and Caribbean nations in the future, the company said.

PARIS (AUG. 6) UPI - Iraq's ambassador to France said Monday any threats against his country or the Iraqi-installed government in Kuwait could stall the withdrawal of Iraqi forces from the tiny gulf emirate.

The ambassador, Abdel Razzak al Hashimi, also said Iraq has no intention of invading Saudi Arabia, ''with whom we have solid fraternal relations and which cannot in any way be compared to Kuwait, where there has been a change of government, which demanded our assistance.''

He said any threats against Iraq or the new government in Kuwait could lead to delays in the withdrawal of the estimated 100,000 Iraqi troops that invaded oil-rich Kuwait Thursday.

Iraq previously announced that its troops would begin to pull out of Sunday but Western governments were skeptical that any such operation is under way.

In a statement he read before television cameras, the ambassador said there was absolutely no chance that the former Kuwaiti rulers could return to power.

''If certain governments continue to believe that the overthrown regime can be re-established, they should know that they are deluding themselves '' al Hashimi said. ''The former regime of the al-Sabah family is finished. Kuwait today has a new government.''

The emir of Kuwait, Sheikh Jabbar al Ahmad al Sabah, is in exile in Saudi Arabia, where he fled when the Iraqi army invaded his oil-rich kingdom Thursday.

France, meanwhile, stepped up its economic pressure on Iraq on Monday by banning the use of French cargo ships for Iraqi oil.

In a statement, the French foreign ministry also said it would refuse permission to dock at French ports for any ships at sea carrying Iraqi petroleum or under Iraqi control, including Kuwaiti tankers.

Informed sources said at least one tanker under contract to Shell Oil expected at Le Havre in mid-August would not be allowed to dock in France.

The European Economic Community on Saturday voted to boycott Iraqi oil. France took the additional step of making the embargo immediate, including shipments already at sea.

Ambassador al Hashimi lashed out against France's adoption of sanctions against the government of President Saddam Hussein, including an embargo on imports of Iraqi petroleum and a halt to arms deliveries.

He said the adoption of sanctions ''harms the major interests France has in Iraq, not only immediately but also in the future, particularly in the future.''

''Iraq notes with much regret and surprise the position taken by the French government,'' the ambassador added.

He said the adoption of economic sanctions against Iraq and Kuwait ''risk aggravating the situation and increasing tensions.'' He said those countries that adopt sanctions will suffer in the long term.

HOUSTON (AUG. 6) UPI - Domestic drilling declined again last week while offshore drilling increased, energy industry surveys showed Monday.

Baker Hughes Inc. reported U.S. drilling dropped to 966 rotary rigs last week from 996 the previous week and compared to 1,022 rigs two weeks earlier. Activity was up from the same week last year when 874 domestic rigs operated.

Offshore Data Services said marine drilling activity increased last week in most areas of the world. Officials said that was coincidental to the crisis in the Middle East. Company planning and government permits for offshore drilling take too much time for such quick reaction.

The Gulf of Mexico led the way as six more rigs went back to work in those waters. That boosted the utilization rate in the Gulf to 65.4 percent with 140 rigs working out of a fleet of 214.

One more rig went to work in European waters, already a hot market, hiking the utilization rate there to 94.9 percent with 129 rigs working out of a fleet of 136.

Two more rigs went to work in other areas, increasing the worldwide utilization rate for mobile offshore rigs to 81.2 percent with 543 rigs working out of a fleet of 669.

Other relevant rig counts include 147 in Louisiana last week compared with 140 the week before and 142 the same week one year ago; Oklahoma, 124, 134 and 117; Texas, 306, 322 and 256; and Canada, 117, 122 and 198.

BEND, OR (AUG. 6) UPI - Weary, heat-baked firefighters struggled Monday to douse a 3,300-acre wildfire that raged through a central Oregon resort area, burning about 28 homes as thousands of residents anxiously waited to return home.

Temperatures close to 100 degrees were expected again Monday, hampering the efforts of firefighters tackling the blaze, which was 50 percent contained Sunday night. Authorities did not expect to contain the fire until at least Tuesday evening. They hoped to have it under control by late Thursday.

More than 2,000 homes were evacuated during the weekend in a residential and resort area southwest of Bend as the fire spread to an area 6 miles long and a mile wide, state Department of Forestry spokeswoman Doug Decker said Monday.

Authorities said 21 to 28 homes, some worth up to $300,000, burned down in three subdivisions nestled among scenic lodgepole pines in central Oregon's high desert country, about 120 miles southeast of Portland.

Oregon forestry officials said the Awbrey Hall blaze had caused at least $5 million damage and was the state's most destructive wildfire in 60 years, since a fire that hit Bandon on the southern Oregon coast in the 1930s.

The exact number of evacuees was uncertain because many people went to stay with friends or relatives rather than Red Cross shelters set up at high schools but estimates ranged from 3,000 to 5,000.

Many evacuated residents spent a nervous night wondering if their homes would be standing when they returned.

''They did not have all the addresses so there's going to be a lot of anxiety and surprise,'' Decker said. ''There's going to be some shocks over there.''

Others already had the bad news.

''There's my Bronco and there's my boat,'' resident Tom Davidad said Sunday as he returned to the area to survey the remains. ''I had a three-car garage.''

More than 1,400 firefighters using 122 engines and 70 bulldozers fought the flames through the night, to be joined in daylight hours by 10 helicopters and six air tankers. Crews kept the fire from making any major runs Sunday night and there were no reports of injuries.

Fire crews with bulldozers carved a 100-foot-wide perimeter around the fire late Sunday, but authorities held off on declaring containment due to more hot, dry and windy conditions expected Monday, with a chance of thunderstorms.

''They're not really feeling too secure so they will mop up the perimeter to 300 feet and are fire-safing 200 to 400 feet around the structures,'' said Department of Forestry spokesman Tom Ferguson.

The cause of the fire was under investigation but Decker said there was no lightning in the area when the blaze broke Saturday afternoon on a ridge in Shevlin Park, 6 miles southwest of Bend.

The federal government approved a request by Gov. Neil Goldschmidt for federal aid to cover about 40 percent of the costs of fighting the fire. Phil Cogan, Northwest manager of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, said Sunday the fire had cost $646,000 to fight so far.

Goldschmidt declared Deschutes County a disaster area Saturday night and the state fire marshal invoked the state's Conflagration Act, which allows rural fire departments to leave their jurisdictions to aid another district.

The blaze came just weeks after state forestry officials warned that thousands of homes around Oregon were in danger from wildfires due to very dry fuels too close to structures after four years of drought conditions.

''Some of us believed that this was a distinct possibility,'' Decker said.

The area near Mount Bachelor, a popular ski resort, has lured thousands of retirees and other new residents in recent years.

Millworker Ron Beckingham was evacuated Sunday from his home near Bend, a town of about 20,000 where the fire's smoke cast a hazy pall. He said he returned home to find Red Cross volunteers telling people to leave immediately.

''We came down to Bend High School and have been treated like gold,'' he said. ''People are just super. We're eating really well and being well taken care of.''

AMSTERDAM, NETHERLANDS (AUG. 6) UPI - Holland Monday imposed an embargo on Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil shipments to the huge European oil depots in the major port of Rotterdam, a Foreign Ministry spokesman announced.

''In keeping with the European Community decisions last Saturday we have decided to ban oil shipments to Rotterdam from these two countries,'' Foreign Ministry spokesman Robbert van Lanschot told United Press International.

The EC decided last Saturday to ban oil imports from Iraq and Kuwait and to freeze the two countries' assets in member countries.

Holland's port of Rotterdam, the world's largest oil harbor, handles 85 million tons of crude oil a year, some 12 million tons of which comes from Kuwait or Iraq.

Cargo already paid for or under way to Rotterdam was not affected by the embargo.

''We are banning all new shipments. Not those already contracted for, paid and under way,'' van Lanschot said.

The spokesman added that all Iraqi and Kuwaiti assets in the Netherlands were to be frozen. The sum of Iraqi assets was not known but said to be ''limited.'' Kuwait is believed to have assets of $1.3 billion.

An Economics Ministry spokesman said all main petroleum companies operating in Holland were to meet late Monday in Rotterdam to discuss the Dutch and EC embargo.

(AUG. 6) UPI - Diplomats Monday reported a full-scale Saudi military mobilization and the deployment of armored columns next to a neutral oil-extraction zone separating Saudi Arabia from Iraqi-occupied Kuwait. Iraqi forces reportedly were poised in Kuwait on the other side of the neutral zone.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney arrived Monday in Saudi Arabia, where sources said he would seek permission to place U.S. troops in the strategic Persian Gulf nation to repel Iraqi forces should they launch an attack from Kuwait.

President Bush sent Cheney to the Middle East after expressing skepticism over Iraq's claim Sunday it had begun withdrawing the 100,000-strong force that invaded Kuwait Thursday and seized the tiny sheikhdom over an oil and border dispute.

The West has pressured Turkey and Saudi Arabia to shut down oil pipelines carrying Iraqi oil to protest the Kuwait invasion but Iraq announced that it had shut one pipeline itself and restricted another.

The Washington Post, quoting anonymous sources, reported Monday Bush ordered U.S. agencies to begin secretly planning to destabilize and topple Saddam. The Post quoted the sources as saying Bush initiated the effort after meetings in which CIA Director William Webster described Saddam as a ruthless leader determined to control world oil prices.

In the aftermath of the report, the Iraqi News Agency reported about 4 million people were being trained in evacuation drills in Baghdad, Basra and other cities, because authorities wanted to be prepared for any attack.

It said thousands of members of the ruling Ba'ath Party had been armed to defend the nation as tens of thousands of civilians flocked to join the military.

''The door will remain open for more volunteers,'' INA quoted the Baghdad commander of the newly created Kuwaiti Popular Army.

In New York, the U.N. Security Council scheduled a meeting Monday to resume consultations on sanctions against Iraq, which had accused Kuwait of stealing oil from a border well and of driving up oil prices through overproduction. The proposed sanctions included an oil embargo against Iraq.

In Ankara, Turkey, officials said Iraq had closed one of its two oil pipelines crossing Turkey to the Mediterranean and cut the flow in the second to 70 percent. Iraq informed Turkey the cuts were ordered because of reduced demand.

Two pipelines from the Kirkuk oilfields in northern Iraq carry a total of 1.5 million barrels a day to Yumurtalik, some 275 miles south of Ankara.

On the New York Stock Exchange, the Dow Industrials plunged more than 100 points on opening Monday before rebounding slightly, as the tension in the Middle East sparked a barrage of selling.

In Tokyo, Japan's decision to join Western allies in imposing economic sanctions on Iraq sent the key Nikkei stock market average down more than 900 points Monday at the conclusion of trading, a drop of more than 3 percent.

Japan said Sunday it would embargo oil imports from Iraq and suspend billions of dollars of aid to the cash-strapped country.

Reports from Kuwait belied Baghdad's claims its troops had started to withdraw and said military movement began on the Saudi side of the border.

Western and Middle East diplomats based in Riyadh said Saudi armored columns moved north overnight and were deployed on the edge of a neutral oil-extraction zone administered by Kuwait and also possessed by Saudi Arabia.

The Saudi movements apparently were aimed at showing Riyadh's resolve to resist Iraqi President Saddam Hussein.

''The armored columns have not crossed the border into the neutral zone, but their reconnaissance units went in and came out last night,'' a Middle Eastern diplomat said.

One report said between 200 and 300 tanks were involved in the maneuvers.

The contested area is shared by Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, and sits on the Persian Gulf. A second zone in the desert to the west is administered by Iraq and Saudi Arabia.

The Saudi air force was at its highest state of alert, the diplomats reported.

Saudi Arabian news services announced a full mobilization of the nation's armed forces, which has about 95,000 troops and top-range fighters supplied by the United States.

The services said Saudi officials had authorized Saudi youths of military service age to carry arms, and that all reserves had been called up.

BOSTON (AUG. 6) UPI - A man apparently obsessed with the late actress Marilyn Monroe called police and claimed responsibility for spray-painting graffiti on a newly dedicated statue of President John F. Kennedy, officials said Monday.

The vandaliam, discovered Sunday, included a white splotch of spray paint on the forehead of the 8-foot bronze statue and the word ''murderer'' on the memorial's granite base.

The defacement took place on the 28th anniversary of Monroe's death by suicide. The blond sexpot has been linked romantically to Kennedy in some published reports in recent years.

''The individual that did this was one sick turkey,'' Capitol Police Lt. Paul McDonald told the Boston Herald. ''Many tourists have come up today and been shocked and dismayed.''

The man telephoned Capitol Police early Sunday morning ''ranting that (Kennedy) 'is a murderer, the statue is a disgrace,''' said McDonald. The caller also mentioned Monroe's death, he said.

Capitol Police Capt. Paul Mahoney said the caller, if arrested, would be charged with malicious destruction of property, which could be a felony depending on the amount of damage.

Workers were hosing the spray paint off the base of the statue Monday morning.

''We've got the conservator (of the statue) coming to look at it and we've got a call in to the artist to come and look at it,'' said Greg Arnold, superintendent of state buildings. ''We're only addressing the base. As far as the statue, we're going to let the conservator do it.''

The statue, which depicts a standing Kennedy striding forward on the Statehouse lawn, was dedicated May 29 on what would have been Kennedy's 73rd birthday. His widow, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, and daughter Caroline Kennedy Schlossberg, joined the president's youngest brother, Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., at the dedication.

(AUG. 6) UPI - Fire authorities say a wildfire raging in central Oregon probably will NOT be contained until this evening at the earliest. The 33-hundred-acre blaze has destroyed nearly 30 homes in an area southwest of the town of Bend. More than two-thousand homes were evacuated during the weekend as the flames spread.

Coast Guard officials say shifting winds pushed much of the remaining 700-thousand gallons of spilled oil away from the Texas shore and back to Galveston Bay. The Coast Guard plans to survey the bay by helicopter today to locate and estimate the amount of oil remaining.

A federal jury is deliberating a fourth day, trying to decide the fate of Washington, D-C, Mayor Marion Barry. Jurors held a rare session during the weekend trying to reach a verdict on all 14 drug and perjury counts against Barry. If convicted, Barry could get a maximum 26 years in jail and face nearly two-Million dollars in fines.

New York police say a bullet tore through the wall of a Harlem apartment today, hitting a five-month-old baby in the forehead as he slept. The infant is hosptialized in critical condition but is expected to live. The latest incident is the city's sixth random shooting of a child in recent weeks.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - U.S. Marines sent into war-torn Liberia have evacuated 62 Americans, two Italians, a Canadian and eight Liberians from the West African country but some 300 Americans remain, apparently voluntarily, U.S. officials said Monday.

''They've had three weeks or more to get out of there, so I guess they want to stay,'' a Pentagon spokesman said.

No shots were fired during the U.S. evacuation, officials said.

President Bush ordered some of the 2,400 Marines on four U.S. warships off the coast of Liberia, including the helicopter carrier USS Saipan, to move into the capital of Monrovia and secure the U.S. Embassy.

With two U.S. Harrier jets providing cover, 15 helicopters carried 255 combat Marines into Monrovia at about 5 a.m. EDT Sunday to ''safeguard lives ... and provide additional security for those (Americans) who remain '' White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said.

By midday Monday, the Marines had evacuated 62 Americans - 51 U.S. government employees and 11 private citizens - along with eight Liberian dependents of Americans, two Italians and a Canadian, the Pentagon said.

Of those evacuated Americans, 35 were flown to Freetown in neighboring Sierra Leone and then on to London, where travel arrangements were being made for travel to the United States.

''Marine Corps helicopters will continue to ferry back and forth from the U.S. Embassy to the USS Saipan at unspecified times,'' the Pentagon said.

The State Department said the ''drawdown'' of embassy staff was successful and that 41 embassy personnel, including the U.S. ambassador, will remain in Monrovia.

In addition, 237 of the combat Marines will remain at the U.S. Embassy ''as long as necessary to ensure the safety of U.S. citizens in that country,'' Fitzwater said.

U.S. personnel were evacuated from the embassy and two communications sites.

About 300 Americans still remain in Liberia, the scene of fighting between government troops and two rebel groups, the State Department said.

Bush decided Saturday to send the Marines into Liberia after rebel faction leader Prince Johnson threatened to arrest Americans and other foreigners to provoke international intervention in the 6-month-old civil war.

The Marine unit's mission was to secure the U.S. Embassy, remove workers from two Voice of America transmitter sites and evacuate Americans wishing to leave.

Fitzwater said the United States informed Liberian President Samuel Doe of the operation beforehand. Doe was told the United States had no intention to intervene or take sides in the war, Fitzwater said.

But he could not confirm whether the United States had been able to notify Johnson's breakaway rebel faction or the original rebel group headed by Charles Taylor, now a bitter rival of Johnson's.

Johnson, whose troops have occupied much of the city in their battle to oust Doe, had said he told his men to single out American, British, Lebanese and Indian civilians for detention first. He said the arrests would start Monday.

Liberia was founded in 1822 by former U.S. black slaves who settled there with the assistance of the American Colonization Society, a private organization dedicated to the African repatriation of freed slaves. It became a republic on July 26, 1847.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - Responding to a request from Philippine President Corazon Aquino to President Bush, the U.S. Export-Import Bank Monday offered a $170 million guarantee to support $200 million in American exports slated to help the Asian country rebuild in the wake of the devastating July 15 earthquake.

Commercial bank loans extended under the guarantee facility will carry a 10-year repayment term, and will finance 85 percent of the costs of U.S. goods and services needed to restore buildings, schools, bridges, water systems, road and other infrastructure, the bank said.

The earthquake caused about $900 million in damage in Northern and Central Luzon.

The Philippines is the Eximbank's fourth largest customer, and owes the bank $1.1 billion.

NEW YORK (AUG. 6) UPI - Corporate profits have declined for four consecutive quarters, reflecting a weakness in the U.S. economy that analysts expect will not turn around soon, according to a Wall Street Journal quarterly review of corporate earnings.

In the second quarter, net income of 639 major corporations fell 11 percent from a year earlier, while after-tax earnings on continuing operations fell 7 percent, a Journal survey showed Monday.

Analysts said companies are moving to shore up profit margins by holding down labor costs through slower hiring.

Earnings fell for autos, banks, thrfits and steel in the second quarter, while oil companies and the computer industry posted mixed performances.

''Below average economic growth will hold profits essentially flat over much of the 1990-92 period,'' according to the consulting firm of DRI-McGraw-Hill in Lexington, Mass. ''Although no recession is expected soon, neither is a boom.''

CHICAGO (AUG. 6) UPI - The grain market was mostly higher at midmorning Monday on the Chicago Board of Trade, although gains were limited by sharply lower prices on the New York Stock Exchange.

Soybeans rallied to session highs within a few minutes of the opening bell in active trading. Some of the demand was based on inflationary fears due to the tension in the Middle East and higher oil prices.

Soybean meal was higher on reports of strong bids on European markets.

Corn was fractionally higher on spillover from the soybean pit but gains were limited by fairly active commercial selling.

Cool weather across the Midwest provided underlying support for corn and soybeans. Record low temperatures for the date were reported overnight in the western Corn Belt.

Even so, traders said the corn and soybean crops remain in good condition.

Follow-through selling and the continued lack of export business pressured wheat.

Country movement was light during the weekend.

The midmorning prices:

Corn Sep 2.49 3/4 up 1/4; Dec 2.45 1/4 up 1; Mar 2.53 1/4 up 1.

Soybeans Aug 5.89 1/2 up 3; Sep 5.93 3/4 up 3 1/4; Nov 6.01 1/2 up 4; Jan 6.12 up 4 1/4.

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AUG. 6) UPI - Yugoslavia's inflation rate rose to 2.2 percent in July, fueled by large increases in utility rates, housing and transportation, the government said Monday.

Branko Maricic, deputy secretary for prices, said the utility, housing and transportation price hikes were implemented by the administrations of Yugoslavia's six republics following the end of freezes imposed by federal authorities.

The freezes were implemented late last year as part of Prime Minister Ante Markovic's program to cool raging inflation, which totaled 2,600 percent for 1989.

The freezes were relaxed June 22 after anti-inflation policies resulted in tightening of the domestic money supply, liberalizing of import policies and making the dinar the first convertible currency in Eastern Europe.

The policy produced negative inflation rates beginning in May, and Maricic said that with the service sector price rises excluded, the level for July would have been minus 1.7 percent.

Higher housing and utility costs accounted for 66 percent of total inflation for July, which averaged 2.2 percent for all sectors, said Maricic. Public transport fare increases accounted for 22 percent of the total, he added.

He said the government expected monthly inflation rates of less than 1 percent for the rest of the year.

For the period of July 1989 to July 1990, he said, retail prices had risen 1,112 percent, service sector prices increased 1,276 percent and industrial producer prices rose 1,063 percent.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - The government Monday approved a drug to treat a breathing disorder that affects about 50,000 babies born prematurely in the United States each year and kills some 5,000 infants.

The Food and Drug Administration approved a synthetic form of a naturally occurring substance known as surfactant to treat babies born with respiratory distress syndrome.

The drug has been shown to reduce by as much as half the death rate of very prematurely born infants, researchers said.

''This will make a significant impact on neonatal and infant mortality in the United States,'' said Dr. Anthony Corbet, an associate professor at Baylor College of Medicine in Houston who has studied the substance.

Respiratory distress syndrome is a condition that most commonly afflicts premature babies, whose lungs tend to be underdeveloped and often collapse. The syndrome is the leading cause of death and disability among premature infants.

Of about 250,000 infants born prematurely each year in the United States, up to 50,000 have the condition and about 5,000 die. In 1963, a baby boy born to President Kennedy and his wife died of the condition.

Surfactant is a naturally occurring foamy substance that coats the inside of the lungs and keeps them from collapsing when the infant exhales. Premature babies often lack surfactant.

Dr. John Clements of the University of California at San Francisco developed a synthetic form of surfactant in powdered form that can be mixed with sterile water and administered to a baby's lungs through a tube in the windpipe.

Surfactant can be given in up to three doses immediately after birth to high-risk infants weighing less than 3 pounds or in two doses to infants who have developed the disease, the FDA said.

Burroughs Wellcome Co. of Research Triangle Park, N.C., which licensed the drug from Clements, will distribute surfactant under the trade name Exosurf Neonatal.

The drug was designated an ''orphan drug'' by the FDA under a program that provides incentives for development and production of drugs and other medical products to treat conditions affecting small numbers of patients.

The FDA made the drug available experimentally in July 1989. The company applied for general approval in February.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AUG. 6) UPI - Lotus Development Corp., a computer software maker caught in a profit squeeze, said it began laying off 40 employees Monday as part of cost-saving measures that include a hiring freeze through much of the company.

Most of the cuts will be in Massachusetts, where Lotus employs about 2,000 of its 3,100-person workforce, said spokesman Richard Eckel.

However, Lotus said it will continue to hire for some parts of the company and expects to add from 150 to 200 new people this year, which ''should result in a net increase in the number'' of employees, Eckel said.

Also, Eckel said the cuts alone would result in a net decrease in jobs of fewer than 20, because some job descriptions are being changed and will be filled with new hires.

Eckel said the cuts and hiring freeze resulted from ''new priorities based on where we're headed'' though he said he does not know what those priorities are. As for the company's recent disclosure it would have lower earnings in the current quarter than a year ago, Eckel said ''obviously, I can't say it's completely unrelated, but it's that and looking at the changing needs of the business.''

HO CHI MINH CITY, VIETNAM (AUG. 6) UPI - Vietnamese authorities arrested more than 30 ethnic Vietnamese, including some allegedly trained by the CIA, in a campaign against agents trying to destabilize the communist regime, an official source said Monday.

But officials and legal sources said a recent security crackdown in Vietnam has included far fewer arrests than the thousands charged by Western human rights groups.

Vietnamese officials and media reports, meanwhile, said gradual progress but no swift breakthrough was anticipated in the first U.S.-Vietnamese talks on Cambodia.

''If we have a good first step, then the following steps are a matter of time,'' said Tran Bach Dang, a senior political adviser to Communist Party leader Nguyen Van Linh.

Dang, who conferred with Linh last week, said in an interview he expected progress in Monday's talks in New York between the Vietnamese ambassador to the United Nations, Trinh Xuan Lang, and Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Kenneth Quinn.

The talks, the first bilateral meeting on Cambodia between the two former wartime foes, follow the announcement of a new U.S. policy on Cambodia that ends diplomatic support for the three-party resistance coalition fighting the Vietnamese-installed government in Phnom Penh.

A Vietnamese carrying a foreign passport was arrested last month at Ho Chi Minh City's Tan Son Nhut Airport with 17.6 pounds of gold meant to finance sabotage activities, a senior Communist Party official who asked not to be identified said Monday.

''He had the gold, a list of names and instructions on sabotage,'' the official said, but declined to say whether the unidentified suspect would be formally charged.

He said about 30 other Vietnamese exiles, some armed, were arrested in mid-June in the Central Highlands region around Dalat, about 150 miles north of Ho Chi Minh City.

He said the dissidents infiltrated through Cambodia and Laos from camps in Thailand after training by the CIA. He said they appeared to belong to a California group known as the National United Front for the Liberation of Vietnam.

The group was responsible for at least two previous armed attempts to infiltrate into Vietnam through Laos.

Lao and Vietnamese army troops smashed the two attempts, killing dozens of the intruders and capturing 115 others in 1987 and 1989. The prisoners were returned to Vietnam for trial and punishment.

The party official, however, said there was unlikely to be any public trial of the most recent group, as most had already been moved to labor camps.

He said the infiltration along with activities of other anti-government groups had endangered security in the highlands.

For the past several months, he said, security authorities have banned most foreigners from traveling to the area.

Independent sources said part of the security problem in the area was caused by unemployed former Vietnamese soldiers who have turned to armed robbery in the area following their return from fighting in Cambodia.

Vietnamese security agencies have stepped up controls on foreign visitors, especially overseas Vietnamese, because of a belief the CIA has mounted efforts to overthrow the Vietnamese Communist Party in mass protests such as those in Eastern Europe.

Official media have repeatedly warned against such a plot and reported the seizure of more than 3,000 subversive documents.

The security campaign has included the arrest or investigation of a number of Catholic intellectuals and dissident communists.

One government official estimated the number of arrests in Ho Chi Minh City at fewer than 100, with a smaller number in the rest of the country.

That is far fewer than the 16,000 arrests charged by the International League for Human Rights in testimony before the U.N. Human Rights Committee in Geneva last month.

Independent legal sources also said the human rights group was mistaken.

Some Communist Party officials believe the still-powerful security agencies have been overenthusiastic in their hunt for anti-government activists.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - Sen. Ted Stevens, R-Alaska, Monday predicted the Persian Gulf crisis could cause long lines at the gasoline pump by Christmas, but suggested quick Senate action on his bill to open Alaska's North Slope to exploration might soften the blow.

Stevens met with reporters before returning to the state for the August recess and used the occasion to promote his legislation that has been stalled since before the Exxon Valdez ran aground in Price William Sound, fouling Alaska's shoreline with millions of gallons of crude oil.

It would open about 1 million acres of environmentally fragile coastal plain east of the Prudhoe Bay field to exploration.

Stevens said many in the oil industry think the area, if there is oil there, has reserves that would exceed those of Saudi Arabia. And he suggested that in anticipation of finding oil there the flow of the Prudhoe Bay field could be boosted to make up for shortfalls in oil caused by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait.

Exploration in the region, he said, has been stalled since 1980, even though three separate environmental studies have cleared the effort.

''If I'm right there's going to be gas lines by Christmas and when people (senators) come back here next year, if they don't pass this bill before then, next year they're going to be looking places and mandating the development of places like the Outer Continental Shelf and public lands,'' said Stevens.

But, he said, if his bill is passed, U.S. supplies would be increased. He also noted that Prudhoe Bay production is gradually declining.

''If we haven't learned a lesson from this then I say we will just have ignored the warning like at Pearl Harbor. This is just as much of a situation for the United States as was the warning at Pearl Harbor, totally ignored,'' said Stevens.

''We're in a war of reserves, military reserves and oil reserves. If we put an economic embargo on (Iraqi leader Saddam) Hussein and Iraq, the question is how long can the world maintain that. Do we have the (oil) reserves to maintain it, the reserves to say, 'Let's not any of us buy the substantial amount of oil he has under his control,''' said Stevens.

He said motorists should not be angry at service station operators for raising prices, noting that they must buy replacement gasoline for their tanks at prices that have been driven up by the Iraqi invasion and for purely market reasons must recoup their higher costs.

Even though a station owner may have tanks full of gasoline that cost him $1 per gallon, he must charge more at the pump when the replacement gasoline costs him $1.20 a gallon.

Stevens expressed the opinion that Hussein is aiming to drive the price of Persian Gulf oil up to $30 a barrel.

September contracts began the day up $2.51 to $27, reflecting concern over the unresolved crisis in the Middle East.

The price of crude oil futures for September delivery soared above the $26-a-barrel level by mid-afternoon Friday but retreated later in the day on a reassuring statement by Soviet Foreign Minister Eduard Shevardnadze conveying an Iraqi pledge that Baghdad would remove its troops from Kuwait during the weekend.

But when the market opened, there was no evidence of withdrawal, and major industrialized nations had announced an embargo of Iraqi oil.

The New York market followed an even stronger price surge in London, where the widely traded British Brent from the North Sea was quoted at $27.30 a barrel, compared with a close of $22.70 a barrel Friday.

MANILA, PHILIPPINES (AUG. 6) UPI - President Corazon Aquino said Monday rebel soldiers had been circulating handbills threatening another coup attempt and that the military was taking measures to surpress the possible uprising.

Aquino said armed forces chief Gen. Renato de Villa had reported that rightwing elements were distributing handbills threatening a weekend coup.

''He informed me that all necessary measures were being undertaken in order to prevent another coup attempt,'' Aquino said at a regularly scheduled news conference.

Maj. Gen. Cesar Nazareno, chief of the Philippine Constabulary, said special forces had been placed on alert but denied news reports that a maximum state of preparedness has been called for the 159,000-member armed forces.

''We are not really expecting any destabilization from these ultra-rightists,'' Nazareno said. ''Their capability remains on the terrorist level - abduction, kidnapping, bombing.''

He said he did not think the rebel soldiers could mount another rebellion on the scale of the Dec. 1-9 uprising last year in which 119 people were killed and more than 500 were injured.

The December coup attempt was the sixth and worst insurrection against Aquino since she took office four years ago in a popular uprising.

The coup rumors are being fueled by a widening rift between the armed forces and the National Bureau of Investigation over the July 10 killing of army Col. Rolando de Guzman and two of his aides.

The NBI said de Guzman was a drug trafficker caught with $10 million worth of heroin during a sting operation that erupted in a ''shoot-out.'' The military said de Guzman's slaying was a ''cold-blooded rubout.''

The NBI is headed by retired Manila Police chief Gen. Alfredo Lim, who helped Aquino crush the December coup attempt.

Also in the Philippines Monday, gunmen shot and killed a high ranking police officer and his driver in the southern port city of Davao. Authorities could not immediately determine if the slayings were the work of communist New Peoples Army guerrillas, who have been responsible for the assassinations of police officials in the past.

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (AUG. 6) UPI - The wife of African National Congress President Oliver Tambo returned home from 30 years in exile Monday, but her husband remained in London undergoing medical treatment for a stroke he suffered a year ago.

Dozens of ANC members, among them black leader Nelson Mandela's wife, Winnie, turned out to greet Adelaide Tambo on her arrival to attend the launch of the ANC's Women's League, in the Indian Ocean port city of Durban planned for Thursday.

Mrs. Tambo's arrival coincided with the start of an important round of talks between the ANC and the government Monday aimed at clearing obstacles still standing in the way of formal power-sharing negotiations.

The Sunday Times reported that Tambo, president of the ANC for 23 years, is expected to surrender leadership in December, when the ANC holds its first annual conference in 30 years in South Africa following the movement's unbanning in February.

Mandela is deputy president of the ANC, but he would not automatically assume the presidency. The ANC congress will decide the issue of leadership.

The 72-year-old Tambo suffered a stroke in August 1989 in exile in Lusaka.

ANC spokeswoman Gill Marcus said Tambo did not return with his wife to avoid interrupting his medical treament, but she said the ANC president would return for the December ANC meeting to deliver an address.

''We know there has been lots of speculation,'' Marcus of the rumors Tambo will officially step down in advance of the first election inside South Africa of an ANC leader since Nobel Peace Prize winner Albert Luthuli was voted president in 1952.

''Obviously, he's not well, but as far as we're concerned it has never come up for discussion.''

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - The government said Monday it would lift its agricultural quarantine on parts of four southern California counties because it has been at least 14 weeks since Mediterranean fruit flies were found in those areas.

Enough time has elapsed, the Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service said, to give officials confidence that the areas were free of the destructive pest and safely could be removed from the quarantine.

State and federal officials have been battling an outbreak of the Medfly for the past year. The Mediterranean fruit fly is one of the world's most destructive agricultural pests, attacking 260 verieties of fruits, vegetables and nuts. Officials say it could cause billions of dollars in damage if it became established in the United States.

The inspection service said no flies have been found since last Nov. 5 in the Sylmar area of Los Angeles County, last Jan. 10 in the Garden Grove area of Orange County, last April 12 in Riverside County, or last April 25 in the San Bernardino City area of San Bernardino County.

As a result, quarantines were being lifted for those areas, the service said. Agricultural quarantines prohibit shipment of produce that could harbor a pest unless the material is inspected or proven to be safe.

The inspection service announcement came four days after California officials said they believed they were nearing the end of the battle against the Medfly. They said no Medflies have been found in the past three weeks.

Offsetting its announcement on the Medfly, the inspection service said discovery of Oriental fruit flies, a species related to the Medfly, had prompted an expansion of a quarantine area in Los Angeles County.

Nine Oriental fruit flies were found from July 9-12 in an area that includes Lynwood, South Gate, Downey, Paramont, Compton, Willowbrook and Watts. The region will be added to other sections of Los Angeles and Orange counties already under quarantine for the Oriental fly, the service said.

The Oriental fruit fly attacks many of the same plants that are targets of the Medfly.

(AUG. 6) UPI - The Iraqi News Agency says about four-Million people are practicing evacuation drills in the capital of Baghdad and other cities to prepare for a possible attack. The agency also says tens of thousands of civilians have joined the military following the nation's invasion of Kuwait. The agency quotes a military commander as saying the door is open ''for more volunteers.''

In New York, the U-N Security Council is meeting today to review proposed sanctions against Iraq that could include an oil embargo against Baghdad. Before invading Kuwait, Iraq accused the tiny emirate of stealing oil from a border well and driving up prices by glutting the market. Iraq today closed one pipeline to the Mediterranean, citing reduced demand.

U-S officials say about 300 Americans remain in Liberia, one day after President Bush sent in U-S Marines to evacuate those who wanted to leave. The officials say the marines evacuated 62 Americans, two Italians, a Canadian and eight Liberians from the war-torn West African country. A Pentagon spokesman says the Americans still in Liberia apparently have decided to stay.

The Bonn government says it will investigate allegations that more than 100 West German companies illegally exported military equipment to Iraq. Word of the probe comes after a weekly news magazine cited numerous incidents in which West German firms allegedly delivered military equipment to Iraq, despite export restrictions. West German firms are prohibited from selling military goods to Iraq... and need the government's permission to export any parts which could be used for military purposes.

DETROIT (AUG. 6) UPI - An American Honda Motor Co. spokesman said Monday a report the automaker would enter the light-duty truck market and raise its U.S. vehicle sales to 1.5 million units a year by the mid-1990s was untrue.

''We have not announced plans to enter the truck market in any way whatsoever,'' company spokesman Kurt Antonias said, although he added ''Honda is studying these segments very carefully because they are potentially huge markets.''

The trade publication Ward's Automotive Reports quoted Thomas Elliot, executive vice president of auto sales operations at American Honda, as saying Honda intends to enter the U.S. truck market, which has become one of the most competitive segments of the industry. Over a third of all vehicle sales comprised of minivans, sport utility vehicles and pickup trucks.

''Eventually, we want to be in every segment of the market with the possible exception of full-size,'' Elliott told Ward's during a preview of its Acura NSX sports car last week. ''We believe that by just entering the light truck market, we can get a 5 to 6 percent share.''

But Antonias said that does not mean Honda has concrete plans to enter the market at this time.

Honda also never publicly stated its sales goals for the mid-1990s, Antonias insisted. ''We have only said that we are looking at 1 million sales a year by the early 1990s. We never said anything other than 1 million,'' he said.

Ward's, in its latest weekly issue, said Honda is gearing up to sell about 1.5 million vehicles a year in the U.S. market, which would be up over 50 percent from current projected sales of 840,000 Honda and Acura cars for 1990.

Those aggressive sales targets would also require that Honda add production capacity equal to the output of two more plants, Ward's said. Honda's North American capacity is now about 600,000 units, while its imports from Japan are likely to remain under 425,000.

Ward's said Honda is likely to enter the truck market with a compact minivan, but it is still unclear whether it would be imported from Japan or built domestically at a new plant, since Honda is already using its North American capacity and its allotment of imports.

Honda executives also said a joint venture, like the one between Ford Motor Co. and Nissan Motor Co. to produce a minivan at an Ohio plant, ''is not in the cards,'' Ward's said.

Such a minivan would also likely be based on an existing front-drive car platform and be powered by a V6 engine, with one company official telling Ward's that ''a four-cylinder engine just isn't competitive'' - an apparent shot at archrival Toyota Motor Co., which recently unveiled its Previa minivan that is powered by a 16-valve engine with four cylinders.

Continuing tensions in the Middle East are fueling an upward surge in crude oil prices. The price of crude oil futures for September delivery soared more than two dollars and 50 cents- to the 27-dollar-a-barrel mark- at the opening of the New York Mercantile Exhange. Industry analyst Steve Platt in Chicago says it's impossible to predict what direction the market will take since political developments in the Mideast now dominate the oil market.

ATHENS, GREECE (AUG. 6) UPI - Iran said Monday turbulence in the world oil market caused by the Iraq-Kuwait crisis was temporary and asked OPEC member-states to stick to their production quotas, the official Islamic Republic News Agency reported.

Iranian Oil Minister Gholamreza Aqazadeh told reporters in Tehran the industrialized states would fall back on their oil reserves during the crisis to tide over shortages in the market caused by a possible halt or slowdown in Iraqi and Kuwaiti exports, INRA said.

Aqazadeh, who played a leading role in the ministerial conference of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries in Geneva last month, said the turbulence in the world oil market was temporary and ''should not affect long-term policies'' of the cartel.

He called on other members to ''preserve their restraint'' and stick to the quotas set at the last OPEC conference. ''Iran will continue to observe its official output quota as before,'' Aqazadeh said.

Iran's production quota currently stands at 3.14 million barrels a day, but recent reports put its current production capacity at 3.5 million barrels a day.

OPEC also set Iraq's quota at 3.14 million barrels a day, but Iraq exported the bulk its oil by means of pipelines passing through Turkey and Saudi Arabia.

Arab diplomats said before Iraq attacked Kuwait last week that Baghdad sought a safe outlet for its oil through a water channel west of Bubiyan Island. Iran destroyed its offshore terminals at the mouth of the Shatt al Arab river during the eight-year Persian Gulf war.

Major industrial states around the globe have condemned Iraq's invasion of Kuwait and have announced economic sanctions against Baghdad. President Bush was reported to have pressured both Saudi Arabia and Turkey to close Iraqi pipelines.

Iraq admitted Monday that demand for its oil has fallen, and closed one of two pipelines passing through Turkish territory to the Mediterranean, reducing the flow in the second by 30 percent.

A total boycott of Iraqi and Kuwaiti oil (now controled by Iraq) could cut world supplies by 4.64 million barrels a day, but several other OPEC member-states have spare production capacities.

Aqazadeh said the OPEC agreement does not allow any member-state to make up for shortages in production of another member-state.

The Iranian oil minister predicted that oil prices would continue to rise for a while on the world market, but he ''was not sure how long it would continue,'' He asked OPEC member-states therefore to ''preserve their self-control.''

He said Iran sold its oil at more than $23 per barrel as a result of the crisis and ''this rising trend will probsbly continue'' for the time being. But a strike by North Sea oil workers also contributed to the recent surge in prices, he said.

Several of Aqazadeh's recent predictions om world oil trends have proved correct, but regional analysts said he had an axe to grind in asking other OPEC member-states not to produce more. Iran stands to make considerable revenue gains from price rises.

Tehran believed crude oil was underpriced on the world market even after OPEC set its target reference price at $21 per barrel at its last conference in Geneva.

Iranian President Akbar Hashemi-Rafsanjani said after the conference that oil was selling at about $10 below what he called its real value.

GALVESTON, TX (AUG. 6) UPI - Only a few birds suffered immediate effects from a 700,000-gallon crude oil spill in Galveston Bay but more victims are expected, wildlife observers said Monday.

By Sunday the Texas Wildlife Rehabilitation Coalition successfully treated and washed eight sea gulls and a black crowned night heron that had been caught in the oil, said Sharon Schmalz, a coalition spokeswoman.

Two gulls were dead on arrival and an immature yellow crowned night heron died later, she said.

The minimal number of birds suffering so far from exposure to the oil could be misleading, Schmalz said. She expects more birds for treatment daily for the next few weeks.

Schmalz said migratory birds coming into the area in the fall and winter also could be affected by the residue of the spill.

Gary Clark, president of the Houston chapter of the Audubon Society, said almost 1,000 people volunteered to monitor the area for injured wildlife and to clean up the shoreline.

Clark said he anticipates more injured animals if the spill reaches into the Anahuac National Wilidlife Refuge along East Bay, home to numerous waterfowl species.

Officials also are concerned that oil seeping into the area would contaminate fish that the birds feed on.

Although the state health department reopened the bay to finfishing during the weekend, Spillway Fishing Pier owner Jim Holley said only nine people fished from his pier near Bacliff Sunday when normally there would have been about 300.

The oil has never reached the immediate vicinity of the pier, Holley said. He said the fishing appeared to be good, and the sand trout and flounder he saw caught were clean.

''We need some good news,'' Holley said. ''That oil never did impact us here. In fact, I'm eating some flounder tonight that came off the pier.''

DUCHESNE, UT (AUG. 6) UPI - Firefighters battling a wildfire on a remote 5,300-acre stretch of the Uinta-Ouray Indian Reservation used helicopters Monday to dump water and start backfires to stem the damage.

Because of the ''extreme fire danger'' in rugged Florence Canyon, Forest Service dispatcher Fran Reynolds said, ''We're using five choppers to make water drops.''

Firefighters also dropped incendiaries from the helicopters to burn out areas in the path of the wildfire.

''We're trying to remove pockets of heavy fuel (with the backfires),'' Reynolds said.

The backfires will halt the spread of the lightning-sparked fire ignited six days ago. Fire was burning Monday about 150 miles southeast of Salt Lake City, consuming Douglas fir, pinion pine, juniper and scrub oak. The area is prime habitat for deer, elk and mountain sheep.

The 530 firefighters were divided Monday into two units, Reynolds said, with one group sent ''to an area two miles to the south of the fire'' to clear away timber and brush and create a firebreak ahead of the flames.

''We're still hoping for Wednesday for containment,' Reynolds said. ''But with the high temperatures and low humidity, it could take more time.''

The Bureau of Land Management put 90 firefighters on a 105-acre fire reported Sunday afternoon in southwestern Utah's Iron County. The Steamboat Fire, in the rugged mountains about 15 miles west of Lund, was burning primarily in aspen, fir and ponderosa pine.

NEW YORK (AUG. 6) UPI - Mike Tyson may have lost his heavyweight title, but he can take heart in leading Forbes magazine's list of the 30 richest athletes.

The cover story of the magazine's Aug. 20 issue says Tyson will net an estimated 1990 income of $28.6 million. Not bad for someone who was knocked out in the 10th round by Buster Douglas in February.

Tyson was joined by three other boxers on the ''Super 30'' list: Douglas was No. 2 at $26 million, Sugar Ray Leonard was No. 3 at $13 million and Evander Holyfield was No. 10 at $8.1 million.

The world's 30 highest-paid athletes will make a total of about $230 million this year.

Formula One auto racing placed two drivers into the top 10 - Aryton Senna of Brazil and Alain Prost of France.

Senna, who drives for the Marlboro McLaren-Honda team, will make more money this year than the starting lineup of the Boston Celtics. He came in No. 4 on the Forbes list with $10 million. Prost, who drives for Ferrari, is No. 5 at $9 million.

Golfers Jack Nicklaus, Arnold Palmer and Greg Norman also made the grade. Nicklaus and Palmer share the honor of earning the highest amount in ''other income,'' with an estimated $8 million apiece.

Michael Jordan, the aerial guard of the Chicago Bulls, is the only basketball player in the top 10. On top of his $2.5 million salary, Jordan will make more than $6 million this year in endorsements.

There are six tennis players on the list, the most of any sport. Boris Becker leads the way at $7.2 million in 1990. Two notches below is West German compatriot Steffi Graf at $6.1 million.

The other four tennis players are: Andre Agassi and Stefan Edberg, both with $5.5 million, Ivan Lendl at $5.3 million and Gabriela Sabatini at $4.5 million.

Jose Canseco of the Oakland Athletics recently signed a five-year, $23.5 million contract, the richest in baseball history. But he is only 14th on the ''Super 30'' list at $6 million in 1990 earnings.

CHICAGO (AUG. 6) UPI - Al Capone has finally won his case.

Unfortunately for the Prohibition-era ganglord known as ''Scarface Al,'' his victory came in a mock trial during the American Bar Association's annual meeting.

Capone lost the trial that counted in 1931, and was sentenced to 11 years in prison. He served almost eight years and died in 1947.

Sunday's innocent verdict - on two counts of failure to file tax returns and three counts of attempted income tax evasion - was based on the original facts and current law.

Defense attorney Michael Tigar said the retrial ''allowed the defense to adopt new argument strategies in the area of litigation.''

VANDALIA, IL (AUG. 6) UPI - Queenie the change-making gasoline station ''cash dog,'' who flirted with fame in the mid-1970s, died Monday, said her owner, Orville ''Sug'' Schukar.

Queenie was featured in national newspaper, radio and television stories in 1975 for her ability to take cash from a customer and return the change Schukar said.

Queenie wandered into his U.S. 51 service station as a stray in 1974, said Schukar, who sold the station in 1980 after running it for 30 years.

''Queenie could take a $10 bill out of a customer's hand and bring it inside,'' said Schukar, 67, who still farms about 300 acres near Vandalia in southern Illinois. ''We'd put the change in an envelope and she'd take that back to the customer.''

Queenie knew the smell of money, Schukar said.

''She wouldn't take checks or credit cards, only cash,'' he said.

Schukar said the ''cash dog'' - a shepherd - would have been 18 in November.

The dog was to be buried Monday in a pine coffin on Schukar's farm.

''She hadn't been so good in the last few months. She couldn't walk much at the end,'' Schukar said. ''I just want to make sure people remember her.''

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - Against a backdrop of uncertainty over oil prices and the health of the U.S. economy, The Treasury Department announced Monday the government's quarterly refunding auctions will proceed as scheduled this week because Congress approved legislation increasing the debt limit to $3.195 trillion.

President Bush is expected to sign into law a bill granting $72 billion in additional borrowing authority through Oct. 2 to keep the federal government running.

Robert Glauber, Treasury under secretary in charge of finance, had said the quarterly refunding would be delayed if the House and Senate failed to pass legislation increasing the debt limit.

''Congressional action to increase the debt limit permits the Treasury to proceed with the auctions,'' the department said in a brief statement announcing its plans.

The offerings include:

-An auction of 3-year notes Tuesday totaling $11.5 billion.

-An auction of 10-year notes Wednesday totaling $10.5 billion.

-An auction of 30-year bonds Thursday totaling $10.25 billion.

-An added auction of 36-day cash management bills Thursday totaling $10 billion.

All the issues will settle Aug. 15.

The crisis in the Mideast, spiraling energy costs, higher inflation, an increased threat of recession and turbulence in stock markets are all elements that will influence this week's auctions.

Samuel Kahan, chief economist for Fuji Securities in Chicago, said it appears investors could be especially receptive to the shorter term, 3-year notes.

''In periods of uncertainty, people will drive to short-term paper and preferably, U.S. short-term paper,'' Kahan said. ''There is traditionally a flight to quality.

''In terms of government securities at the longer end, all hell breaks out '' he said, but added: ''A lot of the bad news is already incorporated in these securities. How much worse could it be?''

COLOMBO, SRI LANKA (AUG. 6) UPI - Tamil rebels continued a campaign of terror against Moslem civilians Monday, hacking to death 25 farmers at work in a rice paddy in the eastern part of the country and leaving notes on their bodies warning Moslems get out of the region.

The farmers accounted for more than half of the 49 Moslem villagers killed since Sunday night, police said. The latest violence came just three days after the Liberation Tigers of Tamil Eelam massacred at least 150 Moslems in an eastern farming village.

The militants who attacked the farmers in Akkaraipattu Monday left a note on each body, warning Moslems to leave the region, police said. They said the militants also killed five other Moslems along a road in the region.

The rebels, fighting for an independent homeland for Tamils, charge the Moslem villagers support government attempts to crush the insurgency.

The Tigers have been fighting for an independent homeland since 1983, but the latest round of fighting erupted June 12 when rebels attacked four army camps in the eastern part of the country.

The fighting shattered a one-year period of relative calm. More than 2,000 soldiers, rebels, police and civilians have been killed since the start of hostilities.

The Tiger rebels believe the minority Tamil community, which is predominantly Hindu, needs a separate state because of years off alleged discrimination by the majority Sinhalese, who are mostly Buddhist and who control the Colombo government.

SRINAGAR, INDIA (AUG. 6) UPI - Indian security forces stormed a house in the Kashmir Valley Monday and arrested the head of the leading Moslem militant group fighting for independence, a government intelligence source said.

The intelligence source said the border police arrested Yasin Malik, 22, the chief commander of the Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front, and 11 of his associates.

There was no independent confirmation of the arrests and authorities did not offer proof of Malik's capture. On at least one previous occasion, authorities claimed they had killed Malik.

The Jammu and Kashmir Liberation Front is one of the leading militant groups fighting for Kashmir's separation from India, and Malik's capture would be considered a major victory for the government in its battle against the rebels.

The source said that a government informer tipped off authorities about the location of Malik, who was taken to an undisclosed location following the raid.

The separatist movement in Kashmir has heated up since mid-January, with 700 people dead in fighting since then.

Virtually all 4 million Moslems in the Kashmir Valley support the separatist movement, saying a separate state is necessary because of years of alleged discrimination by successive Hindu-dominated New Delhi administrations.

ATLANTA (AUG. 6) UPI - Andrew Young, trailing badly in the polls against Democratic rival Lt. Gov. Zell Miller, made a final plea to voters Monday in his bid to become Georgia's first black governor.

The top two finishers in a July 17 primary in which Miller led by more than 10 percentage points are vying for the Democratic nomination in a race Young jumped into late and has never commanded.

The two meet in a primary election runoff Tuesday.

''Certainly, we would feel better if the numbers were closer, but Andy has always said that a way would be made,'' Young campaign manager, Hobby Stripling, said before the former Atlanta mayor headed out for a fly-around tour of the state. ''I guess we are flying on faith right now that things will work out and we will win the thing.''

Recent polls show Miller, a 16-year veteran of the lieutenant governor's office, has widened his lead to 20 points with 12 percent of the voters undecided.

The poll indicated that Young had failed to amass uniform black support and collect the portion of white backing needed for victory, while Miller, buoyed by a popular proposal for a state lottery, won over many blacks and at least three-quarters of the white vote.

Young, former U.N. ambassador, congressman and confidant of Martin Luther King Jr., spent much of Sunday morning plying the church circuit in the heart of his Atlanta stronghold.

At one of the stops, the former preacher conceded that his chances for becoming Georgia's next governor rely on ''a miracle on Tuesday.''

The winner of the runoff faces Republican gubernatorial nominee, state Rep. Johnny Isakson, in the November general elections, to determine who will succeed Gov. Joe Frank Harris. Harris is leaving office after the maximum two terms allowed by law.

Isakson would be the first GOP governor in Georgia in 122 years if he wins the race.

Miller, whose key issues have been promoting a state lottery to benefit educational improvements and the establishment of boot camps for first-time criminal offenders, also flew around the state on the final campaign day.

''He's going to be talking about the same things he's been talking about for the last two years - new solutions to new problems,'' said Miller campaign manager, James Carville. ''I suspect he feels pretty good at this point, but he doesn't want to let up.''

LONDON (AUG. 6) UPI - Stock prices tumbled in London and Frankfurt Monday in volatile trading sparked by developments in global oil markets as a result of unrest in the oil-rich Middle East.

In England, on the London International stock exchange, stocks plunged as the price of oil surged to a five-year high in response to the worsening conflict in the Middle East.

The blue-chip Financial Times 100-stock index, which fell 19.9 points Friday, tumbled 64.4 points, or about 2.7 percent, to 2,220.2. The narrower top 30 industrial average lost 61.5 points to 1,731.9.

Volume amounted to a heavy 592 million shares compared with 523 million shares changing hands on Friday.

Analysts said prices fell across a broad front from the opening bell amid the rapidly rising price of global oil coupled with worries of inflation in the British economy.

Market watchers said the sharp increase in the price of oil to $26.55 a barrel could plunge the world economy, particularly that of the U.S., into a recession and could push world inflation higher if the rise was sustained for a long period.

Gwynn Hacche of James Capel in London said the impact of higher oil costs on the world economy and industry was causing the most concern, and predicted a slowdown in world growth as a direct result of the price increases.

The fall in London mirrored those on other global markets, most notably in Tokyo where the blue-chip Nikkei Average tumbled 916.23 points to 28,599.53, a fall of 3.1 percent.

Analysts noted few large investors entered the market; instead, they preferred to stay on the sidelines because of the unsettling influence of the oil crisis.

On the local economic front, the Britain's Central Statistical Office reported retail sales volume fell a revised 2.6 percent in June from May but was up 1.1 percent from June 1989. Analysts noted the report went unnoticed by most investors.

On the trading floor, international issues fell sharply.

Imperial Chemical Industries tumbled $1.08 to $17.10, Rothmans

International, the tobacco giant, fell 81 cents to $12.95 and B.A.T Industries another tobacco maker, lost 54 cents to $9.73.

British Airways PLC eased 7 cents to $3.27 amid speculation the higher price of fuel would hurt the airline's earnings, expected to be announced on Tuesday.

Unitech fell 27 cents to $6.50 as investors awaited the electronic company's earnings report.

In a strong oil patch, British Petroleum gained 4 cents to $6.60 and London & Scottish Marine Oil gained 13 cents to $6.60.

In Frankfurt, stock prices on the Frankfurt Stock Exchange lost 5.4 percent of their value in active trading.

The closely watched German Stock Index, which lost 28.44 points Friday, tumbled 100.01 points to 1,740.93.

Traders said prices fell due to the crisis in the Middle East.

Traders said the selling spree was explained by the crisis in the Persian Gulf following the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait and by fears that the Iraqi army was preparing to enter Saudi Arabia.

In addition the market was worried that sharply higher oil prices that have resulted from the Gulf crisis may further increase U.S. inflation at a time when the American economy is showing signs of weakness.

MINNEAPOLIS (AUG. 6) UPI - State health officials said Monday there is an outbreak of salmonella poisoning in Minnesota and three other Midwestern states and it is believed related to the consumption of raw tomatoes.

There have been 38 confirmed cases of salmonella javiana reported in Minnesota, 51 in Illinois, 10 in Michigan and three in Wisconsin, officials said.

The 38 confirmed cases in Minnesota occurred in people who became ill June 28-29. Most of the cases involved adults.

Health officials cautioned that the number of reported cases may represent as little as 1 percent of the cases that actually occur during a salmonella outbreak.

Efforts are under way to find the source of the outbreak, which has been linked to tomatoes from restaurants and grocery stores.

Health officials are advising restaurant workers and consumes to wash their tomatoes thoroughly in cold water before serving or eating them. They also suggest removing the part where the stem was attached, as well as any bruised or damaged areas.

Home-grown tomatoes from Minnesota have not been implicated in the outbreak, although health officials routinely recommend that all produce be washed prior to consumption. Cooked tomatoes and tomato products are not a problem because cooking destroys the salmonella bacteria, officials said.

A 1989 outbreak of salmonella javiana in Minnesota and neighboring states was traced to the consumption of certain cheese products. But the current outbreak involves a different strain of the bacteria and is not believed to be related to the earlier outbreak.

Salmonella causes a type of gastrointestinal illness characterized by nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, abdominal cramps and fever. People who have those symptoms are urged to see a doctor, officials said.

MIAMI (AUG. 6) UPI - Tropical Storm Diana swept into the Gulf of Mexico Monday after soaking the Yucatan and headed west toward the Mexican coast, but experts said the storm still posed a threat to the U.S. Gulf Coast.

Forecasters at the National Hurricane Center said tropical storm watches would likely be posted for portions of the Mexican Gulf coast later Monday.

At 11 a.m. CDT, Diana was centered near latitude 21 north and longitude 92.3 west, or about 365 miles east southeast of Tampico, Mexico. The storm was moving west northwest at near 17 mph.

Forecasters said they expected the storm to continue on that path, although perhaps at a slower pace later in the day.

Maximum sustained winds built by about 5 mph early Monday to near 50 mph, and further stregthening was likely, forecasters said.

Tropical storm force winds extend outward up to 200 miles.

The hurricane center said gusty winds and heavy rains were possible along the Mexican coast to the south and west of the storm in advance of its approach. Rainfall amounts of five inches were possible along the path of the storm.

Bob Case, a hurricane specialist at the hurricane center, said Diana would reach the Mexican coast late Tuesday or early Wednesday, if the storm maintained its current forward speed.

However, Case said Diana could stall over the Gulf waters and then move north later in the week to threaten the U.S. Gulf coast.

''The mechanism that is pushing it toward the west is forecast to weaken '' he said. ''If Diana doesn't get over onto the Mexican coast and move inland, then there is the possibility that it could sit there for another day.''

If Diana slows, the storm could be drawn north later in the week by a cold front that forecasters expect to move over the northern gulf, Case said.

In either case, Case said forecasters expected Diana to develop into the second hurricane of the Atlantic-Caribbean season.

The storm emerged over the gulf after lashing the Yucatan with 45 mph winds and moderately heavy rains during a day-long trek across the peninsula. The storm swept ashore Sunday on the Yucatan's east coast north of Chetumal.

Forecasters at the hurricane center said they had no immediate reports of damage. Overnight winds in Merida, Mexico reached 34 mph, said Barry Satchwell, a forecaster at the hurricane center.

''They have thunderstorms that move through the Yucatan that have stronger winds,'' he said. ''If there is any real concern we have, it would be localized heavy rainfall.''

Meanwhile in the Atlantic, Tropical Storm Cesar continued to weaken, as expected, and was downgraded to a tropical depression.

At 12 noon EDT, the depression was centered near latitude 27.2 north and longitude 46.8 west, or about 1,145 miles east southeast of Bermuda.

Cesar was moving west northwest at near 3 mph, the hurricane center said, with maximum sustained winds of about 35 mph, or 4 mph shy of tropical storm strength.

ISLAMABAD, PAKISTAN (AUG. 6) UPI - President Ghulam Ishaq Khan dismissed Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto and dissolved the National Assembly Monday, charging her 20-month-old administration with nepotism and corruption.

The president called new elections for October and swore in the leader of the opposition to head a caretaker government that will rule Pakistan until then.

Army contingents moved into the capital and took control of the Pakistan television headquarters, Radio Pakistan, the Information Ministry and several other government offices.

Bhutto, 37, whose Pakistan People's Party came to power in democratic elections in November 1988, described Ishaq Khan's move as illegal and unconstitutional.

''It is unfortunate that an elected people's government has been sacked and an unrepresentative government has been installed,'' said Bhutto, who appeared confident and composed at a news conference.

But, she said, ''we will not provide them any excuse to bypass the political process which they say they will follow.''

Under Pakistan's unique system of government, Ishaq Khan, elected president by the National Assembly and provincial assemblies in December 1988, has the constitutional authority under certain conditions to cut short Bhutto's five year term and call new elections, which he has scheduled for Oct. 24.

Sabihuddin Ahmed, a constitutional lawyer in Karachi, said Ishaq Khan may have transcended his powers ''because under the constitution the (Bhutto) government has not failed to carry out its activities.''

The Pakistani president swore in as caretaker president Ghulam Mustafa Jatoi, a Bhutto foe who had announced Sunday he intended to bring a vote of no confidence on her government to the National Assemly. Bhutto narrowly won a similar vote last November.

Bhutto took office December 1988, following the first democratic election in 11 years in Pakistan, which has been under military rule for almost two thirds of its 43 year existence.

She has since come under fire for failing to control growing ethnic violence in southern Sind province and alleged corruption by members of her administration and family, sparking tension between her government and the army.

International observers said the military was attempting to regain control of Pakistan by having Bhutto dismissed.

''This is a constitutional coup instigated by Pakistani military leaders through Ishaq Khan,'' said Sugota Bose, an expert on the region from Tufts University in Massachusetts.

A spokesman for the Janata Dal Party of Indian Prime Minister V.P. Singh described Bhutto's removal as "a setback to the democratic movement in Pakistan.''

The Pakistani capital of Islamabad remained calm after the announcement.

In Karachi, the capital of troubled Sind province, thousands of supporters of an opposition party representing Mohajir migrants from India cheered and chanted ''Down with Benazir'' outside the home of a Mohajir leader.

Mohajirs have clashed in recent months with the youth wing of Bhutto's Pakistan People's Party.

In dismissing Bhutto's government, Ishaq Khan charged it with being ineffective and corrupt and said it had violated the constitution by attempting to usurp authority from the provinces.

''The utility and efficacy of the National Assembly as a representative institution elected by the people under the constitution ... is defeated by internal dissention and frictions, persistent and scandalous horse trading for political gain and furtherance of personal interests, corrupt practices and inducement,'' Ishaq Khan said in a statement he read at a news conference.

''I ... dissolve the Assembly with immediate effect and the prime minister and the Cabinet cease to hold office forthwith,'' he said.

Ishaq Khan, former chairman of the Senate, succeded Gen. Mohammed Zia ul-Haq as president of Pakistan after Zia was killed in a mysterious airplane crash in August 1988. Ishaq Khan was elected to the post in his own right by the National Assembly and provincial assemblies in December of that year.

Zia had ruled the country since his 1977 coup against Bhutto's father, Prime Minister Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, who was later executed.

Benazir Bhutto's party was victorious in elections Zia had called before his death, making her the first woman prime minister of an Islamic nation.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - Although he delayed a Latin American trip to be on hand for budget talks, President Bush still plans to spend at least eight days on the campaign trail during September, the White House said Monday.

Press secretary Marlin Fitzwater confirmed that Bush had postponed the planned trip Sept. 16-21 to Venezuela, Brazil, Argentina, Uruguay and Chile ''based on the need to be personally involved in the budget negotiations in September.''

At the same time, the spokesman announced a rigorous campaign schedule for the president that will take him to more than a dozen cities on behalf of at least eight Republican candidates.

On Sept. 3, Bush returns from a 25-day vacation in Kennebunkport, Maine. The continuing negotiations with congressional leaders on the fiscal 1991 budget and reducing the budget deficit are tentatively set to resume that week.

By law, failure to reach an agreement would force the government to impose an estimated $100 billion in across the board cuts in vital services on Sept. 30.

But the president, as evidenced by the schedule announced Monday, will also be fairly preoccupied with campaigning for Republican candidates in the November elections.

According to Fitzwater, Bush plans trips:

-Sept. 6, to Topeka, Kan., and Tallahassee, Fla., to attend fund-raisers for Kansas Gov. Mike Hayden, who faces a tough re-election primary on Tuesday, and Rep. Bill Grant of Florida, who recently switched to the GOP.

-Sept. 9, to New York for a dedication ceremony at Ellis Island.

-Sept. 11-12, first to Denver for a fund-raiser for the Hank Brown for Senate campaign, then to Los Angeles for a fund-raiser for Sen. Pete Wilson, who faces a tough race for governor against former San Francisco

Mayor Dianne Feinstein. Bush travels Sept. 12 to San Francisco for another fund-raiser on Wilson's behalf.

-Sept. 26-27, starting in Akron, Ohio, on behalf of George Voinovich, former mayor of Cleveland who is running for governor, heading next to Chicago for Rep. Lynn Martin, who is running for the Senate. The next day, he will attend a fund-raiser in Minneapolis for whoever wins the Independent-Republican gubernatorial primary, head next to Cleveland on behalf of Voinovich again before a final stop in Detroit for unidentified Michigan GOP candidates.

In addition, Bush will travel to New York Sept. 30, as previously announced, to attend an international summit on children. The following day, Oct. 1, he is to address the United Nations General Assembly.

CHICAGO (AUG. 6) UPI - Midwest farmland values continued to rise during the second quarter, but not as fast as in the first three months of the year, the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago reported Monday.

The increase of just under 1 percent was the fourteenth consecutive quarterly gain, Economist Peter J. Heffernan said in the Seventh Federal Reserve District's Agricultural Letter.

The gain was sharply lower than the increase recorded in the first quarter but Heffernan said it was consistent with the pattern of moderate changes in farmland values during the spring and early summer months.

The district includes all or portions of Illinois, Indiana, Michigan, Wisconsin and Iowa.

Survey responses from 420 agricultural bankers indicate a majority expect the market to remain stable during the third quarter, although a significant number expect further strengthening.

''Farmland values in the portion of Indiana in the District rose more than 2 percent during the spring,'' Heffernan said. ''The increase was just under 1 percent in Illinois and Wisconsin and less than one-half of one percent in Iowa and Michigan.''

All five states reported increases for the first six months of the year with an average gain of 6.4 percent over the same period of 1989.

Iowa farmland values showed the largest gain over the 12-month period, rising about 8 percent. Wisconsin was second with a gain of about 7.5 percent, Illinois 5.6 percent, Indiana 5 percent and Michigan 3.5 percent.

Interest rates charged on farm real estate mortgages remained stable during the second quarter. The average rate among the District's agricultural banks on June 30 was 11.08 percent, unchanged from 3 months earlier but nearly one-half of one percentage point lower than one year ago.

Banks in Iowa reported the lowest average rate of 10.9 percent, 45 basis points lower than one year earlier. Bankers in Illinois and Wisconsin reported average rates of 11.1 percent, Indiana 11.25 percent and Michigan 11.6 percent.

The survey found farm real estate lending in the five states likely will continue to rise during the third quarter.

''The proportion of bankers indicating their volume of lending would be higher than a year ago was nearly double the proportion indicating the volume would be down,'' Heffernan said. ''However, two-thirds of the respondents noted their volume of lending in the third quarter would be unchanged from year-ago levels.''

He said that since the turnaround in the farmland market began, agricultural banks throughout the nation, and particularly in the Corn Belt states, have acquired a growing share of the outstanding institutional farm real estate debt.

''Farm banks in early 1990 accounted for almost 26 percent of outstanding farm real estate debt held by financial institutions, up from 18.4 percent at the beginning of 1987,'' Heffernan said. ''Most of the gain has come at the expense of the Farm Credit System, although the FCS is still the dominant farm real estate lender.''

The Farm Credit System's share of outstanding debt dropped from 52.5 percent to 46.1 percent during the three-year period.

SAN JOSE, CALIF. (AUG. 6) UPI - The price of Businessland Inc. stock plummeted Monday after the computer reseller reported a $21.5 million fourth-quarter loss and said second- and third-quarter losses were twice as large as previously reported.

The stock's price was off $4 to $2.875 a share by mid-afternoon in active trading on a sharply lower New York Stock Exchange.

Businessland said its large losses placed the company in violation of certain covenants on $50 million in outstanding debt.

Businessland's fourth-quarter loss compared with a profit of $7.4 million, or 23 cents a share, recorded in the same period in fiscal 1989. Sales rose to $339.3 million from $322.6 million in the year-earlier quarter.

The company said it would restate results from the second and third quarters to reflect accounting errors. The adjustments increased the company's total loss in the two quarters to $5.8 million, compared with $2.9 million reported earlier.

For all of fiscal 1990, the company posted a loss of $23.1 million, compared with earnings of $32.9 million, or $1.08 a share, in the prior year. Sales grew to $1.35 billion from fiscal 1989's $1.19 billion.

The company, which took a restructuring charge of $6 million in the fourth quarter to close ''underperforming'' facilities, attributed the large quarterly loss to an increase in spare parts inventory reserves, lower operating margins and continued operating losses overseas and at its ComputerCraft chain of retail stores.

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia (AUG. 6) UPI - The trial of the first American to be charged with drug trafficking under Malaysia's harsh anti-narcotics law was delayed Monday as the judge considered whether to strike a key piece of prosecution evidence.

Kerry Lane Wiley, 38, a computer specialist from Sacramento, Calif., faces the death sentence if convicted. He appeared calm as defense attorney Shafee Abdullah asked the court to hold as inadmissable evidence that Wiley had admitted ownership of the drug, because he had not been informed of his rights at the time of his arrest.

The request came after prosecution witness Zainal Mulid told the court Wiley had admitted owning a parcel containing marijuana which he delivered to Wiley's home near Kuala Lumpur last November.

Postal officials had already been alerted by the customs department that the parcel contained marijuana, which Wiley had allegedly posted to himself from Thailand.

Zainal, a customs official, accompanied the postman when the parcel was handed to Wiley at his home in the suburbs of Kuala Lumpur.

Zainal gave evidence he returned with four customs officers half an hour later and raided the house. They discovered a bag in the storeroom beneath the stairs which contained several items of clothing and several tins containing dried leaves.

Wiley is the first American to be charged under statutes which mandate the death sentence for anyone caught with half an ounce or more of heroin, 2 pounds of opium or 6.4 ounces of marijuana.

Malaysia first introduced the death penalty for drug offenses in 1975 as an option for judges sentencing convicted traffickers. The government amended the law in 1983 to make it mandatory for all traffickers to be sent to the gallows.

Since 1975, more than 100 people have been executed, including 27 foreigners, the most recent being eight Hong Kong citizens who were hanged in May.

DAR ES SALAAM, Tanzania (AUG. 6) UPI - A meeting that began Monday in the Gambian capital of Banjul could provide a peaceful solution to seven months of bloody civil war in Liberia, the chief of the Organization of African Unity said.

OAU Secretary General Salim Ahmed Salim, speaking on official Radio Tanzania before flying to Gambia, said he hoped the meeting betweeen senior officials of seven countries could produce a humanitarian solution to the Liberian conflict.

The fighting has left about 5,000 people dead and forced almost 300,000 refugees to flee to neighboring countries, the OAU leader said.

''I say there is a political solution and a humanitarian one. The basic thing now is the humanitarian solution,'' Salim said.

Officials from Nigeria, Gambia, Ghana, Mali, Guinea, Sierra Leone and Togo began a meeting Monday to discuss the possible formation of a joint African peace-keeping force to be sent into Liberia.

The fighting there between government soldiers and two rebel forces which are also battling each other has degenerated into tribal revenge killings and a series of massacres.

Four American warships were standing off the Liberian coast after a weekend which saw U.S. marines landed in Monrovia, the Liberian capital, to evacuate Americans and fortify the embassy there.

Salim, invited to join the Banjul meeting as a representative of Africa's oldest cooperative organization, said he still hoped for a peaceful solution.

He said peace was urgently needed if West Africa's refugee problem was not to worsen.

''At present there are more than 180,000 refugees in Guinea, more than 40,000 in Sierra Leone and 60,000 in the Ivory Coast,'' he said. ''All these people are in a very critical condition.''

''Furthermore there are refugees inside the country,'' he said. ''Inside the Guinean embassy in Monrovia there are more than 2,500 Guinean refugees. Can you imagine how these people live in terms of food and health?''

Sixty-nine Liberian government troops, including four lieutenant colonels, fled to Freetown, Sierra Leone, during the weekend to escape the fighting in neighboring Monrovia.

They arrived in groups of 50 and 19 in two trucks loaded with a large quantity of arms and ammunition.

About half of the deserters had been wounded and were admitted to the goverment military hospital in freetown.

The head of the OAU Commission on Refugees, Chief Segun Olusola, who is in Sierra Leone to assess the refugee situation, said the number of Liberian refugees in Sierra Leone has increased from an estimated 20,000 in May to more than 60,000 in mid-july and rising.

The OAU has donated $25,000 to the Sierra Leone government to aid the Liberian refugees, he said.

(AUG. 6) UPI - Iraqi President Saddam Hussein assured President Bush Monday he will not attack Saudi Arabia and wants ''normal relations'' with Washington, but he appeared to raise the stakes of war by rounding up 28 Americans and hundreds of other foreigners in occupied Kuwait.

Baghdad Radio, monitored in Beirut, also reported that Saddam warned ''Iraq is capable of protecting its rights and interests whatever the pressures and threats were and that the country's readiness to sacrifice for that cause is unlimited.''

The radio said Saddam summonned the U.S. charge d'affaire in the Iraqi capital and conveyed the verbal message intended for Bush, saying Iraq, which invaded Kuwait last Thursday, would not attack Saudi Arabia because the two countries have a non agression pact.

Defense Secretary Dick Cheney arrived Monday in Saudi Arabia, where sources said he would seek permission to place U.S. troops in the strategic Persian Gulf nation to repel Iraqi forces should they launch an attack from Kuwait.

Egypt's Middle Eastern News service said Saddam's first message to U.S. President Bush since the dispute erupted included a warning against ''any behavior that may undermine security and stability in the area.''

The State Department later said it had summoned Iraq's ambassador in Washington to a meeting to discuss the whereabouts of the Americans and foreigners Iraqi troops rounded up in Kuwait city.

Spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said Iraqi forces took the 28 Americans and a number of other westerners from three hotels and drove them away in buses. She said it was premature to consider them hostages, but she said the United States views it as ''a very serious matter.''

According to State Department figures some 3,000 Americans had been in Kuwait last week. Some of them apparently have left the country, but Tutwiler said most of them are believed to be still in Kuwait.

A British Foreign Office spokesman said 200 British and U.S. citizens were taken by Iraqis from their hotels in Kuwait and sent by bus to Baghdad, among them people who had been stranded in Kuwait aboard a British Airways jumbo jet when the invasion began.

The information was based on a two-line telex sent by the British Embassy in Kuwait saying, ''British and U.S. citizens have been taken from the airport and SAS hotels and taken to Iraq.''

In Bonn, the West German Foreign Ministry said West Germans were also among the foreign nationals removed by Iraqi troops.

Bush sent Cheney to the Middle East after expressing skepticism over Iraq's claim Sunday it had begun withdrawing the 100,000-strong force that invaded Kuwait Thursday and seized the tiny sheikhdom over an oil and border dispute.

Bush talked by telephone to Cheney after his arrival in the Saudi capital of Riyadh to confer with King Fahd and other Saudi officials.

Saudi Arabia has long resisted allowing U.S. troops on its soil, and American sources said Cheney would argue there was now a clear need for a U.S. military presence.

In New York, the U.N. Security Council met to vote on a U.S. proposal for drastic economic sanctions against Iraq, which had accused Kuwait of stealing oil from a border well and of driving up oil prices through overproduction. The proposed sanctions included an oil embargo against Iraq.

DALLAS (AUG. 6) UPI - An oil equipment salesman said Monday that his father, a former Dallas police officer, was one of three U.S. intelligence operatives who killed President John F. Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963.

The story that Ricky Don White and others who had investigated his evidence told reporters adds yet another theory to the assassination that has captivated history buffs for more than 25 years.

White, 29, of Midland, Texas, also said that evidence his late father, Roscoe Anthony White, left behind indicated that presumed Kennedy assassin Lee Harvey Oswald never fired a shot. Instead, he said, Oswald was set up to take the blame for the assassination as part of a plot that included the man who killed Oswald on Nov. 24, 1963, Jack Ruby.

White said he was shocked to learn in 1978 from a family friend who had worked for U.S. intelligence that his father had been a covert U.S. intelligence operative who used the code name ''Mandarin.'' The friend also warned that it would eventually be revealed that Roscoe White, who died in an industrial accident and explosion in 1971, had been involved in the Kennedy assassination.

In 1982, Ricky White found his father's diary that detailed plans for the assassination. It called for Roscoe White to go to work for the Dallas police department in September 1963. In the diary, White outlined a plan involving three gunmen in Dealey Plaza in Dallas. Lee Harvey Oswald was not one of those men who fired a total of six shots, Ricky White said.

The diary also contained Roscoe White's admission that he, and not Oswald, killed Dallas Police officer J.D. Tippit during the manhunt for the presidential assassin. Tippit was a friend of the elder White's and an unwitting accomplice in the plot, he said.

Ricky White said the diary mysteriously disappeared from his home in 1988 shortly after he had shown it to FBI agents in Midland, but never confronted bureau officials about the missing diary.

''I know you all are taking one man's word on a diary that doesn't exist but I'm an individual that will tell you the truth. I'm here to tell you the truth, but through complications, I don't have the diary,'' White said Monday.

White says he was so badly shaken by his treatment at the hands of the federal agents, who grilled him for five hours, he will no longer work with the FBI.

''The FBI scared me so bad, I completely dropped my father's investigation '' White said.

Tom Kirspel, supervisor of the Midland FBI office, would neither confirm nor deny the agents had seen the diary.

In March 1989, White contacted officials of the JFK Assassination Information Center in Dallas, who were interested, but unconvinced. Their inquiry picked up speed in June when White said he found hidden in his grandfather's home in Paris, Texas, a metal cylinder containing his father's Marine Corps dogtags and three coded intelligence messages that refer to a directive to carry out the assassination.

One of those messages, dated in 1963, states the objective of the exercise was ''to eliminate a national security threat to worldwide peace.''

The people who urged Ricky White to tell his story do not dismiss the possibility that it is yet another assassination conspiracy hoax.

''We think it's true, but even if everything that's said here today checks out on further investigation, this case is still not solved,'' said Bernard Fensterwald an Alexandria, Va., president of the Assassination Archives and Research Center in Washington. ''We still will not know who planned, paid for it, or basically what the shooting was about.''

Ricky White has managed to convince a group of seven Midland businessmen of the authenticity of his story, so much so that they put up more than $100,000 to investigate the story, with the idea of eventually benefiting from a book to be written by officials of the Dallas center.

The Warren Commission concluded that Oswald acted alone and fired two shots, which was the same conclusion reached by the House Select Committee in 1979. The House committee also concluded that there was a ''high probability'' that an unidentifed second gunman was firing from the nearby grassy knoll, but missed.

Ricky White said his father was the gunman on the grassy knoll who fired two shots that hit Kennedy in the throat and head as his motorcade passed through downtown Dallas.

''My father was an individual that I loved and deeply admire, even today '' White said.

He declined to speculate on a motive for his father's actions, saying that he presumes his father was only following orders.

''He was told by our government to do something,'' White said. ''You don't question the government.''

A Dallas minister and White family friend told the news conference that Ricky White's mother, Geneva, overheard her husband and Jack Ruby discussing the plot before the assassination and that Ruby threatened to kill her if she talked.

The Rev. Jack Shaw says Mrs. White later underwent four shock treatments at her husband's insistence to help her forget what she heard. Shortly before Roscoe White's death, Mrs. White began to remember what had happened after speaking with a man in New Orleans who Shaw said was involved in organized crime. She confronted her husband who told her much of what happened, he said.

White said his mother is the only other person who has read the diary's account of the assassination, but that she is unable to talk with reporters because of poor health.

NEW YORK (AUG. 6) UPI - Former Wall Street trader Salim ''Sandy'' Lewis, who admitted manipulating Fireman's Fund Corp. stock prices, agreed Monday to pay $475,000 to settle a lawsuit filed by the Securities and Exchange Commission.

In the civil suit, filed Monday in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, the SEC sought the $475,000 as partial compensation for the impact of the manipulation on the stock price in May 1986, said Lewis' attorney, Theodore Wells Jr.

The money is to be paid back to investors.

Lewis, 50, of Short Hills, N.J., pleaded guilty in the same courthouse last August to three felony counts relating to manipulation of the stock to help American Express Co. sell part of its Fireman's Fund stake at an advantageous price.

He was sentenced in December to three years probation and performing community service in a drug treatment center. He was fined $250,000.

The consent order agreement by Lewis still requires the approval of U.S. District Court Judge William Conner.

Bruce Hiler, an SEC attorney in Washington, said the signed consent order ''clears the deck of Mr. Lewis.''

CARACAS, VENEZUELA (AUG. 6) UPI - Venezuela will adhere to OPEC quotas and will not increase its oil production as a result of Iraq's invasion of Kuwait, a government official said Monday.

Mines and Energy Minister Celestino Armas said 11 of 13 ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries agreed over the weekend to maintain production of 22.5 million barrels a day, with a price goal of $21 a barrel.

Market prices for crude oil have risen past $25 a barrel since the Iraqi invasion last week of its oil-rich Persian Gulf neighbor.

"Venezuela resolved to not alter its petroleum policies, maintaining its support of OPEC agreements from Geneva, producing the 1.9 million barrels daily that it was assigned, and will not take isolated actions that could affect the international market," a government official said Monday.

Similarly, exports to the United States will not be increased, despite the fact that the Venezuelan government is "negotiating a larger participation in the imports to that country," the official said. Some $10 billion - more than 80 percent of Venezuela's export earnings - come from oil or petroleum products.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - President Bush's handling of the Iraq-Kuwait conflict is being carefully watched for more reasons than the immediate crisis, analysts said Monday, noting that the outcome may set a tone for how the world deals with future problems in the post-Cold War era.

''This is an enormous opportunity for the international community,'' said Donald McHenry, a former ambassador to the United Nations under President Carter who now is a foreign policy professor at Georgetown University.

''Iraq, it seems to me, is not going to stop here if it can get away with this step. Sooner or later it will get Saudi Arabia and it will get Israel '' added McHenry. ''This is an opportunity for the international community to stand together for once.''

Thus far, the firm and deliberate diplomacy used by Bush has generally won him high marks and several foreign policy experts theorized Monday that the president's careful steps may also help him build a large reservoir of support that will be useful if events worsen.

They add that a confluence of other factors - such as the mid-summer timing of the crisis and the president's already-high approval ratings - are also playing in Bush's favor. But they caution that may not last if the crisis deepens dramatically and drags on.

''It's very early on in this thing,'' noted Stephen Hess, a governmental studies expert at the Brookings Institution. ''Importantly, something has not yet happened - no Americans are involved. The minute that happens in one way or another, the equation changes and it becomes our crisis. At the moment it's somebody else's crisis.''

So far, Bush has tried to bring together other nations in a united policy against what he has termed Iraq's ''naked aggression'' and has been helped enormously in that task by the changed nature of the U.S.-Soviet relationship.

Rather than fearing that any steps in the Middle East will escalate tensions with the Soviet Union, Bush has been able to secure cooperation from Moscow - a not insignificant development.

''This is the first of the post-Cold War crises,'' noted McHenry, ''It has always been clear that if you could get the Cold War out of a crisis, at least the handling will not be made more difficult.''

''Here the Soviets and the Chinese both understand that it is necessary to stop that kind of aggression,'' he said.

Hess argued that while Bush has had some luck with a changed world situation, the president's decision to back Mikhail Gorbachev and his personal diplomacy with the Soviet leader contributed to his ability to deal with Moscow in this matter.

''After all, he (Bush) is in part responsible for that attitude. It wasn't by any means a given when he threw his chips in with Gorbachev,'' said Hess. ''This is one immediate benefit.''

But several analysts also added that the Iraq-Kuwait crisis may not be a perfect model for future problems because it was relatively clear cut and Iraqi leader Saddam Hussein was identified so clearly as a villian.

''By and large this is an adversary that is hardly well liked in the United States,'' noted Hess.

LONDON (AUG. 6) UPI - Police defused a suspected Irish Republican Army bomb Monday that had been planted beneath a car parked outside the former home of a retired Cabinet member.

The discovery came a week after an IRA car bomb killed Ian Gow, a prominent Conservative Party member of Parliament and a fierce opponent of the outlawed organization.

There was no claim of responsibility for the device found in the St. John's Wood neighborhood of northwest London, but Scotland Yard suspected the IRA, which has staged at least a dozen bombings in England this year as part of its drive to end British rule in Northern Ireland.

Police said the latest device, packed with two pounds of plastic explosive was probably intended for Lord Robert Armstrong, the government's former chief of civil services. However, he moved six years ago from the house near where the bomb had been placed, police said.

Scotland Yard said the device was believed to be ''part of the campaign being waged by the IRA.''

Armstrong was one of Thatcher's closest aides until he retired in 1987. He worked on the Anglo-Irish agreement, an accord designed to promote peace and stability in Northern Ireland.

A passerby who was walking his dog Monday morning told police he saw a suspicious package in Armstrong's old driveway. The device apparently had fallen off a car when an American woman, who now lives at the address, drove away, police said.

Cherry Freeman said she remembered hearing a scraping sound as she pulled out of her driveway.

The bomb was successfully defused.

KHARTOUM, SUDAN (AUG. 6) UPI - Sudan's military government launched a marathon 75-day conference Monday to work out the country's political future, seeking ways around ''the shortcomings of previous political systems,'' the official Sudan News Agency reported.

Ruler Gen. Omar al Bashir, who toppled a democratically elected government in June 1989, told 500 government-nominated conference delegates to find a new political path, ''to return to the beliefs of the Sudanese people and its needs, so as to authenticate the thoughts of our political system.''

Al Bashir and 14 other military officers have ruled Sudan by decree for the past year, reintroducing draconian Islamic laws and drawing sharp international criticism for his disregard for human rights and ruthless suppression of opposition.

He has repeatedly promised wider power-sharing this year and the establishment of a broad-based political party.

Al Bashir said the collapse of three previous Sudanese attempts at multi-party democracy, all of which ended in coups, ''proves the fatalism of their failure if they are to rule Sudan once again.''

One-party rule, he said, was equally unsuccessful.

He said he aspired to a political system of patriotic national unity based on Islam, Christianity and African religions.

Earlier this year, Sudan agreed in principle on a political merger with Libya.

KATMANDU, NEPAL (AUG. 6) UPI - Visiting Indian Foreign Minister I.K. Gujral called Monday for the creation of a common market that would include seven South Asian nations within the framework of the South Asian Association for Regional Cooperation.

"I have no doubt that our goal ultimately - which does not mean a far-distant future - should be to establish a South Asian free-trade association or common market," Gujral told the Nepal Council for World Affairs.

"SAARC is the obvious framework within which this should be done. India has great faith in the potentialities of SAARC and we will do everything possible to enable their realization."

He said India will present the proposal during a summit of seven South Asian nations to be held in Maldives in November. The seven participants will be India, Pakistan, Nepal, Bhutan, Bangladesh, Sri Lanka, and Maldives. Gujral, discussing environmental issues, accused the industrialized nations of making unrealistic demands on developing nations.

Referring to the limits placed on chlorofluorocarbons and to the greenhouse effect, Gujral said that the nations of the developing world "are being obliged to make disproportionate sacrifices."

Nepal and India "should work jointly" along with other developing countries, Gujral said, "to ensure that the approacing burden for imposing restrictions on the production and consumption of substances which pose a threat to the environment is borne by those who have been mainly responsible for the environmental degradation."

CHICAGO (AUG. 6) UPI - Good news for managers who have been laid off or fired - a survey released Monday by an international outplacement consulting firm indicates managers who have been laid off or fired are finding new jobs in an average of three months.

The quarterly survey for the period ending June 30 showed the speed with which discharged managers are being rehired is reaching record levels, Challenger, Gray & Christmas Inc. said.

It was the third consecutive quarter that the median job search length has been 3.1 months or less. That compares with the norm of 3.2 months established by the Challenger firm in more than 15 years of research.

The all-time median low is 2.85 months in the first quarter of 1985. The Challenger Index is a quarterly survey of 600 managers that measures and reports significant trends in the job market.

"The whole matter of winning a new job rests on the job seeker's ability to convince the employer that he or she is the best person that can be hired, and that in turn is the result of citing accomplishments for past employers," Challenger President James E. Challenger said.

"The more the prospective employer sees that the person made significant contributions to earlier employers, the more likely it is the job offer goes to that individual versus others who may have started out with approximately equal qualifications in the eyes of the employer," he said.

The survey listed three reasons for the accelerated rate of rehiring in the past three quarters: the critical nature of international competition, which has increased the demand for skilled managers; the increasing awareness by managers of the need to sell prospective employers on their past accomplishments; and the increasing use of a staggered severance-pay plan, which speeds up rehiring.

Challenger says that under staggered severance, discharged employees do not get their severance money in one lump sum, nor is it unconditionally guaranteed. "The payments are directly tied to the dischargee's job-search efforts, creating an incentive to look for a job and resulting in shorter median job-search lengths than would be present under other circumstances."

He added that companies operating under such a system realize substantial savings by not having to make unnecessary severance payments, presumably once the discharged manager finds another position.

The emphasis by companies on maintaining their competitive positions has put employers in the position of quickly hiring those with proven skills, Challenger said.

"Employers may even be skipping some of the steps in the traditional hiring process in order to get the people they want on board faster," he said. "Firms that hire on the basis of proven skills gain the advantage of employees who can quickly fit into a new job situation and become productive immediately."

The strong rate of rehiring continued during the second quarter of this year despite the mixed signals from the economy. Downturns in some industries and cutbacks in others affect the job market, but employers realize they are in a competitive race to attract the best personnel.

The competitive atmosphere of the job market may telescope the time frame of job searches. Job seekers may expect and receive immediate hiring decisions rather than being required to undergo added screening processes. Challenger, Gray & Christmas is the nation's oldest outplacement company.

NEW YORK (AUG. 6) UPI - The dollar rode a see-saw Monday in light New York trading, weakening early in the day on perceptions the Federal Reserve might have to lower interest rates but rallying later on Mideast war fears.

Currency traders pointed to a carry-over effect from the news last week that the U.S. jobless rate ticked up to 5.5 percent in July from 5.2 percent in June, confirming that the economy is winding down. That was enough to offset whatever benefit the dollar was enjoying from fears of a Mideast war.

"We started the day with everybody discounting the (dollar's) 'safe-haven' role and focusing on prospects for Fed easing," said Earl Johnson, a vice president and currency adviser with the Harris Trust & Savings Bank.

Later, the dollar recovered on ominous news of Iraqi troops massing on the Saudi Arabian border and on reports that 28 Americans had been removed from Kuwait City hotels by the Iraqi military.

In late New York trading, the dollar eased to 1.5770 German marks from 1.5925 Friday but advanced to 150.40 Japanese yen from 149.90.

National Westminster Bank trader Mark Morris said purchasing the U.S. unit as a so-called safe haven in times of crisis did not give the dollar as much support as in the past - particularly in light of the bleak U.S. economic and financial prospects.

"I think the dollar may be losing some of the safe-haven allure it had in the past," Morris said. If the United States "came to fisticuffs" with Iraq, the dollar would benefit, he said, but short of that it was anemic.

Other New York dollar rates: 1.3310 Swiss francs, down from 1.35; 5.2850 French francs, off from 5.3425 francs, and 1,154.40 Italian lire, off from 1,163. The British pound advanced to $1.8720 from $1.8550.

In Europe, the dollar weakened further against the key currencies amid rising tensions in the Mideast. The pound sterling and the Swiss franc were the major beneficiaries, analysts said.

One bank dealer said many expected the dollar to move up on the crisis, but the bearish impact on the sluggish U.S. economy and Wall Street's plunge were too serious to be offset by dollar-buying.

But the dollar was helped off its lows late in the day by news that U.S. Secretary of State James Baker was to visit Turkey - whose pipelines are a conduit for Iraqi crude - to consult with officials.

In Frankfurt, the dollar closed at a new postwar low of 1.5730 German marks -2 pfennigs off Friday's close of 1.5930 marks. The dollar also plunged in Zurich, to 1.3275 Swiss francs compared with 1.3500. In London, the pound ended nearly two cents higher at $1.8740 against $1.8560.

The U.S. unit also fell in Paris, Brussels and Milan, to, respectively, 5.2790 French francs from 5.3365, 32.29 Belgian francs against 32.75 and 1,153.20 Italian lire compared with 1,166.10 at Friday's close.

Earlier in Tokyo, the dollar rose against Japan's currency, closing at 149.50 yen vs. 149.35 yen late last week.

Foreign exchange dealers said the dollar continued to benefit from escalation of tensions in the Middle East on the perception that Japan, heavily reliant on imported oil, stands to suffer greatly from an economic standpoint.

Japan's imposition of a ban on oil imports from Iraq and Kuwait and suspension of trade with both nations were a blow to the yen.

Gold closed higher in Zurich, at $382.25 an ounce against $379 Friday, and inLondon, at $382.50 an ounce against $378.125.

Republic National Bank in New York closed cash gold $7 higher at $384.75 an ounce compared with $377.75 Friday. The New York Commodity Exchange settled gold at $384.70 an ounce, also well up from $377.40.

Silver was also up in Zurich, at $4.91 an ounce compared with $4.90, and in London, at $4.90 an ounce from $4.86.

Republic closed cash silver at $4.915 an ounce, up from $4.855. Comex silver was also higher, at $4.892 an ounce compared with $4.842.

CHICAGO (AUG. 6) UPI - Attorney General Richard Thornburgh suggested Monday the Bush administration might pay less heed to American Bar Association ratings of judicial nominees if the ABA fails to rescind its pro-abortion rights policy.

A proposal to scrap the abortion policy adopted by the ABA House of Delegates last February and replace it with a neutral stance faced a vote later Monday, with all members attending the annual ABA meeting eligible to vote.

The ABA board of governors has recommended a neutral stance. Monday's vote would constitutes only a non-binding recommendation to the House of Delegates, which is to act on the proposal Wednesday.

Thornburgh said the present pro-abortion rights policy ''creates, in my view, a perception problem for the American Bar Association and I believe they are wisely undertaking reconsideration of that position.''

''I think it would be appropriate for this association to be neutral on every issue that does not fall within the ambit of its area of expertise '' Thornburgh told reporters after addressing the opening assembly of the annual meeting.

''When the ABA, as in my view, extends its inquiry beyond judicial and into political and philosophical issues, its reach exceeds its grasp and its credibility on these issues is not entitled to the same respect that we have given it when it comes to assessing judicial temperament and qualifications of intellectual ability and character and integrity that would recommend someone for the bench,'' he said.

Thornburgh said he has noted growing concern the ABA ''may be moving toward litmus tests for judicial nominees.''

He emphasized, however, that he has seen no evidence of any such tests in his dealings with the ABA Standing Committee on the Judiciary, which provides the administration with ratings of potential nominees for the federal bench.

''Nonetheless,'' he said, ''the credibility of that (committee) work will suffer, in my view, if the American Bar Association chooses to take positions on every hot-button emotional political issue of the day because it will create - in the public's view - the notion that if someone, as a prospective judicial nominee, does not sign on to those views, they may be viewed with disfavor.''

Addressing an ABA awards luncheon later Monday, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., accused Thornburgh and the administration of ''unseemly attempts ... to muzzle the Senate confirmation process'' for Judge David Souter, President Bush's nominee to replace William Brennan on the Supreme Court.

''It is true that Judge Souter has said and written little about the significant legal issues of our time, but that means the Senate must ask more, not less, about his views,'' Kennedy said.

''In this day and age, the Senate will not confirm a blank slate to the Supreme Court of the United States,'' said Kennedy, chairman of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

But Thornburgh said the only concern of the administration is to head off any possible ''attempt to secure a comitment from any judicial nominee to rule one way or the other in a case or on an issue.''

''Nobody is asking confirmation of a blank slate,'' Thornburgh added. ''Judge Souter has a distinguished record of 12 years of service on the state courts in New Hampshire - not unlike the prior judicial career of retiring Justice William Brennan.''

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - The Securities and Exchange Commission would be able to take unilateral action during a market emergency under a recently passed Senate bill, government officials said Monday.

Although the most publicized part of the bill - giving the SEC authority to halt stock trading when emergencies occur - would require presidential approval, other parts of the legislation enable the SEC to temporarily amend its own rules, or those of stock exchanges, without prior notification.

The bill, titled the Market Reform Act of 1990, would also formalize the SEC's ability to gather information from other government regulators on companies affiliated with securities brokerages.

While SEC officials have focused on these information gathering powers, the emergency authority offered through the legislation seems just as significant.

The bill, passed late last Saturday, specifically says that in an emergency, "the commission may take action to alter, suspend, supplement or impose requirements or restrictions with respect to any matter or action subject to regulation by the SEC, or a self regulatory organization " such as the New York and American stock exchanges.

This means, for example, that the SEC could change a reporting requirement to gain information more quickly, or even change the national market system, according to Kathy McGuire, a staff member in the SEC's Division of Market Regulation.

The legislation broadly defines emergency as "a major market disturbance characterized by, or constituting a substantial threat of sudden and excessive fluctuations of securities prices generally that threaten fair and orderly markets or a substantial disruption of the safe or efficient operation of the national system for clearance and settlement of securities."

But such changes would only last up to ten days, and McGuire said the SEC plans to rarely use the emergency powers. "We anticipate that the exchanges will continue to take primary responsibility for responding in a crisis, and this is just residual power that we do not anticipate having to use," she said.

The SEC plans to make more use of the Act's information gathering provisions, primarily to protect brokerages owned by larger companies from financial damage caused by the parent or its other affiliates.

But the bill does not give the SEC oversight of possible brokerage affiliates, such as banks or interest rate swap brokers. Rather, it spells out the SEC's right to obtain information on the affiliate from the corresponding regulator, thus formalizing a longstanding, but unofficial, SEC practice.

The bill requires most broker-dealers to keep records on policies, procedures or systems for monitoring and controlling financial and operational risks to it brought about by affiliates.

"We are interested in risk exposure and we are looking for things that would be potential sources of risk such as interest rate bridge loans," said Mark Fitterman, associate director of the SEC's division of market regulation.

NEW YORK (AUG. 6) UPI - Eastern Airlines and eight employees pleaded innocent Monday to criminal charges of falsifying records to cover up maintenance that was not performed on jets in an scheme to keep the beleaguered carrier flying on schedule. A ninth employee, former Eastern supervisor Elia Dragone, pleaded guilty last week to conspiracy and obstruction of justice in a plea agreement.

Eastern and the employees, including a former vice president, were charged in a 60-count criminal indictment last month accusing them of falsifying records to cover up the fact that maintenance work was not performed at three major airports due to pressure to keep Eastern aircraft flying.

If convicted, Eastern faces a maximum fine of $30 million, while each defendant could be sentenced to a maximum penalty of five years in prison and a $250,000 fine. The arraignment was held at U.S. District Court in Brooklyn.

Maintenance was overlooked and records were falsified at LaGuardia and Kennedy international airports in New York and at Hartsfield International Airport in Atlanta between 1985 and 1989, the indictment said.

The indictment said Eastern used "unreasonable demands, pressure and intimidation" to force workers to doctor records "to keep the aircraft in flight at all costs."

"The motivation was to get airplanes in the air because an airline does not make money when its planes are on the ground," U.S. Attorney Andrew Maloney said in announcing the indictment July 25.

Among the violations alleged by the government was Eastern's failure to drain water from planes' fuel lines - which Maloney said could have blocked the flow of jet fuel or caused inaccurate fuel gauge readings. Other violations included failing to maintain landing gear and radar properly and installing faulty cockpit gauges, he said.

The indictment charges Eastern and the employees with conspiracy, wire fraud, falsification of federal records and obstruction of justice. Eastern has said it has taken "full corrective action" and has noted the alleged violations occurred before March 1989, when the carrier's three major unions staged a crippling strike against the carrier.

Among those charged was Edward Upton, a former vice president of maintenance and engineering. The indictment also named six supervisors, including Dragone, a maintenance director and a maintenance manager. All eight were released on their own recognizance.

Eastern had tried to negotiate a plea agreement with the U.S. Attorney, but talks collapsed when Eastern refused to admit guilt to the conspiracy charge, Martin Shugrue Jr., the carrier's court-appointed trustee, said last month.

FAIRFAX, VA (AUG. 6) UPI - Saying he did not want to turn a custody dispute into a media circus, a judge Monday put a gag order on a 12-year-old boy who, in effect, wants to divorce his father.

Daniel Etlin had done several interviews and wanted to speak to other reporters about his being in the middle of a decade-long custody dispute. He voluntarily went into foster care during the weekend rather than return to the custody of his father, Vladimir Etlin.

Daniel spends alternate weekends and the month of July with his mother, Michelle, but wants to live with her full-time.

He has retained an attorney, noted constitutional expert Bruce Fein, who argued in Fairfax County Circuit Court last week that Daniel has a constitutional right to an attorney.

Judge F. Bruce Bach, who has been involved in the case since 1982, allowed Fein to represent the boy but declined to hear his request for a change in custody. Bach said Monday that last Friday's hearing, on the issue of the boy's getting an attorney, was not the appropriate time to debate custody.

Bach convened Monday's emergency hearing because he was concerned about the boy's emotional well-being and said his case should not be tried in the media.

''He is a very, very fragile, emotionally disturbed kid,'' Bach said.

The judge said he did not think Daniel's well-being would best be served by allowing him to continue talking with the media, even though a social worker testified that Daniel wanted to talk with reporters because it ''empowered'' him.

Bach said he was particularly disturbed by a story in Sunday's editions of The Washington Post and by an attempt by a Washington, D.C., television station to interview Daniel on a morning news program.

''I think it's bad. I think it's bad for this case, to go to the media,'' the judge said, noting he was bothered by the image of Daniel marching into court with his briefcase, followed by his attorney and a cadre of reporters.

''I don't think it's in Danny's best interest to turn this case into another Elizabeth Morgan case,'' Bach said, referring to the celebrated Washington, D.C., custody dispute that led Morgan to hide her daughter and spend more than two years in jail.

On Thursday, a hearing will be held on the foster care matter. It was not known when the ultimate custody question would be decided.

Following last Friday's court appearance, Daniel was taken to the county Department of Human Development, where he was evaluated by a psychologist and placed in foster care.

Social worker Elizabeth Lender testified that Daniel was very angry and frustrated after his court appearance and that he spoke of suicide and homicide if he were forced to return to his father's home.

Bach said his order would remain in effect until the boy receives a complete psychological evaluation. The judge also said he would not prevent the parents from speaking with the press, although he said he did not believe that would be beneficial to their case.

Meanwhile, Michelle Etlin filed suit on Monday to remove Bach from the case. She contends the judge's rulings have hurt her son and caused him great pain.

Etlin said her son wants to ''divorce'' his father until he gains control of his feelings. She said Daniel is psychologically and emotionally abused allegations his father denies.

Etlin said she believed her son's constitutional rights to free speech were violated by Bach's order.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - Exporters sold 211,328 metric tons of U.S. corn for delivery to Japan, the No. 1 buyer of U.S. agricultural products, the Agriculture Department reported Monday.

The grain was worth $21.2 million, based on Chicago prices. There are 39.4 bushels of corn in a metric ton of 2,204.6 pounds, so the sale called for delivery of 8.3 million bushels of new-crop corn.

With the latest sale, Japanese buyers have purchased 3.85 million tons of U.S. corn for delivery during the 1990-1991 marketing year, which begins Sept. 1. Japan has purchased 14.7 million tons of U.S. corn during the current corn marketing year.

Japan was forecast to buy $8.3 billion worth of U.S. farm exports this fiscal year, a $150 million increase from the preceding year. The purchase was announced three days before Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter was due to leave on a trip to Japan and other Asian nations to discuss trade matters.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas asked the Justice Department to begin an antitrust investigation Monday into gasoline ''price-gouging'' by U.S. oil companies after the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

In a letter to Attorney General Dick Thornburgh, Dole asked for a Justice Department antitrust investigation to determine if there was illegal ''collusive activity among oil refiners, wholesalers and retailers.''

'''Price-gouging' is a harsh term, but it is a term that seems to most aptly describe the situation we are now witnessing,'' Dole told Thornburgh.

Dole said: ''In some areas, gasoline prices have risen by as much as 25 cents per gallon - all in a matter of a few days.''

Raising concern about the overall state of the economy, Dole said, ''If antitrust violations have anything to do with the soaring prices at the gas pumps, these violations should be identified and remedied without delay.''

The Justice Department had no immediate comment.

Meanwhile, Sen. Richard Bryan, D-Nev., said he would hold a hearing Tuesday on a ''feeding frenzy'' and ''price-gouging'' by ''the big oil companies.''

Bryan said, ''Our stockpile of oil is at the highest level in eight years. There is no supply shortage to justify these price increases.''

Bryan said his Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation subcommittee had invited top oil company executives to testify, including the chief executives of Texaco, Mobil, Exxon, Chevron, Shell, Atlantic Richfield, Occidental Petroleum and Phillips Petroleum.

It was not known which companies, if any, would appear, Bryan said.

Bryan's consumer subcommittee also is interested in the justification, if any, of fuel surcharges being added to some airline tickets.

Sen. Joseph Lieberman, D-Conn., estimated that American consumers are paying between $12 million and $42 million extra each day for gasoline because of oil company ''profiteering'' from the Middle East crisis.

Gas prices have shot up nationwide, Lieberman said, and ''none of that price increase is justified. It is a multimillion-dollar ripoff of the American consumer.''

American oil companies are using the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait as an excuse ''to invade the pockets of American consumers'' by unjustified increases in gasoline prices, Lieberman said. He said President Bush should call on major oil companies to roll back their price hikes.

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., said: ''I think it's essential that the president be tough as nails on this issue. This is price-fixing, pure and simple.''

Lieberman, Bryan and Riegle - who appeared together at a news conference - all said that the American economy is extremely vulnerable to the effects of gasoline price shocks and could be pushed into a recession.

Lieberman, who on Friday asked Bush to convene an emergency task force on oil prices, said Monday that 17 senators had since signed his letter. Lieberman said he had received no reaction from the White House.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - Some Soviet officials predict a huge, record-breaking grain crop this year but the crop may be smaller than now claimed, an agricultural attache's report said Monday.

The report, based on Soviet documents, noted there is less land in grain production than when the record was set in 1978, more grain may be kept for livestock feed and weather conditions have not been as uniformly favorable as in 1978.

The record for Soviet grain production is 237 million metric tons. In the past week, a senior Soviet agricultural official said this year's crop could total 260 million tons.

By contrast, the Agriculture Department consistently has pegged the crop at 215 million tons, which would be the largest crop since 1978. The department is due to update its forecast Thursday.

"Although some Soviet officials compare this crop to the record ... the article notes that there are offsetting factors which preclude achievement of this goal," the Moscow-based attache said, drawing on a report from the Soviet State Commission for Statistics.

About 111 million hectares were sown to grain this year, 17 million less than in 1978. About four million hectares of grain may not be harvested or may be harvested for feed. There are roughly 2.5 acres in a hectare.

One U.S. observer said Soviet reports of a large crop might be an attempt at "talking down the market" price for imported grain. The Agriculture Department has forecast the Kremlin would import 36 million tons of foreign grain during the 1990-1991 trade year despite having a large domestic crop.

Reform policies implemented last year with the hope of persuading farmers to sell more grain to the state brought only limited results. Some analysts said Soviet farmers held on to their grain for use as livestock feed because they felt prices for premixed rations were too steep.

Agriculture Department analysts estimate about 13 percent of the Soviet crop will be lost to dockage or waste, partly due to the tendency to store grain on the farm.

The analysts have forecast Soviet yields to be a record high 1.92 metric tons per hectare, or the equivalent of 28.5 bushels of wheat an acre. They also have noted winter kill losses were half the usual rate this year.

The report of a possible huge Soviet crop have prompted concern in the U.S. grain industry about a downturn in export sales. The United States is the No. 1 grain merchandiser to the Soviets and has sold 20.3 million tons of corn and wheat to the Kremlin this fiscal year.

One observer noted the grain industry has some assurance of sales, thanks to the new U.S.-Soviet grain agreement, which obligates the Soviet Union to buy ten million tons a year of U.S. grain.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - Liberian rebels have taken a number of foreigners hostage, including one American, the State Department said Monday.

Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler described the prisoners taken by rebels led by Prince Johnson as hostages.

She said 14 or 15 foreigners, including one American, were taken by the Johnson forces from the Africa Hotel in downtown Monrovia.

When Johnson threatened to take hostages, the United States started an aerial evacuation of most Americans in Monrovia. According to the State Department, 74 people were taken to ships on Sunday, including 62 U.S. citizens. She said another 20 people were taken to U.S. ships on Monday by Marine helicopters..

An estimated 300 Americans remain in Liberia, unable to reach the embassy in Monrovia, where the evacuation operation is centered.

She did not identify any of the hostages.

She said Monrovia remains relatively quiet, with only sporadic fighting. All major stores remain closed. There is no public water, electricity or phone service. Food shortages are worsening.

The hostages, she said, were taken by the Johnson forces to rebel forces headquarters in the town of Calweld, near Monrovia. She said that none of the hostages had been harmed, to the best of her knowledge.

Prince Johnson is an opponent of the government of Samuel Doe, but he is also opposed to the principal rebel force, led by a former government minister, Charles Taylor.

(AUG. 6) UPI - The U-N Security Council today imposed a global economic and military embargo on Iraq in response to Iraq's invasion of Kuwait. The embargo includes a ban on oil imports from Iraq or Kuwait and on arms sales to the Baghdad regime.

Iraq's U-N ambassador declared before the vote that ''everyone will suffer'' if the council adopted the embargo. The diplomat also denounced the United States for initiating the measure that his government considers- as he puts it- ''null and void.''

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein sent a message to President Bush today saying he will NOT attack Saudi Arabia. Hussein also says he wants normal relations with Washington. But that could be threatened by- among other things- today's roundup of 28 Americans in Kuwait.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - With internationalization of retailing on the increase, unions representing commercial workers in 20 countries met Monday and vowed to join forces in fighting unfair labor practices they said multinational companies engage in.

Their conference, sponsored by the United Food and Commercial Workers International Union and the Geneva-based Federation of Commercial, Clerical, Professional and Technical Employee Unions, is the first to plan coordinated strategies for dealing with international companies.

"Just as our employers hopscotch national borders and oceans, so too must labor's strategies," said UFCW International President William H. Wynn in hisopening adress. Wynn said workers worldwide are threatened by multinationals trying to apply "lowest-common-denominator labor protections."

Using as an example of this a free-trade treaty signed by the United States and Canada, Wynn said that "the U.S. government eyes Canada's superior package of social insurance and sees a threat to free trade." But intead of raising U.S. standards, the Bush administration "is demanding that Canada reduce its benefits to our inferior levels," Wynn continued.

The internationalization of retailing promises greater choice and perhaps lower prices for many of the world's consumers, said Philip Jennings, acting general secretary of FIET. "But this must come from economies of scale and increased efficiency, not lowering workers' standards."

Jennings exhorted the unions to develop a "database giving precise information on companies, their union strength and where we have collective bargaining rights, and more systematic reporting on retailers which abuse union rights."

He also asked for a global campaign to obtain more rights for workers in takeovers and for "corporate campaigns which involve close coordination and involvement of our affiliates."

Working groups will sit down Tuesday to develop strategies for organizating workers and combatting union-busting, aimed at specific multinational companies. The Tuesday meetings will take place behind closed doors.

According to UFCW spokesman Bruce Kozarsky, the targets include Food Lion Inc., a supermarket chain in the southeastern United States owned by the Belgian company Delhaize; the Furrs supermarket chain, based in Albuquerque, N.M., and owned by the German company Leibbrand; and the Swedish retailer Ikea, which is expanding in the United States and Europe.

Attending the conference were union leaders from Argentina, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Britain, Canada, Denmark, France, West Germany, Italy, Japan, Kenya, Malaysia, the Netherlands, Poland, Singapore, South Africa, Sweden, the United States and Zimbabwe.

SAN FRANCISCO (AUG. 6) UPI - The lawyer for U.S. District Judge Robert Aguilar told jurors in the opening day of Aguilar's corruption retrial Monday that ''he never took one dirty nickle.''

Aguilar, 59, began his second - and significantly scaled-down - trial on five counts of conspiring to obstruct justice, lying to the FBI and disclosure of wiretap information.

Aguilar sat impassive behind the defense table as the prosecution accused him of using his office in a failed attempt to influence another judge.

The government abandoned its attempt to convict Aguilar of the more serious charge of racketeering. His original indictment in 1989 made Aguilar the first federal judge in the nation tried on racketeering charges.

His 1989 trial on eight counts ended March 19 with acquittal on one count of obstruction of justice. Jurors deadlocked on the remaining counts, voting heavily for acquittal.

Aguilar is accused of attempting to influence U.S. District Judge Stanley Weigel to overturn the 1980 embezzling conviction of former Teamsters union leader Rudy Tham.

Tham, 66, and Abe Chapman, 84, a distant Aguilar relative and purported 1930s mob assassin, allegedly conspired to persuade Aguilar to help Tham.

Federal prosecutor William Keefer told jurors that Aguilar was ''reluctant more cautious, but was willing to go along'' with the conspiracy.

The object of Tham and Chapman was ''turning Aguilar away from being an honest and fair judge,'' Keefer said.

Paul Meltzer, Aguilar's new lawyer, countered, ''No decision by Judge Aguilar was ever improperly influenced. ... No fix was ever requested. No fix was ever offered. He never took one dirty nickle.''

JOHANNESBURG, SOUTH AFRICA (AUG. 6) UPI - Nearly 1,700 people died in political violence in the first seven months of the year, surpassing the death toll for all of 1989, the South African Institute of Race Relations reported Monday.

The report coincided with an upsurge in fighting Monday in the township of Kasigo, west of Johannesburg, between alleged supporters of the African National Congress and the rival Zulu movement Inkatha.

Six new deaths were reported in the offshoot of a conflict once confined to the Indian Ocean province of Natal, pushing the death toll to 10 since Sunday night. The two sides traded accusations over who was responsible and police said they arrested 57 people.

State-run radio reported 16 others suffered stab wounds in the fighting at a township hostel - the worst Inkatha-ANC clash since 22 people died in the township of Sebokeng south of Johannesburg last month.

The independent race relations institute reported 1,591 people had died in political violence between January and June, with some 75 percent of the fatalities ocurring in Natal, where the ANC-Inkatha conflict exploded in 1987.

Another 92 people died in political violence in July, nearly triple the number of the previous month.

The death toll for 1989 was 1,403, the SAIRR report said, and some 7,130 people have died since since September 1984 when widespread anti-government rioting over the continued exclusion of blacks from national power first erupted.

Of the killings this year, 48 were classified as 'necklace murders,' or the wiring of a burning tire around the victim's neck. The report said most of these killings had occurred in Natal.

The institute said the cause of all the fatalities was difficult to determine.

It reported a ''substantial number of deaths due to police action'' in January, February and March, but said, ''It appeared that the number of such deaths had more than halved in the second three months of the year.

''There had, however, been a very large increase in the number of security forces killed, most such fatalities being municipal policemen,'' the report said.

LOS ANGELES (AUG. 6) UPI - The fourth and final defendant in the Enrique Camarena murder trial was convicted Monday of charges he participated in the murders of two American tourists killed after being mistaken for U.S. drug agents.

Javier Vasquez Velasco, 38, who served as a bodyguard for Mexican drug lords, was convicted on two counts of committing violent crimes to further drug trafficking.

The charges stemmed from Vasquez's role in the fatal beatings of John Walker and Alberto Radelat at a Guadalajara restaurant. The two were killed when they inadvertently walked into a party of drug traffickers at the La Longosta restaurant on Jan. 30, 1985 and were mistaken for Drug Enforcement Administration agents.

At the time, Walker had been living in Guadalajara and was writing a mystery novel. Radelat, his friend, was visiting him.

The slayings occurred a week before Camarena, a DEA agent, was abducted on a Guadalajara street, interrogated, tortured for more than 30 hours and killed by drug traffickers, allegedly in retribution for DEA raids on marijuana plantations.

In seperate convictions by the same jury, three other defendants have been found guilty of conspiracy, kidnapping and other crimes stemming from Camarena's murder. Vasquez was the only defendant charged with the Walker and Radelat slayings.

Most of the evidence against Vasquez was provided by a former Mexican police officer, Enrique Placencia Aguilar, who testified that he saw Vasquez join 10 to 15 drug traffickers in the beatings of the two Americans.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - The Federal Reserve Board said Monday it granted permission to NCNB Corp., the nation's third-largest bank, to offer securities brokerage services through subsidiary NCNB Capital Markets Inc.

NCNB, based in Charlotte, N.C., has $69.4 billion in assets, operates ten subsidiary banks and already underwrites and deals in municipal revenue bonds, mortgage-backed securities and commercial paper.

The company is registered as a broker-dealer under federal and state securities laws and is a member of the National Association of Securities Dealers, the Fed said.

In addition to selling stocks and bonds, the subsidiary will provide investment advisory services and participate in the private placement or sale of an entire issue of stock to a small group of investors.

"The board expects that the ... entry of NCNB into the market for these services would increase the level of competition among providers of these services," the Fed said.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - The sequestered jury in the cocaine and perjury trial of Mayor Marion Barry, beginning their eighth week apart from their families, spent a fourth day in deliberations Monday without reaching a verdict

The jury was in the deliberation room for nearly eight hours Monday, starting earlier than expected at 9:15 a.m. and sending out for lunch while working to reach a verdict on all 14 counts.

The jury, which received the case late Thursday and deliberated 6 1/2 hours Friday, also met for four hours Saturday in a rare weekend session, asking for and receiving more than 100 documents from testimony during the trial.

It was not known if the jury deliberated the entire time it was behind closed doors Monday.

Defense attorney R. Kenneth Mundy said he did not expect the jury to return with a verdict before Wednesday, adding that, by then, ''They will have had a chance to go over all the counts and the evidence.''

The panel of 10 blacks and two whites, which has been sequestered since June 18, is considering Barry's guilt or innocence on three felony counts of perjury, 10 misdemeanor counts of cocaine possession and a single misdemeanor count of conspiracy to possess cocaine.

If convicted of all counts, Barry could be sentenced to a maximum of 26 years in prison and fined $1.85 million.

Ten prosecution witnesses took the stand during 6 1/2 weeks of testimony to say that Barry used cocaine or obtained the drug dating back to 1983.

The government also showed a videotape of Barry taking two long puffs from a crack pipe during the Jan. 18 FBI sting operation during which he was arrested.

Mundy acknowledged during his closing arguments that Barry had been an ''occasional'' cocaine user, but argued prosecutors never proved Barry used the drug at most of the times alleged in the indictment.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - Some 2,100 Marines aboard the assault ship USS Inchon and four other amphibious warships left port Monday to beef up U.S. forces in the Middle East where Iraqi troops were poised on Saudi Arabia's border.

The naval movements came as Defense Secretary Dick Cheney flew to Saudi Arabia to reassure King Fahd of U.S. support and to try to persuade him to allow U.S. forces to use his desert military bases for staging points.

The five-ship amphibious force that left port Monday is to be joined in the Atlantic Tuesday by the aircraft carrier USS Saratoga and a 10-ship battle group that includes the battleship USS Wisconsin, two guided-missile cruisers and three destroyers.

The United States currently has a total of 34 warships in the Middle East and Persian Gulf region. With the expected arrival of the Saratoga and amphibious group in about 10 days, the United States will have 49 warships in the area.

With the new addition, the United States will have three aircraft carriers in the Middle East - the Saratoga and the USS Eisenhower in the Mediterranean and the USS Independence in the northern Arabian Sea, outside the Persian Gulf.

Each aircraft carrier is capable of launching up to 80 fighter and attack jets that could be used for tactical air strikes on Iraqi invasion troops - one of the military options that Bush is considering.

Other options, according to a senior defense official, include launching U.S. bombers, perhaps from Incirlik Air Base in Turkey, against the Iraqi capital of Baghdad and Iraqi oil fields, or to conduct a naval blockade of Iraqi oil exports in the Persian Gulf.

The Pentagon declined comment on news reports that U.S. F-111 fighter-bombers were transferred Monday from bases in Britain to Incirlik in Turkey.

The United States has eight warships, led by the command ship USS LaSalle, patrolling inside the Persian Gulf.

The Pentagon said officially that the Saratoga was being sent to replace the Eisenhower, which has been deployed for the standard six-month tour, but no one expects the Eisenhower to be withdrawn in the midst of the crisis.

The five-ship Mediterranean Amphibious Ready Group left Norfolk, Va., Monday, carrying the 26th Marine Expeditionary Unit of Camp LeJeune, N.C. It is led by the USS Inchon, an Iwo Jima-class amphibious assault ship that carries about 2,100 combat Marines, 31 helicopters and landing craft.

At the White House, spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said President Bush talked to Cheney before the defense secretary headed into his first meeting Monday with Fahd.

''Quite obviously we are discussing the possible threat by Iraqi forces directly to that country,'' Fitzwater said.

''The Iraq forces are consolidating their strongholds in Kuwait. They are close to the Saudi Arabian border and ... we are very concerned about that and believe there is a threat there that we need to discuss directly with the Saudis.

''Again,'' Fitzwater said, ''I don't want to confirm details but it's quite clear that that would involve appropriate ways to defend their country.''

A senior Pentagon official familiar with U.S. intelligence reports said Iraq is not withdrawing its 100,000 invasion troops from Kuwait, despite claims to the contrary by Baghdad.

''Nothing is moving back to Iraq,'' the official said.

Between 25,000 and 30,000 Iraqi troops were massed on the Saudi Arabian border, the U.S. official said, and the Saudis - which have a total of about 67,000 men in uniform - had moved some troops and tanks north, but not in numbers that would threaten the Iraqis.

''It's a standoff at this point,'' he said.

SAN ANTONIO (AUG. 6) UPI - Tesoro Petroleum Corp. Monday reported fiscal third quarter earnings of $8 million, or 40 cents a share, compared with a loss of $9.3 million in the same period of last year.

Last year's loss included a $4.8 million write-off of the company's investment in exploration activities in France. Revenues in the third quarter ended June 30 totaled $237.4 million, up from $223..6 million last year.

The latest quarter's earnings was due largely to higher gross margins on refined products and to operating results from the company's operations in Bolivia.

In the nine months of this year, Tesoro earned $15.7 million, or 62 cents a share, compared with a net loss of $16.5 million in the same period of last year. Revenues for the nine months totaled $692.4 million, compared with $549 million last year.

CHICAGO (AUG. 6) UPI - The future of U.S.-Soviet economic relations will depend on the Kremlin's commitment to establishing rule of law and ensuring free emigration for Soviet Jews, Attorney General Richard Thornburgh said Monday.

"One of these Soviets' principles and reasons for their great interest in the rule of law is their immediate and pressing need to jump-start their participation in the world economy by attracting foreign know-how and investment," Thornburgh told the American Bar Association.

But he said the Soviets must show they are truly committed to the rule of law in general, and specifically to a law-based right of emigration for Soviet Jews, before the United States will grant them most-favored-nation trade status.

"So-called new thinkers in the Soviet Union have now embarked on what appears to be a truly idealistic and laudable attempt to establish the rule of law, or, in President Gorbachev's word, 'law-based state,'" Thornburgh said. "So often you hear it optimistically said, 'Remember that Mikhail Gorbachev was trained as a lawyer'; yes, but so was Lenin," Thornburgh said.

"But the Soviets recognize that, to attract investments and commercial developments, they must establish the kind of predictability and stability that can only emerge from a body of commercial law, which, in turn, respects the sanctity of contracts and, yes, recognizes property rights as well."

"Fear of abrogation of contract rights or expropriation of investments, they recognize, could well stump otherwise attractive commercial and industrial initiatives," Thornburgh added. He noted the Supreme Soviet, the Soviet Union's legislative body, is currently drafting property-rights legislation.

Thornburgh also noted that the Soviet's "adept legal accommodation" is evident in their liberalization of emigration policies. "We are convinced they are now doing their legal utmost to facilitate the issuance of emigration visas - and a new exodus follows upon a rise of anti-semitism in Russia. But here, again, their interest is not wholly altruistic," Thornburgh said.

He said the Soviets hope to meet the requirements of the Jackson-Varnik legislation in which Congress made free emigration a requirement for extension of most-favored-nation trade status.

"Still," Thornburgh said, "we must must be convinced - as in so much else undertaken in the name of Soviet legal reform - that not just the letter but the spirit of the law has taken root in the Soviet Union.

"That is the essence of the agreement reached between Presidents Bush and Gorbachev during the recent summit: that any trade agreement remains contingent upon legislative action by the Supreme Soviet in support of free emigration," he said.

"We are, in short, watching to see that opportunities to emigrate are institutionalized in law and practice and not just episodic in the present flux of Soviet democratization," Thurnburgh said.

A large ABA delegation will travel to Moscow next month for a "legal summit" - following in the footsteps of Thornburgh, who visited the Soviet Union last fall for wide-ranging discussions on Soviet legal reform.

"Happily, the very things the Russians found most curious about our democracy let us discuss those practices in our law that really make our democratic process work," he said.

He said the Soviets were particularly interested in the federal system - how the United States remains united despite differences among federal and state governments.

"Obviously, there are worrying about the unrest among their own republics. ... They are looking to us for ways, if you will, to deal with their own diversity," Thornburgh said.

He said the Soviets seem very confused about the U.S. constitutional principle of separation of powers. "But more than confusion over concepts characterizes the concern of Soviet legal thinkers," he said. "For example the most dire emergency they face - besides national unrest - is the state of their economy. To survive economically, they must enter the free-world marketplace."

(AUG. 6) UPI - Iraqi President Saddam Hussein told President Bush Monday he will not attack Saudi Arabia and wants ''normal relations'' with Washington, but he appeared to raise the stakes of war by rounding up 28 Americans and hundreds of other foreigners in occupied Kuwait.

Despite Saddam's assurances, Saudi and U.S. military officials braced for a possible Iraqi attack on the oil rich kingdom and the United Nations imposed harsh economic sanctions aimed at pressuring Saddam to withdraw his troops from Kuwait.

Baghdad Radio, monitored in Beirut, also reported that Saddam issued a veiled warning to Bush, telling the U.S. charge d'affaires in Baghdad that ''Iraq is capable of protecting its rights and interests whatever the pressures ... and that the country's readiness to sacrifice for that cause is unlimited.''

In developments Monday in the explosive crisis, which began Thursday when Iraq sezied Kuwait:

- Defense Secretary Dick Cheney arrived in Riyadh, reportedly to discuss strategies for sending U.S. troops into Saudi Arabia should Iraqi troops massed at the Kuwaiti-Saudi border launch an attack.

- Stock prices around the world plummeted and gas prices rose in reaction to reports the world will shun oil from Iraq and Kuwait, which provide an estimated 10 percent of the crude on the market.

- The U.N. Security Council directed all 159 member states of the United Nations to impose a worldwide economic and military embargo on Iraq in one of the stiffest penalties ever meted out by the international agency. Bush praised the action and vowed they would be enforced.

- Officials in Bonn, Washington and London said Iraqi troops ordered approximately 400 foreigners, including 28 Americans, out of Kuwait city hotels and took them in buses toward Baghdad. Eleven other American oil workers are already being detained in Iraq.

- Saudia Arabia reportedly fully mobilized its army and massed troops in a neutral zone of oil fields along the country's border with occupied Kuwait.

- In response, Iraq ordered drills to evacuate 4 million residents from Baghdad in the event of an air attack and issued rifles to government supporters.

- The Pentagon announced in Washington further U.S. naval vessels would leave port Monday and Tuesday to strengthen forces in the vicinity of the crisis zone.

- Hundreds of Jordanians flocked to the Iraqi Embassy in Amman to get visas so they could travel to Iraq and fight on the side of Baghdad.

- Turkey announced that, in a surprise move, Iraq had shut off the flow of oil along a pipeline that runs across Turkey to the Mediterranean and reduced the flow in another pipeline to 70 percent.

Iraq invaded its oil-rich neighbor Thursday, accusing it of overproducing oil and driving down prices. International observers have said Saddam seized Kuwait in hopes of infusing Iraq's troubled economy with its riches and in an effort to appease his military supporters.

But Bush pushed for a worldwide freeze on Kuwaiti assests and other economic sanctions that have left Saddam empty handed. And while no one appeared ready to go to war over Kuwait, moves by Washington and other countries Monday indicated Iraq would face more than the Saudi army should it send its troops across Kuwait's border.

RIO DE JANEIRO, BRAZIL (AUG. 6) UPI - Foreign Minister Francisco Rezek defended Brazilian arm sales to Iraq Monday, but said it would review future sales following the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Rezek said the "Brazilian arms are purely defensive and we are disappointed to see them used in offensive military actions." Brazil in recent years has sold Iraq $100 million in missiles, armored personnel carriers and missile launching trucks. In the face of the current Middle East crisis, Rezek said the Brazilian government "will have to review its criteria and rethink arm sales to Iraq."

The Brazilian foreign minister also said his country does not recognize the provisional government of Col. Al-Huss Ein Ali installed by the Iraqi government in Kuwait. Rezek said Brazil does not plan to adopt any repraisals against Iraq.

Iraq is Brazil's chief supplier of petroleum, exporting an estimated 140,000 barrels of oil daily, appoximately 30 percent of Brazil's total imported crude.

(AUG. 6) UPI - U-N member nations are under orders to obey an economic and military embargo on Iraq because of its invasion of Kuwait. The U-N Security Council voted 13-0, with two abstentions, to impose the embargo pushed by the United States. Kuwait's ambassador thanked the council for the action. But Iraq's U-N envoy said everyone will suffer from the action which his government considers- quote- ''null and void.''

A U-S State Department spokeswoman says it would be premature to describe as hostages 28 Americans who were taken from their hotels in Kuwait today. The Americans and several other westerners were rounded up by Iraqi forces and driven away on buses. But the spokeswoman says the situation is- in her words- ''a very serious matter.'' U-S officials in Washington called in the Iraqi ambassador to discuss this latest development in the Middle East.

BOGOTA, COLOMBIA (AUG. 6) UPI - Cesar Gaviria, a 43-year-old economist, takes office Tuesday as the new president of violence-torn Colombia amid massive security measures against possible attacks by a warring cocaine cartel.

Soldiers were stationed on nearly every block along key routes in the capital to protect Latin American and foreign delegations arriving for the ceremony. Vice President Dan Quayle was to represent the United States.

Helicopters patrolled from the air, while police set up roadblocks and were searching vehicles for arms and explosives for possible use in attacks by a warring cocaine cartel or communist guerrillas.

Soldiers and police occupied buildings surrounding the inauguration site in the center of the city, where traffic was suspended. Hospitals and ambulances were put on alert.

Gaviria will take the oath of office in an open air ceremony between congress and the presidential palace. The new president, his family, outgoing President Virgilio Barco and other top officials will participate from behind a facade of bulletproof glass on a specially built platform.

Gaviria's Cabinet was revealed Monday, including a former guerrilla who was named health minister. Gaviria would name a Cabinet that includes five members of other political parties, aides said. The president-elect had pledged to head a government that included representatives from the major political forces.

Antonio Navarro, a former guerrilla leader who now leads a leftist political party, confirmed to reporters he had accepted the health ministry post. Navarro once was jailed for guerrilla activities and was seriously wounded in an attack before his M-19 group gave up its arms earlier this year and formed a politial party.

The security measures came despite a peace declaration July 27 by the warring Medellin Cartel. The cartel, blamed for dozens of bombings and hundreds of murders since it declared war on the nation last year, said it would not carry out further attacks.

But the communique signed by the cartel hit squad The Extraditables also appeared to warn that it expects an end to extradition of trafficking suspects to the United States.

During the presidential campaign, Gaviria took the toughest stand against the cocaine cartels, promising to improve on Barco's hard-line policies. He said he viewed extradition as one of the tools in the fight against the cartels.

But a diplomat said it appeared Gaviria may not be willing to extradite mid-level trafficking suspects, reserving the measure for top cartel figures.

Extradition touches a sensitive nationalistic nerve in Colombia, where any perceived involvement by the United States in internal matters brings instant outcries of protest.

One of Gaviria's top priorities will be to rebuild the nation's justice system. The court system is virtually paralyzed and judges are routinely assassinated if they make decisions against cocaine traffickers.

Hundreds of people have been killed since the Medellin Cartel declared war on the nation in August 1989. The war came after Barco instituted a state of siege following a string of assassinations and launched an all-out offensive against the cocaine traffickers.

MOSCOW (AUG. 6) UPI - The Soviet government has adopted denationalization guidelines that would encourage the sale of small businesses to private owners but keep large companies and utilities under state control, the Interfax news service said Monday.

Moscow created the recommendations to help Soviet republic and city governments sell off some state-owned enterprises, the independent news agency said.

The guidelines urge local governments to set up ''special denationalization commissions'' of officials, economists, sociologists and attorneys to smooth the way for economic diversification.

In the Marxist terms that have governed the Soviet Union for seven decades the regulations envision the emergence of a ''petit bourgeoisie'' of small shopkeepers - but not a nation of big-time capitalists.

As the Kremlin took another faltering step toward a market economy, Russian Federation President Boris Yeltsin met with a group of advisers drafting a radical reform package.

The radical Yeltsin, offering his latest innovative initiative, also announced an official contest with the equivalent of $8,500 in prize money for the person who writes the best new treaty to govern ties between the Russian government and smaller jurisdictions within the huge territory.

Vladimir Shcherbakov, chairman of the State Committee for Labor and Social Issues, told reporters that the central government is gearing up for the possibility of ''mass unemployment and high rates of inflation'' during a turbulent transition to free enterprise.

''Denationalization - that is, the leasing or selling of property to individuals or cooperatives - will concern shops, restaurants, canteens, cafes, hair-styling salons, bathhouses, repair shops, trucking companies and small-industry operations,'' Interfax said of the new government standards.

''As far as larger public amenities equipped with expensive, sophisticated machines, such as hotels, are concerned, they should remain under state control,'' it said.

The Soviet Parliament earlier this year adopted a law permitting a limited range of commercial holdings to be sold or leased, but the legislature put off until its fall session action on a more sweeping measure.

Under the guidelines adopted by Moscow, power plants, water pipes, natural gas mains and other utility facilities ''meeting basic social needs'' are to remain in the public domain.

Small businesses that are not sold or leased ''may be reformed into shareholding companies,'' with capital stock divided through open subscription or distribution via charter funds, the recommendations say.

Yeltsin led a session of the working group he and Soviet President Mikhail

Gorbachev agreed to form last week to develop a comprehensive economic program for the country.

Gorbachev invited Yeltsin, his one-time protege and emerging rival for power, to join forces after Yeltsin unveiled a radical 500-day plan to privatize property and free prices in the Russian republic that makes up three-quarters of the Soviet Union.

The joint working group of the Soviet and Russian governments is using Yeltsin's plan as a blueprint for a program to present to Soviet Parliament early next month when it opens its fall session.

Shcherbakov, head of the state labor committee, said the Soviet government is divided bewteen supporters of Yeltsin's strategy and a less radical plan of Soviet Premier Nikolai Ryzhkov, which calls for a slower transition to a market economy.

NEW YORK (AUG. 6) UPI - Deep fears of a long-lasting impasse or a full-scale war in the Middle East are propelling petroleum prices to new heights, with a barrel of oil likely to trade in the $30 range this week, analysts said.

That would be nearly 50 percent above the price levels that existed before last week's Iraqi invasion of Kuwait.

Experts unanimously agreed that substantially higher oil prices would have a serious to devastating effect on the economy of industrialized countries expecially the United States, whose growth rate is already so sluggish as to indicate a possible recession.

''Every time the barrel of crude oil goes up by $1, the gallon of gasoline in the United States goes up by 2 cents,'' said Joseph Tovey, who heads Tovey & Co. Investment Bankers. ''Each time the barrel goes up by $2.50, the U.S. inflation rate goes up by 1 to 1.5 percent.''

''The whole market is still driven by the Middle East situation,'' said oil industry analyst James Fiedler, with E.D.&F. Man International Futures Inc. ''A price of $30 a barrel this week certainly is a possibility. The only people who are selling today are profit takers selling against a cash position, because everyone feels the market will keep moving up and prices will keep going up.''

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, crude oil futures for September delivery soared throughout the day and were quoted at mid-afternnon at $27.67 a barrel, up $3.16. The September contracts, which gained $4.45 last week, now are approaching $8 above their level at the opening Monday last week - a 40 percent gain in six sessions.

Oil and Middle East experts agreed that oil markets around the world will not regain any composure until the potentially explosive situation created by Iraq's invasion of Kuwait is resolved, one way or the other.

''Since there is no sign that the Iraqis are pulling out of Kuwait, the whole issue hinges on Saudi Arabia and the United States,'' said David Mizrahi, editor of the authoritative Mideast Report.

''Saudi Arabia would be willing to open its bases to the United States provided that the United States really means business,'' Mizrahi added. ''Otherwise, you can imagine what Saudi Arabia would look like in the Arab world. You can imagine what would happen to (Saudi) King Fahd.''

Mizrahi said that either a U.S. military intervention in the Middle East or a lack of intervention could result in higher oil prices.

''If the United States does not intervene, (Iraqi President) Saddam Hussein can feel he has a free hand and move to seize the oil facilities in the neutral zone jointly operated by Saudi Arabia and Kuwait,'' he said.

The 'neutral' zone produces about 350,000 barrels a day, which would add to the estimated 4.5 million barrels already under Iraqi control and further shrink oil supplies for the Western countries which declared an embargo on Iraqi and Kuwait oil imports.

''If the United States intervenes, Hussein would find another good reason to move into Saudi Arabia,'' Mizrahi said. ''One scenario or the other spells out higher oil prices.''

Philip Verlerger, president of the Institute for International Economics in Washington, also agreed that prices will go up - possibly into the $40 range, their highest level ever on U.S. markets.

''The world is confronted with an oil shortage representing roughly 8 percent of the free world oil consumption, and with an embargo which is going to work,'' Verleger said. ''In the absence of sales of strategic oil stocks or increased production from Venezuela or other countries, prices will head up to $40 a barrel.''

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - President Bush, moving more U.S. warships and top officials into play, called Monday for the ''full and total implementation'' of sweeping United Nations sanctions against Iraq for its invasion of Kuwait.

Ending a meeting with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, one of several in a day of stepped-up diplomatic manuevering, Bush declared, ''We need to discuss full and total implementation of these sanctions, ruling out nothing at all. These sanctions must be enforced.''

Although Bush refused to offer specifics, the Pentagon said five more amphibious ships began making their way toward the Middle East, with plans to link up with an aircraft carrier and battleship before reaching the Mediterranean.

With the Persian Gulf crisis in its fifth day, Bush, Thatcher and NATO Secretary General Manfred Woerner praised the unanimous decision by the U.N. Security Council to order a total economic and military embargo against President Suddam Hussein's Iraq.

As Iraqi forces in Kuwait seized 28 Americans and a number of other Westerners, Bush also discounted assurances from Saddam that he would not extend his invasion into neighboring Saudi Arabia.

''I have had no such assurances, directly, to me,'' he told reporters at a rainy Rose Garden ceremony with Thatcher.

At the State Department, spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler would not call the Americans ''hostages,'' but she called the situation ''a very serious matter.''

The developments came as tensions continued to mount over the stand-off that began with the massive Iraqi invasion of its tiny, oil-rich neighbor last Thursday.

The five warships that left Norfolk, Va., Monday, will join U.S. forces in the region, currently a total of 34 warships and expected to hit 49 ships in about 10 days. The ships, in both the Mediterranean and the northern Indian Ocean near the gulf, will include the battleship Wisconsin and three aircraft carriers.

The buildup of U.S. military might coincided with intensified diplomatic efforts in the region. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney arrived in Saudi Arabia for talks Monday and and Bush ordered Secretary of State James Baker to fly to Turkey late Wednesday.

Much of Iraq's oil production flows to European markets through pipelines that cross Turkey, a NATO member that is home to several U.S. Air Force bases.

Pentagon and administration officials reported that Iraqi troops remained massed dangerously near the Saudi border, despite earlier assurances from Saddam that the 100,000-strong invasion force would be withdrawn.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater described the situation as ''extremely serious'' because of the ''large and threatening'' force along the border and noted with concern the hike in gasolines costs and threat to U.S. strategic interests in gulf-state oil reserves.

As for what the United States is doing, Fitzwater said, ''Our response is real and moving on all fronts: diplomatic, economic, political and military.''

Working to coordinate the massive international retaliation against Saddam. Bush also met with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney, and kept up a flurry of telephone calls to world leaders.

He also conferred over lunch with House Speaker Thomas Foley, D-Wash.

And while applauding the U.N. Security Council vote, 13-0, to impose a worldwide economic and military embargo on Iraq, he waited on word from Cheney, who was in the Saudi capital of Riyadh to confer with Saudi officials, who, like many others in the area, have appeared reluctant to anger Saddam.

NEW YORK (AUG. 6) UPI - Representatives from Vietnam and the United States held their first meeting Monday on ways to settle the conflict in Cambodia and both sides described their discussions as ''useful.''

Trinh Xuan Lang, Vietnam's ambassador to the United Nations, met with U.S. Deputy Assistant Secretary of State Kenneth Quinn for 3 1/2 hours at the Vietnamese U.N. mission.

''Our meeting was useful,'' Lang told reporters.

Lang said discussions centered on the Cambodian issue, but the question of U.S.-Vietnamese relations did came up briefly in his talks with Quinn.

Lang said the meeting was a ''modest step ... but a good beginning'' for the United States and Vietnam to try to put an end to the 11-year conflict in Cambodia. Vietnamese troops invaded Cambodia in December, 1978, and set up the pro-Hanoi government of Prime Minister Hun Sen.

Hun Sen is opposed on the battlefield as well as in diplomatic arena by a three-party coalition movement headed by exiled Cambodian Prince Norodom Sihanouk, which is mainly armed by China. Sihanouk and the other non-communist faction headed by Son Sann also received non-military help from the United States.

The third party, the Khmer Rouge, the strongest armed faction, was held responsible for the deaths of more than 1 million Cambodians during its three-year reign beginning in 1975.

A spokeswoman for the State Department's East Asia Bureau in Washington, Mary Carlin Yates, said in a statement that the meeting was to initiate a ''formal dialogue'' that would lead toward a comprehensive settlement in Cambodia.

Yates denied the meeting was an attempt to normalize relations with Vietnam, ''except we reiterated our policy on this issue.''

''The United States considers this first meeting useful,'' she said.

The two countries have agreed to meet again at a date and location to be agreed on, Yates said.

The Vietnamese ambassador said Vietnam wanted to immediately establish a Supreme National Council which - under a U.N. plan to bring peace to Cambodia through internationally supervised elections - will rule Cambodia during the transition period.

''We believe that it is the desire of the other side, too,'' Lang said.

Besides the Cambodia issue, the two officials discussed the question of American prisoners-of-war and missing-in-action during the war in Vietnam, Lang said.

American and Vietnamese diplomatic sources said they did not expect the first meeting to make progress in the complex Cambodian situation.

Other Cambodian issues confronting Vietnam and the United States were a moratorium on foreign arms supplies to the warring Cambodian factions, a cease-fire, the establishment of a U.N. interim administration and U.N.-supervised elections.

The talks were held following a change in policy by the United States to withdraw diplomatic support for Sihanouk's resistance movement in the United Nations.

U.S. Secretary of State James Baker, in announcing the change in Paris in July, said the United States wanted Vietnam to help convince the Phnom Penh regime to accept the U.N. plan for free and fair elections in Cambodia.

Diplomats said the New York talks would lead to the first diplomatic contacts between Washington and Phnom Penh. An American delegation visited Phnom Penh last month to inspect and repatriate remains of some of the 83 American MIAs.

CHICAGO (AUG. 6) UPI - American Bar Association members narrowly approved a resolution Monday to rescind the ABA's abortion rights policy and instead adopt a neutral stance on the politically explosive issue.

The 885-837 non-binding vote came at an ABA Business Assembly hours after Attorney General Richard Thornburgh suggested that the Bush administration might pay less heed to ABA ratings of judicial nominees if the abortion rights policy was maintained.

The ABA Board of Governors previously recommended scrapping the pro-choice position adopted last February by the association's House of Delegates and adopting a neutral position.

The ABA House of Delegates will act on the proposal Wednesday. If it is approved, neutrality on abortion will become ABA policy. If the House of Delegates rejects the proposal, the Business Assembly could reconvene and, with a two-thirds majority vote, could force a referendum by the group's 360,000 members.

Abortion rights advocates pledged Monday to lobby to defeat the neutrality proposal before the House of Delegates.

''We're going to go to the American Bar Association and speak to the delegates and try to convince them to take a pro-choice stand,'' said Norma McCorvey - the Jane Roe of the landmark Roe vs. Wade Supreme Court decision on abortion rights.

McCorvey's lawyer, Gloria Allred, said the neutrality proposal is a ploy by anti-abortion groups to ''neutralize the power and the influence of the ABA.''

''I don't think the ABA should be neutral on an issue of such import, such significance,'' Allred said. ''And, really, to be neutral, I think, is to buy into the anti-choice position, and that's why we're opposed to this so-called position of neutrality.''

Thornburgh said the present pro-abortion rights policy ''creates, in my view, a perception problem for the American Bar Association and I believe they are wisely undertaking reconsideration of that position.''

''I think it would be appropriate for this association to be neutral on every issue that does not fall within the ambit of its area of expertise '' Thornburgh told reporters after addressing the opening assembly of the annual meeting.

''When the ABA, as in my view, extends its inquiry beyond judicial and into political and philosophical issues, its reach exceeds its grasp and its credibility on these issues is not entitled to the same respect that we have given it when it comes to assessing judicial temperament and qualifications of intellectual ability and character and integrity that would recommend someone for the bench,'' he said.

Thornburgh said he has noted growing concern the ABA ''may be moving toward litmus tests for judicial nominees.''

He emphasized, however, that he has seen no evidence of any such tests in his dealings with the ABA Standing Committee on the Judiciary, which provides the administration with ratings of potential nominees for the federal bench.

''Nonetheless,'' he said, ''the credibility of that (committee) work will suffer, in my view, if the American Bar Association chooses to take positions on every hot-button emotional political issue of the day because it will create - in the public's view - the notion that if someone, as a prospective judicial nominee, does not sign on to those views, they may be viewed with disfavor.''

Addressing an ABA awards luncheon later Monday, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., accused Thornburgh and the administration of ''unseemly attempts ... to muzzle the Senate confirmation process'' for Judge David Souter, President Bush's nominee to replace William Brennan on the Supreme Court.

''It is true that Judge Souter has said and written little about the significant legal issues of our time, but that means the Senate must ask more, not less, about his views,'' Kennedy said.

WASHINGTON (AUG. 6) UPI - Senators assailed a savings and loan owner Monday for not telling federal regulators about a fraud charge brought against a company he controlled before he bought 15 failed Texas thrifts in 1988.

"I'm troubled by what seems to be your less-than-forthcoming responses to federal regulators," Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, told Arizona businessman James Fail during a Senate Judiciary subcommittee hearing into Fail's acquistion of the Texas thrifts, which he consolidated under the name

Bluebonnet Savings Bank.

"You never, ever provided a copy of the Alabama indictment" to the government, Hatch said, referring to a 1976 fraud indictment and conviction against an insurance firm Fail controlled. The firm was barred from writing any more insurance in Alabama and fined $5,000. Fail was also indicted individually for securities fraud in Alabama in 1976,but the charge was dropped in a plea bargain.

Sen. Arlen Specter, R-Pa., told Fail that "based on the record ... there was inadequate disclosure" of his background to the government. "You really wonder ... whether the taxpayers are going to come in and bail out this thing (the thifts Fail bought) all over again," he said.

Under tough questioning from Hatch, Specter, and Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, the panel's chairman, Fail acknowledged that forms he submitted to thrift regulators about his background mentioned only his personal indictment but omitted mention of his company's fraud conviction. But he insisted that he never intended to mislead federal authorities.

He said that while the forms he signed and submitted "might be construed as being incomplete," he provided additional documents to the government that detailed both indictments and his business's conviction - a contention senators disputed.

"We made an extraordinary effort to disclose this (to federal regulators) " said Fail, who testified voluntarily. "If I was preparing that document today, I would have included" the omitted facts.

Asked if he had read the completed forms prepared by assistants before he signed them, Fail said "probably not." "I have had a very bad habit in the past that I assure you I won't have in the future of signing a great many things that are put in front of me for signature" without reading them first, such as the documents in question.

A federal regulator testified July 31, at the panel's second hearing into the Fail purchase, that had the government known about Fail's 1976 indictment and his company's fraud conviction, his application to buy the Texas thrifts would have been rejected.

Fail said his purchase and successful management of Bluebonnet were "part of the solution to the savings and loan crisis, not a part of the problem." Metzenbaum said Bluebonnet is profitable only because Fail will receive more than $3 billion in federal subsidies for rescuing the failed thrifts. Fail credited prudent business management.

Fail also defended a complex web of business loans that allowed him to purchase the thrifts, but he repeatedly pleaded ignorance when asked about specific dollar amounts, dates and details of those transactions.

Metzenbaum, who has criticized the deal, told Fail that "it would just appear that somehow this deal was greased to go" despite Fail's indictment and his lack of adequate funds at the time of purchase.

"Mr. Fail, you're an amazing man," Metzenbaum said. "You're able to get money that other people don't seem to be able to get. ... You read documents the way that you want to and forget that you signed them."

Also Monday, Thomas Pennington, former president of several insurance companies owned by Fail who was fired after he became suspicious of Fail's financial dealings, testified that Fail felt his purchase of the failed thrifts was "a no-brainer" that would make a lot of money. "He thought it was a very good deal," Pennington said of Fail. "He thought you'd have to be awfully stupid not to make money" on the purchase.

Washington lobbyist Robert Thompson, hired to Fail to help him acquire the Texas thrifts, was supposed to testify under subpoena Monday, but his appearance was postponed until September.

NEW YORK (AUG. 6) UPI - The Dow industrials plummeted more than 90 points Monday in very heavy trading, posting their worst loss since the October minicrash as the market was rocked by escalating tensions in the Mideast and surging oil prices.

The Dow Jones industrial average, which sank 54.95 Friday, closed down 93.31 to 2716.34, its biggest loss since the October minicrash when the blue chip indicator lost 190 points on Friday the 13th. Monday's loss was 3.3 percent and the seventh-biggest in history after a slide of 95.46 on Oct. 14, 1987. The stock market crash came five days later, sending the Dow down 508 points.

The Dow's plunge triggered the NYSE "circuit-breakers" designed to cushion market declines, among them a new one that went into effect Tuesday. It requires traders to refrain from using program selling so that the market does not destabilize when the Dow falls 50 points or more.

While oil companies, which naturally profit from higher oil prices, were the lone bright spot in the market, airline and trucking issues took it on the chin. These companies, major users of oil for fuel, sent the Dow transporation average down more than 5.5 percent. It finished down 58.76 to 980.29. UAL, the parent company of United Airlines, dropped 12 1/2 to 110.

The broad market made an equally dismal showing. Only 259 issues gained in price and 1,529 declined - the most since the October minicrash, when 1,600 issues lost ground. A total of 2,034 issues traded.

Among broad market gauges, the New York Stock Exchange composite index sank 5.50 to 183.32. The price of an average share plunged 97 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index slid 10.43 to 334.43. Volume amounted to about 240,400,000 shares, down from the 292,363,500 traded Friday.

Panic selling took hold of the market from the opening. At 10 a.m., the Dow was down about 70 points and after 45 minutes of trading it showed a loss of 104 points. It then started to bounce back slightly but slid again into the close.

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein told President Bush Monday he will not attack Saudi Arabia and wants "normal relations" with Washington, but he appeared to raise the stakes of war by rounding up 28 Americans and hundreds of other foreigners in occupied Kuwait.

Despite Saddam's assurances, Saudi and U.S. military officials braced for a possible Iraqi attack on the oil-rich kingdom and the United Nations imposed harsh economic sanctions aimed at pressuring Saddam to withdraw his troops from Kuwait.

"What's happening is I think there was just a lot of disappointment that there's been no development to indicate that the Iraqis are giving ground of any kind," said Alan Ackerman, senior vice president at Gruntal & Co.

"There's been a vacuum created by the lack of a policeman of the Persian Gulf and the question is who will do it and how quickly it will be implemented," he said.

"In the absence of an immediate resolution the market has sold off and investors are running to the sidelines. Tensions are still running high and oil prices are at inflationary and uncomfortable levels."

Ackerman said the Dow could very well fall to 2680 and, if it does, may well drop another 150 points. "If that happens we could see an inundation of selling. We'll have to wait and see how events unfold."

Even if the Federal Reserve cuts interest rates to forestall any recession that might be brought on by higher oil prices, Ackerman said, "it won't give us anything more than a reflex rally. The only sector that's been tenacious is energy and oil service stocks." And as if all that wasn't enough, Ackerman said what happened on Wall Street Monday "may influence Tokyo tonight."

On the trading floor, Philip Morris was the most active issue, down 2 1/2 to 44. Exxon followed, up 1 1/8 to 54 1/4. Wal-Mart Stores was third, off 1 3/4 to 28 5/8.

Waste Management was also active, plunging 3 1/8 to 36 3/8. The company said a story which appeared in Barron's over the weekend calling into question some of its accounting principles was irresponsible.

Among the other active blue chips, AT&T sank 1 5/8 to 34 3/8, IBM tumbled three to 103 7/8, General Electric plummeted 3 3/4 to 66, and Boeing slid 3 1/2 to 50 1/2.

Volume of NYSE-listed issues, including trades in stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 273,264,110 shares, compared with 345,201,990 shares traded in the previous session.

Prices plunged in very heavy trading on the American Stock Exchange. The Amex Market Value index fell 6.36 to close at 340.27. Declines led advances 574-133 among the 871 issues traded. The price of an average share fell 21 cents. Composite volume totaled 26,885,000 shares, vs. 32,553,235 shares traded Friday. Amdhal led the Amex issues, off 5/8 to 11 3/4.

The National Association of Securities Dealers composite index fell 17.42 to 400.04, topping its 14.90-point loss of Oct. 13.

(AUG. 6) UPI - The United States has won its battle for a world-wide economic and military embargo of Iraq by U-N countries. The U-N Security Council today imposed the embargo on Iraq as punishment for invading Kuwait and setting up a proxy government in the tiny emirate. 13 of the 15 council members voted for the embargo... with Cuba and Yemen abstaining.

Senate Republican leader Robert Dole of Kansas wants the Justice Department to look into allegations of gasoline ''price-gouging'' by U-S oil companies as a result of the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait. Dole asked the department to launch an anti-trust probe to determine if oil refiners, wholesalers and retailers are illegally colluding to boost prices. One lawmaker says the hikes cost Americans as mucha s 42-Million dollars extra a day.

The U-S State Department says an American is among the foreigners taken hostage today by rebels in Liberia. Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler says rebels led by Prince Johnson took 14 to 15 people from the Africa Hotel in downtown Monrovia. A Johnson threat to take hostages prompted the United States to evacuate most Americans from the capital of the west African nation yesterday.

Pakistan's Prime Minister Benazir Bhutto was removed from office today by President Ghulam Ishaq Khan, who accused her goverment of nepotism and corruption. The president called new elections for October and swore in the leader of the opposition to head a caretaker government. Bhutto says she it's unfortunate the country is now under the rule of a NON-elected government.

(AUG. 6) UPI - Attorney General Thornburgh has issued a harsh warning to lawyers attending the American Bar Association convention in Chicago. He told them the Bush administration might pay less heed to A-B-A ratings of judicial nominees if the association fails to scrap its pro-abortion rights policy. The A-B-A's House of Delegates voted today to take a netural stance toward abortion.

Eastern Airlines and eight of its employees pleaded innocent today to criminal charges involving an alleged cover-up to keep the strapped carrier flying on schedule. A 60-count criminal indictment accuses Eastern and the workers of falsifying records to hide the fact that maintenance was NOT performed on the jets at three major airports. If convicted, Eastern could be fined 30-Million dollars.

There's fresh hope for the release of hundreds of political prisoners in South Africa. Leaders of the African National Congress and the minority white government today held crucial talks aimed at securing the freedom of some 15-hundred detainees. Delegates led by black nationalist Nelson Mandela and President Frederick DeKlerk also are working toward a suspension of the 30-year A-N-C guerrilla war against apartheid.

State health officials say they're concerned that an outbreak of salmonella poisoning in four Midwestern states may be linked to the consumption of raw tomatoes. Tensions are still running high and oil prices are at inflationary and uncomfortable levels.''

Ackerman said the Dow could very well fall to 2680 and, if it does, may well drop another 150 points. ''If that happens we could see an inundation of selling. We'll have to wait and see how events unfold.''

Even if the Federal Reserve cuts interest rates to forestall any recession that might be brought on by higher oil prices, Ackerman said, ''it won't give us anything more than a reflex rally. The only sector that's been tenacious is energy and oil service stocks.''

And as if all that wasn't enough, Ackerman said what happened on Wall Street Monday ''may influence Tokyo tonight.''

On the trading floor, Philip Morris was the most active issue, down 2 1/2 to 44. Exxon was second, up 1 1/8 to 54 1/4. Wal-Mart Stores was third, down 1 3/4 to 28 5/8.

NEW YORK (AUG. 6) UPI - The U.S. Treasury bond market took a major hit Monday as oil inflation fears and misgivings about the week's exceptionally heavy quarterly refunding operation drove long bond prices down as yields shot up.

''The bond market has just absolutely been crushed,'' said F. Ward McCarthy, a managing director of Stone & McCarthy Research Associates Inc. a financial consulting firm based in Princeton, N.J.

''I haven't seen anything this dramatic in quite some time,'' said Continental Bank bond trader Steve Bracken, in Chicago. ''There's a lot of nervousness and tension'' in the market over current events.

Bids for the benchmark 30-year bond, the 8 3/4 of 2020, declined to 99 13/32, a 2 20/32 drop from Friday's closing price of 102 03/32. The long bond's yield soared nearly 1/4 point, to 8.76 percent from 8.55 percent last week.

The decline of the long bond price corresponded to a loss of $26.25 for every $1,000 bond face value. A $10 loss is considered heavy.

McCarthy said investors were responding to inflationary implications of large increases in oil prices seen since Iraqi forces seized neighboring Kuwait last week, and on possible further hikes if the crisis deepens.

There were concerns about a bond glut given the Treasury's schedule this week to auction $32.25 billion in multi-year bonds and notes. The eleventh-hour passage by Congress of legislation raising the U.S. debt ceiling also cut into the time dealers had for pre-auction order-taking.

The sell-off also reflected market disappointment that the Federal Reserve did not lower short-term rates as the week opened. Players had hoped the Fed would ease credit to offset the impact of higher oil prices.

McCarthy said the ''absolutely dramatic sell-off in bonds'' reversed the market gains of recent weeks. ''As recently as Friday, July 13, the yield was an 8.45 (percent),'' he said. It now may be headed for 9 percent.

The analyst noted that rising yields on the 30-year bond can translate into higher home mortgage rates, with negative effects on the rate-sensitive real estate and conststruction sectors, already hurting.

''We all should be a little bit concerned now,'' he said, referring not only to shaky financial markets but to the wider impact of oil prices which Monday had risen to $28 from around $20 before Iraq invaded Kuwait.

McCarthy pointed to the dilemma of the Fed, which must attempt to maintain a modicum of economic growth without freeing the inflation genie. The unexpected surge in oil prices has dealt policymakers a tough hand.

If Fed officials were to raise short-term interest rates to counter inflation stemming from higher oil prices, he said ''there's no question they'd drive the country into a recession that could be long and deep.''

But if they ease to counter pricy oil's economic damping effect, ''They'll be criticized for throwing in the towel'' on inflation.

''The Fed doesn't have many options, and the few options it has, none of them are very appealing,'' said McCarthy, who predicted that the Fed will pursue its easing path very cautiously.

PRETORIA, South Africa (AUG. 6) UPI - The African National Congress announced Tuesday the immediate suspension of its nearly 30-year guerrilla war against minority white rule, after striking a deal with the government on the release of political prisoners.

The announcement was made in a joint communique issued after nearly 15 hours of talks Monday between an ANC delegation led by Nelson Mandela and a government team headed by reformist President Frederik de Klerk.

The two men appeared at a news conference shortly before 1 a.m. Tuesday to announce the historic agreements.

''There will be no infiltration of men and arms into South Africa and any related activity to military action will be suspended,'' the 72-year-old Mandela said. ''Of course we hope we will be able to communicate with our people and inform them of what we have decided.''

The announcements broke a deadlock in the negotiations, lay the groundwork for the repatriation of an estimated 20,000 political exiles and opened a new phase for talks on how to conduct full-blown power-sharing negotiations.

''We think what has happened today forms an important turning point which in all probability will result in a much more peaceful situation in South Africa,'' de Klerk said. ''We're not dealing with fixing the price of a house. We're dealing with the future of the country.''

The nation's two most powerful men appeared tired when they addressed the televised news conference but both had entered the conference room smiling broadly.

Mandela described the suspension of the ANC's armed struggle, formally waged since December 1961, as a ''significant concession'' in the negotiations to end South Africa's protracted racial conflict.

The limited guerrilla war was launched after the government in 1960 outlawed the ANC and forced it into exile.

As the talks opened Monday, violence flared in a black township west of Johannesburg to underscore the complexities of the country's racial conflict.

Police said at least six people were killed in the township of Kagiso Monday, pushing the death toll to at least 10 since Sunday in fighting at a township hostel between supporters of the ANC and the rival Zulu movement Inkatha.

The clashes were the worst between the warring factions - the battles ostensibly have been waged in the Indian Ocean province of Natal - since 22 died last month in fighting in the township of Sebokeng south of Johannesburg.

The talks began at 9:20 a.m., some 20 minutes behind schedule, at the Presidency, the 85-year-old mansion that once served as the official residence of various governors general under British rule and later of South African presidents. They did not formally adjourn until 12:12 a.m. Tuesday.

It was the second formal session between the government and the ANC since de Klerk lifted a 30-year ban on the anti-apartheid alliance in February. The two sides first met May 2-4 in Cape Town in a ground-breaking session to establish a climate of trust and set an agenda of specific issues for working groups to tackle.

The talks followed several weeks of public exchanges between the two sides over an alleged plot by the ANC's ally, the South African Communist Party, to stage an insurrection if the power-sharing talks fail. Using its sweeping powers under the Internal Security Act, the government detained without charge several senior ANC and SACP leaders, prompting two unscheduled meetings between de Klerk and Mandela.

This issue too was expected to be raised Monday, but both parties appeared to have brushed it aside. De Klerk said, however, that his government remained ''as firmly opposed to communism as ever.'' The latest agreement was ''no declaration to the effect that we've gone soft on communism.''

(AUG. 6) UPI - Iraqi President Saddam Hussein says he wants ''normal relations'' with the United States. Despite his comment, Iraqi forces in Kuwait today rounded up 28 Americans and hundreds of other foreigners in the occupied emirate. Iraqi radio also issued a veiled threat directed at U-S envoys in Baghdad. The report said Iraq is capable of protecting its rights whatever the pressures.

A senior U-S defense official says the United States could respond to the Iraqi invasion of Kuwait with an air attack on Baghdad or Iraqi oil fields. He says U-S bombers could perhaps be launched from Turkey. However the Pentagon declined to comment on news reports that U-S warplanes were transferred today from bases in Britain to one in Turkey. But the United States did send 21-hundred Marines from their home port of Norfolk, Virginia today to the Middle East.

A new study by the National Conference of State Legislatures says 23 states can expect huge tax increases during the next fiscal year. The study found that taxes in those states will jump seven-point-six-BILLION dollars as elected officials deal with education reform, increasing crime and higher health care costs. The report says 85 percent of the tax hikes will occur in six states.

Officials in San Antonio, Texas, say a military trainer jet collided with a civilian small plane this afternoon... but NONE of the four fliers aboard the craft suffered serious injuries. The mishap occurred after the Air Force TK to descend to make a practice instrument approach. The Air Force pilots parachuted to safety while the pilots aboard the small Cessna made a forced landing.

BEND, Ore. (AUG. 6) UPI - Weary, heat-baked firefighters struggled Monday to finish lines around a 3,300-acre wildfire that raged through a central Oregon resort area and destroyed 20 homes.

Thousands of residents were allowed to return home as temperatures climbed toward 100 degrees, hampering efforts to combat the fire, which was about half-contained. Authorities did not expect to contain the whole Awbrey Hall fire until Tuesday and hoped to have it under control by late Thursday.

More than 2,000 homes and an estimated 5,000 residents and visitors were forced to flee during the weekend as the fire raced over 6 square miles in a residential and resort area southwest of Bend, state Department of Forestry spokesman Doug Decker said.

Twenty homes, some worth up to $300,000, burned down in three subdivisions nestled among scenic lodgepole pines in central Oregon's high desert country, about 120 miles southeast of Portland. Authorities had believed 28 homes were lost but determined the other eight were structures such as sheds or barns.

''The folks that owned the destroyed homes were allowed back in with some professional escorts, such as the Red Cross, so they can deal with their loss,'' said Don Ferguson, another state forestry spokesman.

A couple of hours later, other residents were allowed to return home, although roadblocks were posted to keep out sightseers and the general public, Ferguson said.

Capt. Dan Brosnan of the Oregon State Police said many sightseers trying to reach the area resulted in two-mile-long traffic jams on Highway 97.

Oregon officials said the blaze caused at least $5 million in damage. In terms of residential losses, it was the state's most destructive wildfire since 1936, when a blaze roared through Bandon on the southern Oregon coast, killing 11 people and destroying 750 homes and businesses.

Myra Lee, administrator of the state Emergency Management Division, said the fire could be ''sort of a forerunner of problems to come'' in Oregon, as housing subdivisions push farther and farther into forested areas.

''As people continue to build in those areas, these problems are going to increase,'' Lee said. ''I hope we don't get into the kind of thing California has experienced.'' Hundreds of homes in Santa Barbara, Calif., were destroyed by fire earlier this year.

Meanwhile Terry Marsha of the National Weather Service in Salem predicted more lightning strikes - a common cause of forest fires - in much of central Oregon late in the week.

''It's going to be a pretty hairy week,'' he said. ''I'd be awfully surprised if we get out of this week without a major lightning outbreak.''

The number of people evacuated was uncertain because many people stayed with friends or relatives instead of at Red Cross shelters set up at two high schools. Estimates ranged from 3,000 to 5,000.

The cause of the fire was under investigation, but Decker said there was no lightning in the area when the blaze broke Saturday afternoon on a ridge in Shevlin Park, 6 miles southwest of Bend.

The federal government approved Gov. Neil Goldschmidt's request for aid and will cover about 40 percent of the firefighting costs. Phil Cogan, Northwest manager of the Federal Emergency Management Agency, said the fire had cost $646,000 to fight by Sunday.

The Chicago area was racked by more power outages today, after a pair of major power failures in eight days. Commonwealth Edison officials blamed today's minor blackouts on power lines damaged by wildlife. Officials also said that yesterday's day-long black-out on the West Side was caused in part by damage from last week's black-out.

A steady rain soaked much of the nation today. The National Weather Service issued a flash flood warning until tomorrow in portions of Texas, especially around the Trinity River in the northern part of the state. HOUSTON (AUG. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Tejas Gas Corp. Tuesday announced financial results for the six months and three months ended June 30, 1990.

Net earnings for the six months ended June 30, 1990 increased 9 percent to $4,865,000, or 70 cents per share, on revenues of $130,788,000 compared with net earnings of $4,455,000, or 65 cents per share, on revenues of $133,638,000 for the first half of 1989.

Net earnings for the three months ended June 30, 1990 were $1,236,000, or 18 cents per share, on revenues of $57,496,000. Net earnings for the same quarter in 1989 were $1,117,000, or 16 cents per share, on revenues of $61,670,000.

Net earnings for the 1990 periods increased primarily because of decreases in interest expense attributable to substantial reductions in long-term debt during the last twelve months.

Revenue declines were primarily attributable to reduced natural gas processing plant revenues resulting from certain plant dispositions and to reduced off-system natural gas sales, partially offset by increases in natural gas systems sales.

Natural gas systems sales and transportation volumes for the first half of 1990 increased to 556 million cubic feet per day (MMCF/D) from 529 MMCF/D in the first half of the prior year.

Emphasis on lower profit off-system sales was reduced becasue of currently depressed margins resulting from record mild weather and alternate fuel competition; these volumes declined to 83 MMCF/D from 112 MMCF/D. Natural gas processing volumes declined to 67 MMCF/D from 101 MMCF/D as a result of the plant dispositions.

Tejas Gas Corp. is engaged in intrastate natural gas pipeline operations in Texas, Louisiana, Oklahoma and West Virginia. Tejas owns approximately 2,000 miles of pipelines and nine natural gas processing and treating plants. The company's common stock trades in the NASDAQ National Market System under the symbol TEJS.

SAN RAFAEL, CALIF. (AUG. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Westamerica Bank has become the first bank in the country to offer banking by fax.

The innovative, easy-to-use ''Star Fax'' is Westamerica's response to cumbersome, personal computer banking. The service is offered free with the bank's newest product, a business banking package for small to mid-size companies.

''Most businesses, 65 to 75 percent, already have a fax machine. By contrast, only 20 to 30 percent have the costly personal computers and modems required for computer banking. Using the fax machine will be among the most popular ways to bank in the next decade,'' said Patricia Hudson, senior vice president and director of marketing for Westamerica.

Customers can obtain account information and authorize fund transfers by calling an 800 number, 24-hours-a day, 7-days-a-week. The information and transaction confirmations are transmitted to the customer's fax machine within minutes.

Information can be obtained on deposit accounts as well as loans. Balance information can be requested along with transaction details such as checks paid and dates paid, service charges and current loan payoff amount. Specific checks can be identified by number and date. In addition, Westamerica's ''Star Fax'' system can activate stop payments and transfers between accounts.

''Star Fax'' is a feature of the new ''Business Star'' account, one of Westamerica's products targeted to entrepreneurs. The banking package also includes an assigned personal banker for every client, earnings allowance on savings balances, an overdraft line of credit and a host of no-fee services.

To introduce the new product, Westamerica is offering new accounts a one-half-off coupon for a Canon fax machine through September. The promotion follows the bank's successful offer of a cellular telephone for new accounts earlier this year.

Westamerica is a regional community bank with 33 offices in Marin, Sonoma, San Francisco, Contra Costa, Mendocino, Nevada, Sacramento and Solano counties.

DENVER (AUG. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Forest Oil Corp. reported a second quarter 1990 net loss of $3.3 million before redeemable preferred stock dividend requirements, compared to a net loss of $2.2 million for the comparable period of 1989.

The increased loss in the second quarter of 1990, compared to the same period of 1989, resulted primarily from lower prices received for natural gas. Net loss for the first six months of 1990 was $60.7 million before redeemable preferred stock dividend requirements, compared to a net loss of $.5 million in 1989.

The loss for the first six months of 1990 was primarily attributable to a non-cash after-tax charge of $55 million against net earnings in the first quarter principally from a writedown of the value of the company's oil and gas reserves in accordance with SEC regulations.

After making provisions for dividends on the company's redeemable preferred stock, the net loss attributable to common stock for the second quarter of 1990 was $4.7 million, or 43 cents per share, compared to a net loss after redeemble preferred stock requirements of $3.6 million, or 37 cents per share, for the second quarter of 1989.

The net loss attributable to common stock for the first six months of 1990 after making provisions for dividends on the company's redeemable preferred stock, was $63.5 million, or $5.75 per share, compared to a net loss of $3.3 million, or 34 cents a share, for the comparable six months of 1989.

Total revenue for the second quarter of 1990 was $20.7 million, a decrease of 23 percent from the same period of 1989. The decrease was due primarily to lower average sales prices for natural gas.

Year-to-date total revenue for 1990 was $42.8 million as compared to total revenue of $90.7 million reported for the first six months of 1989 which included the one-time effect of $34.1 million settlement related to take-or-pay gas contract dispute.

Expenses incurred during the second quarter and first six months of 1990, other than oil and gas property writedowns and depreciation, depletion and amortization charges, were 17 percent and 21 percent less, respectively, than for the same periods of 1989. General and administrative expense decreased 19 percent for the first six months of 1990 primarily due to non-recurring reorganization costs in 1989.

Interest expense decreased 35 percent and 27 percent in the second quarter and first six months, respectively, due primarily to the repurchase of subordinated debentures and lower interest rates applied to a reduced loan balance.

DENVER (AUG. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - CREDO Petroleum Corp. said Tuesday that it has acquired acreage positions in both the Austin Chalk and Niobrara horizontal drilling plays, and that it intends to actively pursue drilling arrangements for the prospects.

James T. Huffman, president, said that the company and its partners have purchased approximately 6,000 gross acres in the Atascosa County, Texas, portion of the Austin Chalk trend. CREDO's interest in the acreage is 50 percent. The acreage consists of four separate horizontal drilling prospects ranging from 800 to 3200 acres each. The prospects are located in fault grabens where the Chalk formation is expected to be highly fractured.

''Some of the most significant onshore U.S. discoveries in the last decade have been made in the Austin Chalk during the past 18 months, and approximately 10 percent of the drilling rigs working in the onshore U.S. are presently drilling in the play,'' Huffman said.

''We have carefully studied the Austin Chalk play and believe it represents an excellent opportunity for CREDO to be involved in drilling very high potential wells at moderate risks.''

The company and its partners have also acquired a 600-acre horizontal drilling prospect in Routt County, Colo. CREDO's interest in the acreage is 38 percent. The prospect adjoins the Bear River Field which has produced over 1 million barrels of oil from the fractured Niobrara formation.

''The prospect offsets excellent vertical Niobrara production and represents and ideal application for high potential horizontal drilling,'' Huffman said. CREDO is presently negotiating with several companies to drill a horizontal well on the prospect.

SAN DIEGO (AUG. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Molecular Biosystems Inc. (NYSE:MB) Tuesday reported earnings of zero cents per share for the first quarter of fiscal 1991, ended June 30, reflecting a nominal loss of $46,758 for the period, compared with earnings of 20 cents per share, or $1,897,634, for the like period in the prior year.

In the three months ended June 30, total revenues including interest income were $3,032,598, compared with $5,908,933 in the corresponding period in 1989.

''The first-quarter financial results are consistent with our expectations '' said Dr. Kenneth J. Widder, chairman and chief executive officer. ''The major differences between the first quarter this year compared to last year are that last year we received a one-time license fee from Nycomed for rights in India, and we were still recognizing revenues from the achievement of a prior contract milestone.

''Development efforts have also increased this year, which has resulted in an increase in operating expenses of about $650,000, but also in a decrease in the income tax provision of about $1.5 million in the current period,'' he said.

''As we stated a couple of months ago, we expect the earnings picture to continue to be soft through about the second quarter. However, we believe that with the attainment of Albunex-related milestone payments, and the anticipated establishment of new strategic alliances for Syngene later in the year, revenues and earnings should then pick up,'' he said.

Molecular Biosystems Inc., located in San Diego, is a leading biomedical firm developing proprietary medical products that diagnose human disease, including Albunex, an injectable contrast agent for use in ultrasound imaging. In addition, it is a leading developer of direct, non-radioactively labeled genetic probe products.

PEABODY, MA (AUG. 7) BUSINESS WIRE - Warren Bancorp Inc. (NASDAQ:WRNB) Tuesday reported its operating results for the second quarter ended June 30, 1990.

The corporation reported a net loss of $2.7 million, or 77 cents per share for the quarter ended June 30, 1990, compared with net income of $138,000 or 4 cents per share, for the comparable period in 1989. For the six months ended June 30, 1990, the corporation reported a net loss of $3.3 million, or 95 cents per share, compared with net income of $795,000, or 23 cents per share, for the six months ended June 30, 1989.

Stephen F. O'Sullivan, chairman, president and chief executive officer of Warren Bancorp Inc. noted that the 1990 second quarter results reflected the continuation of the same regional economic and real estate market conditions that have impacted the performance of the corporation, and other New England financial institutions during the past year.

These conditions have contributed in general to higher levels of non-performing loans which do not accrue interest, increases in real estate acquired through foreclosure and substantively repossessed (and the administrative expenses associated with acquiring and maintaining these properties) and write-downs of principal on real estate acquired through foreclosure and investments in real estate joint ventures.

''We continue to focus the full resources of the corporation on resolving non-performing asset situations, to restore the asset quality and profitability of the corporation,'' said O'Sullivan. ''I am pleased to note that through our asset management and real estate marketing programs, we continue to make progress in this area during 1990, as evidenced by a reduction in the level of non-performing assets at June 30, 1990 to $35.0 million, from $40.5 million at March 31, 1990, and $42.5 million at December 31, 1989,'' he added.

During the 1990 second quarter, the corporation's subsidiary, Warren Five Cents Savings Bank, received a report of the recently completed regulatory examination. O'Sullivan noted, ''We expect to discuss with the regulators the appropriate steps to be taken in light of the examination findings, including an informal agreement setting forth a series of specific responsive actions to be taken by the bank, among which are an increase in the bank's capital ratio to 8 percent and restrictions on payment of dividends and acceptance of brokered deposits.''
